Holders of defense contracts will be encouraged, the announcement said, to sublet substantial parts of the work, and each will be expected to select his own sub-contractors. Announcing the appointment of Joseph L. and Francis Trecker of Milwaukee as special advisers on "farming out" methods, Robert P. Patterson, undersecretary of war, said the policy would be employed "more and more" as the burden on larger firms increases.

"Bits and Pieces" Policy. The British government first turned to the "farming out" principle, known in England as the "bits and pieces" policy, late in the summer of 1938 when the aircraft industry there was asked to sublet a minimum of 35 per cent of its work on government orders.

The announcement said Germany also has been applying the formula with "even more intensive thoroughness."

This explanation was given of the German system. In connection with its rural electrification program, the German government stimulated the sale of portable electric motors of from 1 to 10 horse power, ostensibly to provide means for the electric utilization of feed grinders, milking machines and other farm appliances. As far back as 1937 sealed crates of machinery were delivered to these electrified farms, the owners of which were told to hold the crates in storage as they contained machinery for making toys or some other similar product.

Brings Up Reserves. When the march into Poland began instructions came to unpack the crates and set up the machinery. The machines turned out to be a drill press or a punch press or a drop forge tool used to produce some small product needed for armament.

Next, supplies of semi-finished materials arrived at the farm and the farmer was taught how to make a rivet for use in airplane assembly, or how to punch rivet holes in a plate for tank armor. A war department spokesman said adoption of the "farming out" principle in this country was important as a means of bringing into use reserves of idle equipment. In addition, he said it was hoped it would have the effect of preventing the migration of workers from their homes to the great industrial centers, thus forestalling serious housing shortages.

RIGHT FERTILIZER APPLICATION METHODS BOOSTS CROP YIELDS

Just as a good cook can make the same raw foods as a poor cook and make it go farther and taste better by using the right methods and proper methods of preparation, so can a careful farmer make the same amount of plantfood in the soil taste better to the plants and bring a higher return in increased yield by proper application.

Side Application Pays

"Although good results are obtained from fertilizer used in customary ways, recent experiments show that better yields can be obtained from the same amount of fertilizer by improved methods of application," says H. E. Shanley, Director of Soil Improvement Work of The National Fertilizer Association.

For example, recommendations made from experiments conducted in Ohio indicate that side application of fertilizer for corn is very effective when properly done. And oftentimes more fertilizer can be used at a profit when it is properly applied. Without fertilizer a poor yield was obtained and half of that was soft corn and bunnies. The plot fertilized with an old-type method of application produced twice as much sound, marketable corn as the unfertilized plot. But when the same amount of fertilizer was applied to two bands with the new-type planter the yield was 6 to 8 bushels more per acre than from the old-type.

MRS. W. C. ROBINSON GETS NEW ALL-ELECTRIC KITCHEN

Radio Electric Service Company delivered Mrs. W. C. Robinson a complete new kitchen to her new remodeled home. Shown above is the Gibson Freezer's Shelf Refrigerator and the Kookall Electric Range as it was about to be delivered to its new home. Mrs. Robinson was very wise to select the GIBSON line.

Mrs. Robinson also bought an Electric Water Heater, making the total cost $529.90 worth of new merchandise installed in her kitchen. Again we say it was a wise idea to select the GIBSON line as it is one of the oldest refrigerator manufacturing companies in the industry.

Mrs. Robinson says the reason for her purchasing the Gibson Line was that they have more conveniences and also the modern cabinets caught her eye. She wishes to invite all her friends in to see her appliances before they buy.

Lure of the River Outrivals Sea's For 4 Brothers

All Are Famous Mississippi Excursion Skippers, as Were Forebears.

ST. LOUIS.—The four Streckfus brothers, who operate steamboats up and down the Mississippi valley, find the lure of the river as strong as the call of the sea ever was for Sinbad.

The Streckfus brothers, Captain John, Captain Joe, Captain Roy and Captain Verne, have been on the river all their lives. For years they and their father before them, have kept their boats plying the great waterway while other passenger traffic has almost vanished.

The brothers are known at every landing place on the Mississippi and Ohio and, true to the traditional easy familiarity of the river, are always called by their first names by crew members. Being retiring disposition, however, they are not so well known ashore.

Owned Many Boats.

"The fascination the river has for us speaks for itself," Captain Roy said. "When a boy my father stowed away on a boat and passed his home in Rock Island, Ill. He bought his first packet, the Freddie, shortly after he was married in 1878. He followed the river 47 years before he died in 1925.

"He owned a number of packet boats which he operated on the upper Mississippi. Later he tried to operate four large packet boats up and down the river from New Orleans to St. Paul and on the Ohio to Pittsburgh.

"When he realized that speed in transportation of freight and passenger was the order of the day," Captain Roy said, "he passed his packet business was dead. He ripped out the staterooms of his boats and converted them all into excursion boats. He had the first such craft on the inland waters. Now we operate excursion boats exclusively.

"We four brothers grew up on the river," he said, "and I don't think any of us ever had the slightest temptation to leave it. My son, J. Verne, followed in the footsteps of the packet business leading to a captain's certificate and he'll undoubtedly stick with the river."

Operate Four Craft.

The brothers at present operate four large craft. In the summer, the Capitol, captained by Roy, runs excursions out of St. Paul, Minn. Captain Verne's boat, the President, operates between Louisiana, Mo., and Red Wing, Minn. The Senator is on the Ohio at Pittsburgh.

Captain John has command of the new streamlined, air-conditioned Admiral, the largest and most modern craft on the river, which operates out of St. Louis. The ship is 365 feet long. It has five decks, three of them enclosed in steel and glass and two of them air-conditioned. It was more than three years in the building.

"Maybe the family atmosphere about the boats has had something to do with keeping us going while other firms have failed," Captain Roy said. "My father developed a clean atmosphere on his boats, lacking in some of the earlier packets when gambling was rampant, by its always having some member of his family aboard.

"It's been our policy," he explained. "To put the money we make back into the business and make it grow. That's our sole idea in acquiring the Admiral. Keeping the river alive, providing jobs for people seems to be appreciated."

"Especially by the black people," he said. "They seem somehow to belong on the river."

Fertilizer Profits Low

A ten-year average profit of the fertilizer industry as reported by the Bureau of Internal Revenue shows a return of only one and five one-hundredths cents on a dollar of sales while 32,000 farmers in a recent survey reported a return of $3.60 in increased yields for each dollar spent on fertilizer.

In the last ten years for which figures are available 1929-1938—total fertilizer profits amounted to one and five-hundredths cents for each dollar of sales, or 94 cents on each ton of $26 fertilizer sold.

Figures just released by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue on corporation income tax returns by industries for 1938 shows returns for 374 fertilizer manufacturers. Of this number 161 or 43 per cent reported deficits. The average return for 1938 was 3.8 per cent. The S.E.C. reports returns of 16 large chemical companies not engaged in fertilizer manufacture showed a return of 20.5 per cent.

Mrs. B. W. Ware has as her guests, Mrs. R. L. Jones and little daughter, Carolyn, of Enterprise, Miss, and Mrs. Ware's mother, Mrs. C. C. Chandler of Opelika.

Gibson Super Freeze'r Shelf Big Aid To Housewives

Local Agency Cites Features That Save Food And Current

The 1941 line of Gibson Electric Refrigerators is backed up by 61 consecutive years of successful refrigerator manufacturing. L. E. Duffey of the Radio Electric Service Co., declared today.

"These years of experience mean something to the prospective purchaser of Gibson. You can't beat experience. Long experience enables a manufacturer to discover and eliminate impractical features, and it also enables him to develop and put into his product the quality and materials that will make it a truly great value. That's why you can depend on Gibson refrigerators."

The 1941 Gibson line of refrigerators discloses a new exterior beauty. In addition, Gibson has also made certain important technical advances such as a new standard of quietness of the mechanism, along with new styling and convenience which has been added to the interior.

"For example, users tell us that the Gibson Freezer's Shelf is a real convenience in the kitchen—they like it with ordinary and unusual space at the top of the refrigerator; they appreciate the elimination of 'pigeon-hole' construction, with which they have to contend in ordinary refrigerators. The Gibson Freezer's Shelf makes it very easy to produce delectable frozen desserts, cold salads and other delicious dainties."

"With a Gibson you get a freezing area, normal area and a moist area to provide the proper places for all the various kinds of foods you buy."

"Users of Gibson refrigerators save cash on electric bills because the cost of operation is extremely low. Many Gibson owners compare bills with the owners of ordinary refrigerators and find that their monthly electric bills are lower. Gibson's copper freezing unit, completely sealed cabinet and Scotch Yoke sealed mechanism all combine to make these low electric costs possible."

Trim sailors and sailorettes greeted the guests who were required to show their "seaworthiness" by walking the plank. A program of games and relays provided the evening's entertainment. Punch was served by the Thorsby Institute.

Miniature sailboats served as tables and place cards at the anchored tables where refreshments were served. Green and white, the Thorsby colors, were used throughout the decorations.

A musical social will be given in the Thorsby Institute Auditorium on Saturday night, May 17, at 7:30 by the Thorsby Institute.

The Thorsby Institute will begin its sixth term examinations on Wednesday morning, May 21. The Thorsby Institute will be presented on Friday night, May 24, the Baccalaureate service will be held on Sunday morning, May 25; and on Monday morning, May 26, at 10:30 a.m. the graduation exercises will be held.

An appropriate climax on Mother's Day, the Junior Christian Endeavor of the Congregational church presented a program in honor of Mothers Sunday evening, May 11, 1941 at 7:00 o'clock under the direction of Mrs. J. B. Gonsky and Mrs. T. E. Campbell.

A special place was reserved for the mothers of the Juniors, that they might sit together and each was presented with a corsage. A special floral tribute was presented to the oldest mother present, Mrs. Marie Peterson, and the youngest, Mrs. Gray. A program of appealing song, scripture, and prayer was concluded with an impressive candle lighting to the memory of the many services of mothers living and dead. Much credit should be given to this group for the presentation of a fine program.

Lawson Stresses Crop Diversification In Address To Clanton Kiwanis Club

Says Benefits of Diversification Are Evident In Chilton County

Resume of Talk by James L. Lawson, administrative assistant to Director of Extension Service, made at Kiwanis Club, Clanton, May 8.

Much has been thought and said of the need for diversification in Alabama. We have realized that cotton can no longer furnish the majority of our farm income and still make it possible for us to have a decent standard of living on the farms of Alabama and the rest of the South.

Here in Chilton County farmers have practiced diversification and are doing a fine job of it. Just today I rode over a great deal of the county with your county agent, Pat Smith, and I want to tell you businessmen and others here that Chilton County is making real progress. I visited the warehouse of the Berry Growers' Association, a result of the turn to strawberries on the part of many of the farmers to get increased income. I visited the Roper farm just out of Clanton and saw how he was making peaches a profitable product of the farm. I learned also how he is using the best and best farming practices including winter legumes and other crops to build and improve the soil.

Strawberries, peaches, other fruits and the use of soil conservation and improvement work evident on so many farms are proof that Chilton County farmers are going forward. The large number of pastures, I saw today is another indication farmers are balancing their operations.

Farmers in this county are going forward and are the finest of the program which is being carried out by the Extension Service trying to promote. We are working with all farmers, large and small, with this theme in mind—'Make more farmers good farmers, make good farmers profitable.' Balanced farming is one of the ways in which we think this can be done.

What about the condition of Alabama agriculture today? The average cash income per farm on the 231,000 farms of the State was $498.31 last year, which is still pitifully low. Of this $498.31 income, $119 came from livestock.

Based on the entire State this livestock income was around $28,000,000 while farmers received only $42,000,000 from cotton and cotton seed. This is the most income we have ever received from livestock and livestock products. It means that we are making sound progress in balancing our agriculture between cotton and livestock. And this livestock income has been steadily increasing and it is continuing to gain in importance.

Let's look at this livestock increase a little further. It has been very evident in our work with farm men and farm women and boys and girls. In 4-H club work we had ten years ago, or in 1930, only 3,864 members, carrying on livestock projects. In 1940 there were 24,672 members, both boys and girls, who were carrying livestock projects. Livestock numbers also showed a large increase in the ten-year period. In 1930 there were only 83,000 cattle on farms; in 1940 there were 1,080,000. In 1930 there were only 845,000 hogs; in 1940 there were 1,267,000.

The income change resulting from this increase is interesting. In 1930, farmers had an income of two million 800 thousand dollars from hogs and three million 700 thousand dollars from cattle. But in 1940 farmers received six million 464 thousand dollars from hogs, a four million dollar increase, and seven million 108 thousand dollars from cattle, a little less than a four million dollar increase.

Along with this increase in livestock and livestock income there came a corresponding increase of 81 per cent in plowable pastures and an increase of 84 per cent in hay production. This pasture increase came mainly from farm clearing unprofitable bottom land and putting into pasture.

In Chilton County there are about 17,000 farm units with 110,000 acres of cropland. About 23,000 acres of this land is growing cotton. Chilton farmers are practicing sound judgment in the handling of this farm land. They see that the land must be conserved and built up before it can produce. That is the basis of the Alabama AAA plan which farmers have launched this year.

Inauguration of this Alabama plan was possible only because Alabama farmers have realized that the first job in any successful farm program is to protect and improve the soil. The progress they have made in soil conservation made possible for Alabama to take the lead in the Nation in balancing all facilities and government aid in carrying out a large scale conservation program.

This progress is exemplified in what Chilton County farmers have done under the leadership of County Agent Smith, Miss Barber and others. In one year farmers have increased their winter legume acreage from 5,000 to 10,000 acres. The use of phosphate and slag has increased from 800 units (240 pounds of 20 per cent superphosphate per unit) to 5,000 units. We think this is a good start, and as I said, this progress which is evident over most of the State, is the reason why Alabama farmers are leading the Nation today in new type farm program.

Briefly the Alabama plan is this: It is a five-year conservation program designed to accomplish four main objectives. These objectives are (1) one-fourth of the cropland on each farm in erosion resisting and soil conserving crops such as oats, winter legumes, etc., each year; (2) all cropland and tenured cropland in (3) a crop of perennial erosion control hay acre out of each 15 acres of cropland. The latter crops might be kudzu or lespedeza sericea.

The four objectives are to be accomplished on each farm through farm plans to be made for each farm in the State. Farmers who fail to use the AAA soil building assistance and other help to carry out these practices will have his AAA special crop payment reduced.

After, and along with this Alabama plan, will come the balanced farm program we are talking about. As we get more feed crops and pastures on each farm we can have more economical production of livestock for increased income. As we conserve and build up our soil we can produce, and will produce, cash crops such as truck crops and cotton much more efficiently and economically with less outlay for fertilizer. Any progressive farm program in Alabama must begin with the soil. That is where we have started and there is almost universal approval by farmers, themselves of the Alabama plan. They feel, as we do, that it will result in making more farmers good farmers, and in making good farming profitable.

Farmers have made progress in the efficient production of crops. They have made use of scientific knowledge in cotton production and in the production of other crops. American farmers today are at the peak in production efficiency. Proof of this is that under a control program American farmers continue to produce an ample supply of farm products.

Yet we find farmers who are producing efficiently, who are following the latest and best methods in conserving the soil and are doing a good job of farming but are not getting a nice income from their work. Good farmers are getting painfully low income because of factors over which the individuals have no control. They do many things to make farming more profitable but economically the individual farmer has limits to which he can accomplish increased income. We all realize that farmers are the lowest paid group of people we have in this country. But they need help to increase their income and get more money from their products. Fifty to 60 years ago farm organizations started when we discovered that farm income was rapidly decreasing as a result of soil depletion, unfair tariffs, freight rates and many other things with which we are all familiar. Farmers began to realize that they, working as individuals, were helpless against much of this decreasing income. They saw too that while their income was going down the difference between that income and the things they had to buy was getting larger.

Farmers organized cooperatives in an attempt to get parity of income and equality of opportunity. We soon found that through these co-ops farmers managed to save a little money on the things they had to buy. We found, however, that the cooperatives did not increase the rapidly declining income.

It was then that far-sighted farm leaders began to think of the need for a strong legislative and educational organization. They organized the American Farm Bureau Federation because they realized that legislation was necessary if farmers were to have that equality of opportunity and a parity income. Two of the most prominent of those leaders who saw the need for such an organization are two Alabama farmers whom we all know well. I refer to President Edward A. O'Neal of the American Farm Bureau Federation and Dr. L. N. Duncan of Auburn. These men had a great part in the formation of the Farm Bureau and the fight for equality of opportunity for farmers.

These leaders and others felt that since it was farmers who responded with food and fiber in time of war, who filled the ranks in the army and who produced food for everyone they deserved some help in their problems. The AAA came in 1933 as a result of this far-sighted leadership. This leadership and this strong organization has consistently been heard in Congress in the development of farm legislation since 1933 and at present. Parity legislation is at present receiving the active support of the Farm Bureau and is the main objective of the Bureau during the present session of Congress.

Farmers need more money. In spite of the progress which they are making, they are at a distinct disadvantage. Senator Joseph O'Mahoney of Wyoming in a recent report in Congress pointed out that the 25 per cent of the people on farms get only 8.9 per cent of the income.

The lowest wages received by workers in industry is from 32 and one-half to 37 and one-half cents per hour under regulated working hours, yet the cotton farmer gets only eight to 10 cents per hour for producing cotton. In Alabama 50 per cent of our people are on farms and they are receiving the lowest wages of any group.

While their income has remained the same to have to buy more. The disparity between the prices they receive and the prices they have to pay is becoming more of a hardship and burden.

The farmer needs money, not regretting for subsistence farming. Agriculture has been receiving a declining income for many years. But let us remember that in every country where peasantry agriculture has developed you find a country is to be strong. In our own country, if we are to have a real democracy the one-fourth of our people on farms must get more income.

What will parity price on cotton mean to most of you here tonight? The welfare of farmers is your welfare and the failure of farmers is your failure. If you happen to be a banker and cotton farmers get more for their cotton this money will reach you through farmers and merchants. Parity for farmers in Alabama means parity for bankers and parity for business. If Chilton farmers receive parity on their cotton it will mean an increase of about $225,000 over what they receive.

"Build-Up" Relief Explained to Women

A simple method has saved many women a lot of suffering! It is based on the fact that headaches, nervousness, cramp-like pain are often symptoms of functional dysmenorrhea due to malnutrition. Help for this condition so often follows the use of CARDUI, because it usually increases the appetite and the flow of gastric juice; thus aids digestion and helps build physical resistance. Usual result is less periodic distress. Many who take CARDUI a few days before and during "the time" have found this helps ease periodic discomfort. Women have used CARDUI for more than 50 years!

for their 1940 crop. If farmers make this it will mean better prices for their crops and other farm products. It will mean more business to you and the community of Clanton.

The Farm Bureau has consistently fought for legislation to benefit farmers. Since 1933 the Farm Bureau voice has been heard in Congress. The bill for 85 per cent parity loans on farm products, the legislation on which the Farm Bureau is placing every emphasis in Alabama there are around 25,000 farmers who have already joined the Alabama Farm Bureau and the fight for increased income for the farmer. Chilton County farmers should likewise take part in education and legislative efforts of the Alabama and American Farm Bureau Federations.

These organizations need the active support of the farmers and business men of Chilton County. Chilton County needs a strong organization of farmers working through community organizations to not only help in the national and State efforts but to work together to improve their own production problems. The efforts of this Chilton County farm organization should be directed toward increased income toward State and national legislation which help farmers, rather than to local or county politics.

As farmers go up the ladder in income and as they are able through this increased income to do better farming and to have better homes in which to live, the businessmen of Clanton and all of the other towns will be in much better shape also. By working together in an organization built upon the basis of improving the lot of the farmer, all will benefit.

OTOOTAN SOYBEANS
BEST HAY VARIETY

Alabama farmers growing soybeans for hay are finding Ootootan to be the leading hay-type variety from standpoint of yield and quality. Ootootan, though a low seed producer, is also satisfactory for grazing. Furnishing pasturage over greater period of time than most varieties.

Other varieties, such as Tokio, Tarheel Black, Bilcoi, Taniloxi Mammoth and Mammoth have made large yields, but they have coarse stems and produce poor quality hay. These beans also shatter the seed easily and are thus difficult to harvest for seed.

THIS IS SEASON TO DESTROY TERMITES

This is the best time of year to detect the presence of termites and to treat infested buildings as these pests are now leaving their underground homes, advises J. M. Robinson, head of the entomology-zoology department at Auburn. Where these insects are found, all timber touching ground should be treated with creosote or removed, if practical, thus destroying runways from ground to building proper.

J. H. Willoughby
Celebrates 90th

Mr. John Henry Willoughby, of Lomax, celebrated his 90th birthday on Sunday, May 5th, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. H. Blankenship, when his children, grandchildren and friends and other relatives gathered in for the special occasion.

Mr. Willoughby, a loveable character to all who knows him, was very grateful as his children gathered with him once more to celebrate his birthday. And, to show his appreciation, he called them all around and gave to them his yearly advice on how to live a moral, respectful and serviceable life as he has so humbly set before them.

He is an old Harp singer, remembering back in the earlier days of the singing conventions, and now attends as many of them as he can get around to. It is told on him that at his last convention at New Harmony he was held up by three men while he led the congregation in singing in the old "Fa, So, La, Ti, Do" books. He is a primitive Baptist and has been a resident of Chilton County since 1898. He now resides with his daughter, Mrs. J. H. Blankenship of near Lomax.

At the noon hour, a bountiful birthday dinner was served and a beautifully decorated cake presented to him by the children. Mr. Willoughby himself, in his humble words, graced the table.

Avalanche of Bad Luck

Has a Good Side, Too
POSCHIAVO, SWITZERLAND.—Pierre Lardi, 18, of Poschiamo, is alive today only because the avalanche which carried him a quarter of a mile down an Alp near St. Moritz left him buried 10 feet under the snow just in front of an approaching train.

The train crew never saw Lardi, but the train was late and they went to work clearing the track.

They found the youth unconscious but still alive under the snow. He recovered in a St. Moritz hospital where he was found to be bruised but otherwise uninjured.

THE END SHALL BE AT TIME APPOINTED

Jehovah has definitely fixed the time for the battle of Armageddon, known unto God are all his works (Act. 15: 18) from the beginning of the battle of God almighty, Heaven and earth shall pass away but my words shall not pass away. But of that day and hour knoweth not man, not the angels of heaven, but my father only (Mat. 24: 35: 36) For many centuries Jehovah has made known that a time is coming when his great wrath will be expressed against all of Satan's organizations. Those diligent to know and do God's will have received comfort from his revealed word. Those who believe in God and his King and who seek righteousness and make themselves clearly discern that the great climax is very near. For such sincere and devoted people, Jehovah has provided consolation.

We should gather together, before the fiercest anger of the Lord come upon you before the day of the Lord's anger comes upon you (Zeph. 1: 2) The day of preparation for Armageddon has been in progress for some time. There is now a short period of grace until the battle. God has shortened the day of tribulation and afforded time and opportunity for his warning to be sounded. Armageddon is very near.

Behold now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation. When the day of Jehovah's angel in its fiercest breaks, then it will be too late to flee to the place of safety, therefore, too late to give consideration to the warning. God sends, by his prophet Zephaniah. Armageddon is a time of destruction and not a time to begin to hear and obey the Lord's commandments. There will be no escape for those who disregard the warning of Jehovah.—J. C. Edwards.

Waiting Desert Death,

Professor Alters Will
PASADENA, CALIF.—Awaiting death from thirst and exhaustion, Dr. John Elliot Wolff, 83-year-old professor emeritus of geology at Harvard university, calmly revised his will as he sat in his automobile stranded in the Mojave desert, where later his body was found.

While funeral services were being held here, it became known he left a codicil to his will in the car pocket. The document substituted the name of a gardener for that of a previous employee, since deceased, to whom he left a small bequest. It was written on the back of an invitation to last June's Harvard commencement.

To make sure it would not be overlooked, he wrote on a napkin which he pasted on the windshield of his car: "Last words of John E. Wolff, his will below." His body was found five days after he set out on a desert geological expedition.

Dr. Wolff several years ago gave the bulk of his estate to Harvard.

MAKES SPLENDID RECORD WITH POULTRY PROJECT

By M. R. GLASSCOCK
Assistant County Agent, Chilton Co.
Naomi D. and Jessie A. Culp of Rte. 3 Clanton, are making splendid progress with their 4-H Club Poultry Feeding Project.

From a 300-chick Broiler Feeding Project they have realized a cash profit of $29.30 and have made possible the marketing of 1,100 pounds of their home produced corn at 2 cents per pound.

These two industrious club members began their project by borrowing money from the local bank with which they bought baby chicks and starting a mash. After paying the bank all of the money they borrowed, they have enough left to start another project without asking anyone for help.

Naomi and Jessie, in growing out their project, followed closed the feeding and management practices recommended by the Alabama Experiment Station. They started their chicks on starter mash and after five weeks they changed the feed to 26 per cent supplement and yellow corn meal. They also observed strict sanitation in and around their brooder house throughout the feeding period.

By careful feeding and strict Sanitation the 4-H club members were able to carry their feed to 26 per cent supplement and yellow corn meal. They also observed strict sanitation in and around their brooder house throughout the feeding period.

This project is only a starting point for these club members. They intend to start the same project on a slightly larger scale just as soon as they can get their house properly cleaned and sterilized.

U. S. 31, fifteen miles south of Clanton. Safe, smooth-riding concrete roads like this cost only one-third as much to keep in repair as other types of main roads in Alabama.

ALABAMA needs the economy of more CONCRETE ROADS like this

Nearly every Southern state from Texas to Delaware—except Alabama—is adding steadily to its mileage of concrete roads.

These states use concrete for main traveled roads because cost figures prove that it is the most economical pavement.

Any state that builds inferior, short-lived surfaces may find its program for the construction of new roads slowed down to a standstill by heavy expenditures for maintenance and reconstruction.

Alabama's main traveled roads need many miles of new pavement. Because of its greater safety and because it costs less per mile per year, concrete is the best pavement for these roads.

Tell your public officials you want concrete.

FARMERS HAVE BIG JOB IN NATIONAL DEFENSE

Washington, D. C.—Farmers can take "efficient production" as a watchword," says Chester C. Davis, Commissioner in Charge of the Agricultural Division, National Defense Advisory Commission, in a recent article in The Fertilizer Review telling what immediate action farmers can take in our national emergency.

CHESTER C. DAVIS

"Efficient production means applying farming practices that will get the highest yields from the fewest acres. It means lowering production costs and at the same time improving quality and increasing volume," states Mr. Davis.

"It means exercising far-seeing care in conserving the fertility of the soil by practices which not only prevent waste of fertility but help to restore it."

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

We found this clipping in last week's issue of the Haleyville Advertiser-Journal.

"Miss Ada Bennett, a resident of Haleyville, until about a year ago when she moved to Clanton, sent in her subscription remittance with a nice note enclosed find check for 'my paper', she says. 'Don't think I could live without it. Look forward to its arrival each week.'"

Now, if Ada don't tell us how much she likes our paper and how she can't wait for it each week, we're going to be plenty sore.

Have you noticed that important look that Jimmie Bell is wearing lately? Well, here's the low-down. Jimmie has been elected to the official family of the Alabama Retail Hardware Association. At the meeting that closed last Friday night with a Barbecue at Narrows Lane Inn in Montgomery, he was named on the Board of Directors . . . from now on, it's Director Bell. That's a sign of honor and credit to Mr. Bell, congratulations.

Frank Clark was in town the last of the week. Frank is now stationed at Camp Blanding, Florida . . . but, even the beautiful Florida scenery can't make him forget the army. Frank says, "I regret it, you have to work too hard."

On the 28th and 29th of May, "Gone With The Wind" is coming to the new Wadeson Theatre and all who have seen it will get another chance. We know that those who have not seen it but look like we will have to see it in defense . . . every time we have attempted to go out the past year to enjoy ourself some movie fan has asked the question, "have you seen 'Gone With The Wind'?" and when we answered in the negative, we have had to defend it. That wonderful picture will over again.

We left town last Thursday afternoon on some business and about the time we got our backs turned it seems to have begun to happen. Bokkinton's sawmill burned up or down, whichever the case might be and it rained in the back end of the News office. Marvin Durbin, whose office is on the floor above us had plumbing trouble. John Underwood went up stairs to find out why it was raining so so beautiful a day afternoon with the birds singing and the sun shining and found Marvin holding the pipe with a wrench while this Miller run for the plumber . . . John rushes back down stairs and finds buckets around over the shop in the water. He would be where the water came thru the ceiling . . . he was pretty lucky too . . . not a thing was damaged and things got back to normal before long. It taught us this though, stay in town on Thursday afternoons and find out what goes on around here.

Mr. T. W. Bryan dropped into the office this week to tell us that it pays to read your county papers, both of them. Last week when the mail came, Mr. Bryan was looking for some letters. Important letters with money orders in them . . . when the mail came, Mr. Bryan received nothing but the county papers. The News and the Banner . . . he glanced over the front pages and pitched them down on the front porch and went back to the garden where he had been feigning work all morning. Next day when at the office he went to the porch and found the papers that had lain there all night and there in the house to be read. Now here's where is pays to read your home papers, you can never tell just what good you are going to get out of them . . . for when Mr. Bryan opened them to read them they contained two letters and one of them contained a money order . . . they had been folded in the paper by the postman to keep from being lost.

We were talking to Mr. R. M. Roper, the strawberry man, this week about the Strawberry Festival in Haleyville last week and says of the growers around here that they didn't do so well. They ought to talk to some of those fellows up there. We did have about ten days of good prices before the market went down so low, but it seems that those fellows up there only got about $125 for the first of the crop. For other words, things here could have been a lot worse. We should thank our lucky stars.

a few days vacation in Fitzpatrick. Before she left she was telling us that Billy was in Mobile, making pictures of the National Defense Project there. At first she just said making pictures and the first thing that popped into our mind was Betty Grable, Lana Turner and the like and we were wondering how a fellow would go about getting a job like Billy's.

We swiped this from Paul; we don't know who he swiped it from:

If the editor makes a mistake he has to apologize. If a doctor makes a mistake he buries it.

If we make one there is a lawsuit, swearing and the smell of sulphur, but if the doctor makes one there is a funeral, cut flowers and the smell of vanilla.

The doctor can use a word a mile long without knowing what it means, but if the editor uses it he has to spell it.

If the doctor goes to see another man's wife he charges for it but if the editor goes to see another man's wife he gets a charge of buckshot.

A medical college can make a doctor, but you cannot make an editor; he has to be born.

When a doctor gets drunk it's a case of overdose by heat, and if he dies it is heart trouble. When an editor gets drunk it's a case of too much booze, and if he dies it is a case of delirium tremens—Paul Cowin, North-west Alabama.

Let's Not Miss The Bus!

What is more important, economically, to the people of Chilton County, right now, than who is going to win the war, is what are the people of Chilton County going to do for the preservation of our own economic safety.

Various and sundry contracts of almost every description are being awarded to communities all over the Nation, but very little indeed is being done by the people of Chilton County to see that a proportionate share comes this way.

Right now arrangements are being made by the Federal Government for the training of British flyers in America; a little concerted effort and cash on our part might easily double the capacity of Gragg Field to help care for this auxiliary defense plan. Our Senators and Congressmen cannot be expected to accomplish very much for us without our wholehearted, enthusiastic cooperation—there are too many other communities whose citizens are backing their officials to the limit, and who are clamoring for these favors.

Here is another case in point: Official Washington is seriously considering the channelling of the Coosa river from Mobile to Rome, Ga. as a defense measure. A meeting was called at Gadsden and another at Washington. No delegated representative from Chilton County was present at either of these meetings, although the Coosa river borders Chilton Co. for more than 25 miles, with the building of two locks within the county that would require the expenditures of large sums of labor and materials. It certainly does not require an Einstein to calculate the benefits that would accrue to the people of this section through the development of this waterway.

Chilton County is looked upon all over Alabama as one of the most progressive in the State, but conditions are changing so rapidly right now that unless we wake up to the seriousness of our present situation, and bestir ourselves in our own behalf, we will soon find Chilton County going backward, economically instead of forward.

Students Named To Attend Career Conference

Mr. Patterson Hicks, Principal, has recommended six students at Chilton County High School to Alabama College to receive invitations to the Student Career Conference to be held there Jan 25, 26, 27, and 28. The students who are being mailed invitations: this week include Misses Elizabeth Elison, Lila Sides, Willodean Stewart, of Clanton; Gerie Lee Jones, Rt. 5, Clanton; Jeanette Smith, Rt. 2, Clanton; Katherine Wyatt, Rt. 5, Clanton.

The purpose of the Student Career Conference is to bring together in a group high school graduates and students of high standing who are interested in discussing the occupational outlook for young women in Alabama.

The 1941 Conference leaders will be Dean Adah Peirce of Hiram College, Dean Peirce includes in her background work in industrial establishments as well as extensive experience in college personnel work.

Aid will be given in answering questions regarding the choice of a vocation, the training this calls for, and the personal characteristics necessary for success. These, and other important questions, will be covered through counseling based on tests, thorough formal talks by leaders, and through informal discussions in round tables.

F. S. A. Lends $70,000 To The County's Farmers

340 Small Farmers Share In Funds Made Available Recently

More than $70,000. loaned to tenants and small farm owners in Chilton County this spring by the Farm Security Administration for the purchase of mules, tools, seed, fertilizer and other necessities has been flowing into the local channels of trade during the past month or so, Marvin Durbin, FSA Supervisor announced today.

Three hundred and forty small farmers operating with the assistance of FSA in this county received part of this amount with the agreement that it be repaid, with five per cent interest in installments stretched over a five-year period.

More than the 340 farmers who had to borrow some additional money for crop necessities this spring, Mr. Durbin explained, also had a considerable amount of money deposited in joint bank accounts to help them meet current expenses. So the whole group has been spending with local merchants the spring approximately $85,000.

In order for the 340 farm families to receive the assistance of the FSA, it was necessary for them to work out with the FSA supervisors, a balanced farm and home management plan. The FSA not only helped these farmers in working out their plan, it helps them during the year in carrying out these plans. The first thing to consider in a farm and home is a live-at-home program. That is to produce food for the family and feed for the livestock. The next thing is some other income other than from cotton. These families are obtaining income from two of three other sources other than cotton. A balanced farm and home management plan means a plan whereby food will be produced for the family, feed for the livestock, and enough cash income from crop, livestock, and livestock products to repay the loan and maintain a high standard of living.

Maj. Gen. Hershey, Selective Service Deputy Director, speaking in Lafayette, Ind., said that misguided patriotism of employers was allowing many men to be drafted who are more useful to industry. Employers and registrants should not hesitate to appeal classifications, he said.

"All of us should carefully consider where we are best fitted to serve," Gen. Hershey said. "It is certainly neither desirable nor necessary that each man dedicate himself to a future in the armed forces."

Selective Service Headquarters directed immediate classification of the 10,000,000 remaining registrants in order to obtain complete lists on skill workers and potential soldiers and amended its regulations to permit induction of some of the registrants previously barred because of comparatively minor criminal records.

Gen. Hershey proposed amendment of the Selective Service Act to Congress to allow deferment by age groups so that those selected are of an age which will permit them to serve effectively in the reserve forces for ten years or more, he said. He said only 11 per cent of the men inducted before March 1 were from 31 to 36 years and the greatest number were from 18 to 27.

Labor Training

President Roosevelt asked Congress or $158,000,000 to train 3,000,000 additional defense workers, of which 268,000 would be new trained engineering, 10,000 in chemistry, physics and production supervision, and 5,000,000 courses teaching rural youths industrial skills.

Defense Plants

OPM announced the Government, up to March 30, committed itself to pay for 391 new defense factories, costing an average of $5,750,000 each and estimated the number of new privately financed defense plants reached 904, costed an average of $729,000 each.

Agriculture

The Department of Agriculture, in a general crop report, said conditions indicated: (1) a winter-wheat crop of about 653,000,000 bushels, larger than 25 of the last 30 years; (2) a good, but not a new record, corn yield of 12 per cent above last year's; (3) a hay crop, probably larger than last year; (4) better pasture conditions in 43 of the 48 States; and (5) milk production and egg production per animal at new high records as a result of higher prices, and early spring, new grass and liberal feeding.

U. S. DEPT. OF AGRICULTURE

Maj. Gen. Arnold, Chief of the U. S. Air Corps, speaking in Washington, said the air force "is well on its way and will be ready when called on." The War Department announced the first 21 of a large number of flying fortress bombers had flown to Hawaii to strengthen the island defenses.

The Navy asked Congress to enact legislation permitting training of Reserve enlisted men as pilots. The President asked Congress for $60,000,000 to expand the Civil Aeronautics Administration landing field program from 250 to 399 projects.

Army

The War Department announced that it has selected the location of campsites needed for "possible expansion of the Army" and is ready to begin work on the new camps immediately if necessary. The Army announced its aircraft strength had been more than tripled in the past year and a large portion of anti-aircraft regiments equipped to transport every gun and every man in one movement.

The fleet commissioned the 35th ton battleship "Washington." The Navy announced it acquired 25 auxiliary vessels during April at a total cost of $11,750,000.

The Department directed that enlistees in the Naval Reserve be released from active duty after the emergency regardless of the length of the enlistments.

Foreign Relations

President Roosevelt, notified of war between France and Germany, issued statements that "it is inconceivable" the French people would collaborate with a power seeking their destruction of liberty, freedom of popular institutions everywhere.

At the same time the President ordered 13 French ships in U. S. ports taken into protective custody—including two submarines.

The President told a press conference that Germany's proclamation of a combat area in the Red Sea presented a question of German ability to make a blockade effective there. He recalled the U. S. has fought two undeclared wars to maintain freedom of the seas—against Barbary pirates in the Mediterranean and against British and Spanish privateers in the West Indies.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Thousands of Americans who have landed in New York after a trip to Europe or South America know Alexander McKeon. The reason is that Mr. McKeon, who retired recently, was in the United States customs service for 42 years and for more than 35 of those years spent much of his time on the piers of the various steamship lines supervising the inspection of the baggage of homecomers. Most travelers, however, do not know that Mr. McKeon, according to certain close friends, more than any other man, has been responsible for demonstrating that the collection of duty on various articles purchased abroad, if not wholly an enjoyable proceeding on both sides, can be done courteously and fairly.

Happened to encounter Mr. McKeon while at luncheon with a mutual friend, just before his retirement. He looks as bronzed and rugged as a sea captain. That is, he explained, to the fact that he has spent so much of his life right at the edge of the sea waiting for ships to dock. Trained as a jeweler, but with a longing for life in the open, one day he quit and joined the customs service as a weigher. A few years later he was transferred to the baggage division. In 1917 he was put in charge of baggage inspection with the rank of deputy surveyor. He was due to retire 12 months ago but because of his knowledge of European conditions, his experience gained through contact with travelers during the first World War and because he had so much detail at his finger ends as it were, he was retained in the service.

Out of his long experience, Mr. McKeon holds the case of forged customs stamps to be the most striking. Back in 1928, customs authorities became aware of the fact that large quantities of narcotics were being brought into the country. They also learned that customs stamps that show that baggage has been inspected and who are cancelled before the baggage can be taken from the enclosure, were being removed from baggage that had undergone inspection and affixed to other trunks and bags, thus permitting uninspected articles to pass the guards. Later they discovered also that customs stamps were being forged. But not until March, 1930, did anything happen deserving all the efforts that were being made to catch the offenders.

One day the Ile de France arrived with the usual heavy passenger list and mountains of baggage. Specially selected agents scrutinized every piece of baggage that came from the ship. One noticed two trunks under the letter "D." They were marked "John Bell" but their owner did not seem to be near. Nothing unusual about that. The agent had a hunch, however. He soon returned and found that in his absence, customs stamps had been affixed to the trunks. The agent watched. A porter came, loaded the trunks on a truck and started to leave the pier. He was stopped. The fact that the trunks had not been inspected was quickly and easily verified. They were opened and found to contain narcotics that would have brought peddlers several hundred thousand dollars. The customs stamps were found to be forged.

It wasn't long before the customs agents discovered that John Bell was Jacob Blum, who had fled from the White Star line pier the week before after he had been tipped off that his baggage was believed to be "hot." Blum managed to get started for Europe on the liner Berenice but a wireless message kept him from landing at Cherbourg. At Southampton he was arrested and sent back to New York where he was convicted and sentenced to seven years. He refused to "sing" but the higher-ups were eventually captured and jailed and that of course resulted in the end of the ring.

Still keeping to the water front, there are those English sailors who, when they are about to leave on the return voyage, stock up with all the onions they can carry. England imports her onions and the war has made them scarce. A stew isn't a stew without an onion. So the sailor's home-coming gift is a bag of onions.

In a snow fight in Central park after the first snowfall, the participants were Nani Todd, Lehua Paulson and Leinaala Kihoi. Being native Hawaiians on their first visit to this country, they had never seen snow before. Nevertheless, they had a good time . . . and of course got their pictures taken . . . They are hula dancers in the Lexington hotel. (Bell Syndicate-WNU Service.)

NOW IS BEST TIME TO KILL HOUSE FLIES

Right now is the best time to effective work towards controlling flies, says W. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist, Auburn, in urging farmers to rid their places of the pests before they hatch.

Effective control begins with the first warm days of spring by removing manure, rotten straw, spoiled silage and other material where moisture and warmth are present. A little time spent in cleaning up now will do more good in fly control than all sprays, fly traps or poison bait that can be used later in the summer, Ruffin states.

NAVY SPEEDS RECRUITING OF RECRUITS

The Navy Recruiting Service in Birmingham has announced that the Navy Department has called for 35,000 men to be enlisted in either the regular Navy or Naval Reserve before June 30th.

In addition to regular Navy recruiting, enlistments are now authorized in the several classes of the Naval Reserve for active duty during the present emergency for men. The various classes of the reserve provide for practically every type of qualified man in any civilian occupation. As an example men are needed for Class V-6 between the ages of 17 and 50 and may be enlisted in "status" for which their civil training has qualified them for. Real jobs are offered to applicants who qualify and those people will receive the rating and pay for which now trained. Included in the trades effected are metal-smiths, machinists, radiomen, boiler-makers, pharmacists, clerical workers and many other professions.

The recruiting service is authorized to furnish applicants transportation from substations to the Main Station at Birmingham for purposes of enlistment.

Recruiting Stations of the Birmingham Recruiting District are located in ALABAMA at Anniston, Florence, Huntsville, Mobile, Montgomery and Tuscaloosa. The Main Station is located in Post Office Building in Birmingham.

ROSE DISEASE NEEDS DUSTING OF SULPHUR

The three most serious and common diseases of roses—black spot, brown canker and powdery mildew—can be controlled by immediate use of sulphur dust every 10 days throughout the remainder of growing season after all canes infected with canker have been removed. At the same time aphids can be destroyed by using derris prepared with sulphur instead of sulphur alone, says J. L. Seal, experiment station botanist and pathologist, Auburn.

STATE 4-H LEADERS CAMP SET JULY 7-12

Plans are being made for Alabama's 4-H leadership camp to be held in Auburn, July 7-12. Each county in the state will be represented by two boys and two girls.

"Please let us have the names of your delegates as soon as possible," writes T. A. Sims, State 4-H club leader, to each county extension worker in Alabama. "All delegates will wear National 4-H uniforms while attending the camp."

Jones: Did her father come between you?
Smith: No, merely behind me.

She: So you want to take me for a ride and give me a dollar kiss?
He: What do you say?
She: Highway robbery.

Pilot Clubs Aid Defense Program

Pilot Club International, cooperating with the other four national women's classified service clubs, Zonta, Altrusa, Soroptimist and Quota, has approved recommendations in which all Pilot Clubs will lend their assistance to the National Defense Program.

Realizing the interest on the part of business women in all service clubs for a part in this great program, a meeting of presidents and secretaries of these five clubs was called by Quota International, and met in Washington, D. C. to discuss and outline recommendations that will embrace all fields of endeavor represented by the clubs.

The first of the five recommendations is the Registry of Skills. To accomplish this, Pilot International Headquarters is sending cards to all clubs for registry of each member. This will give information as to the particular qualifications of members, such as doctors, nurses, and all other professions and abilities. This information will then be compiled and handled by headquarters.

The second is the study of local defense training programs in relation to securing training opportunities for women.

Third, the recognition of responsibility for leadership in the formation of public opinion by sponsoring local community activities to foster loyalty and devotion to country.

Fourth, Cooperation with educational leaders and established agencies for the maintenance and extension of community programs for the training of our youth in effective citizenship.

Fifth, Support of the Consumer's Protection Program of the National Defense Advisory Commission.

This is a program that stresses Cooperation—not competition. It is based on a desire to render service of the highest and most efficient character.

FOREST FIRE MEETING IN BIRMINGHAM

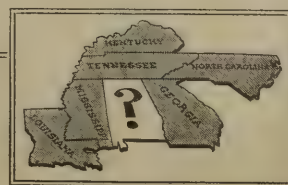

Citizens of Chilton and adjoining counties are being invited to see a forest fire musical talkie at the Tutwiler Hotel auditorium in Birmingham on the evening of May 30. The film is a feature of the annual convention of Volunteer forest fire controls organized by the Southern States Forest Fire Commission.

This organization has been active in Chilton County and nearby counties for the past year, and have been urging the adoption of forest fire work as a citizenship project by the schools and which is going into effect it is stated.

Prior to the showing of the film Senator John H. Bankhead will deliver an address on the findings of the Joint Senate and House Committee which has been conducting investigations of forest fire situation throughout the nation.

All meetings of the convention are open and free to the public.

The opening event will be a Dutch luncheon at the Tutwiler on the 30th. The speech of Senator Bankhead will be heard over a nation-wide radio network, it is stated, and will be of broad interest to landowners of the entire country.

The South Is Building CONCRETE ROADS

Look at the 1939-1940 contract awards:

- 217 MILES IN MISSISSIPPI
- 115 MILES IN GEORGIA
- 229 MILES IN NORTH CAROLINA
- 119 MILES IN LOUISIANA
- 90 MILES IN KENTUCKY
- 119 MILES IN TENNESSEE

Motorists in these neighbor states are proud of their new concrete roads. Their mileage of safe, comfortable, all-weather concrete has grown steadily, while Alabama added only 11 miles in 2 years. Alabama motorists will be better served at lower cost per mile if main traveled roads are paved with concrete as in other states.

Bus To Childersburg Studied By Mayor

Our attention has been called to the fact that several residents of Clanton are working, or will be working in Childersburg.

We feel that we should work out a special bus schedule "to and from" Childersburg, for employees. And due to the housing situation at Childersburg, that we might be able to get other employees located in Clanton.

In order that we might have some data to use in working out a bus schedule, and making arrangements for living quarters, we will appreciate it if you will ask those who have vacant houses, vacant apartments or available rooms, to please contact my office at the City Hall.

We would also like to know the number of present employees who would be interested in working out some special bus schedule leaving Clanton in time to be at Childersburg at 8:00 and leaving Childersburg soon after 4:30 in the afternoon.

Your cooperation in helping us to obtain this information will be appreciated.—C. E. STAPP, Mayor.

STRAWBERRY QUALITY—

Very tasty evidence as to the excellence of Alabama strawberries has been sampled by the personnel of the State Chamber headquarters in the last few days in the form of a gift crates of berries from Clanton and Cullman. First came a crate of berries from J. N. Dennis, secretary-treasurer of the Clanton Berry Growers' Association followed a few days later by a crate from Elbert E. Ponder, general chairman of the Cullman Strawberry Festival. Stuffed with the choice fruit from two major berry-growing sections of the state, the State Chamber staff is unanimously of the opinion that "when better berries are grown, Alabama will grow them." —Alabama Today and Tomorrow.

ENLIST IN CCC

On Monday, May 26, 1941 boys between the ages of 17 and 24 will have another opportunity for enrollment in CCC. In this enrollment all youths will be placed either in Alabama camps or in neighboring states. None will be sent out of the South.

Under the new defense program, the CCC camps are in position to offer excellent job training opportunities to unemployed young men and since enrollment is no longer restricted to boys from families having relief status, ambitious young men who are interested in learning a trade and securing employment will do well to investigate the possibilities of CCC enrollment.

At any time applications may be filed with the Department of Public Welfare, which acts as the local selecting agency.

11TH ANNUAL AIR CARNIVAL IN BIRMINGHAM JUNE 7-8
"The Sweetest Music This Side of Heaven" will lend an appropriate background for the eleventh annual National Air Carnival at the Birmingham Municipal Airport Saturday and Sunday, June 7-8.
Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians have been chosen to furnish music for the "Miss American Aviation" ball, one of the highlights of the carnival, Saturday night, June 7, at the city auditorium here.
Stedham Acker, director of the carnival, the largest of its kind in the world, has completed arrangements for Lombardo to play for the beauty ball. Beauties from many states will vie for the title of "Miss American Aviation" won last year by Miss Margaret Mellon, and numerous motion picture and radio celebrities will be on hand.
More than 15 stunts have already been contracted for and this year's carnival proper will be more thrilling than any in the past. It will carry out the national defense program to a certain extent, because some of Uncle Sam's Army and Navy planes will visit the carnival as usual, and several foreign countries will send their goodwill ambassadors to Birmingham. Last year five foreign nations were represented.
The National Air Carnival is unique insofar that it is free to the public. Last year close to half a million persons saw the two-day aviation extravaganza.
The complete list of celebrities isn't complete, but Wilbur Shaw, 1940 winner of the Indianapolis Speedway, who incidentally is seeking his fourth speedway triumph May 30, will be back if nothing happens at Indianapolis on May 30.
Miss Ann Taylor, "Miss Florida Aviation" of 1941, already has entered the beauty ball. She is from Jacksonville.

Two Ways To Destroy Weevils Outlined
Farmers are warned to be on the lookout for boll weevils and to prepare to fight them with pre-square poison now and calcium arsenate dust later in the season, if conditions warrant it. A large number of weevils have overwintered and before the cotton begins squaring freely. This control, applied by hand with a small cloth mop or by special device attached to the plow stroke, consists of one pound of calcium arsenate, one gallon of water, and one gallon of cheap sirup. The pre-square poisoning is no insurance that the insect will not attack the cotton later. The most effective control during the time the crop is being set results from the application of calcium arsenate dust.
At present level of prices the seasonal cost of dusting an acre of cotton will range from $3 to $3.40, or the equivalent of approximately 100 pounds of seed cotton per acre. Experiments show that profits equivalent to the value of at least 160 to 200 pounds of seed cotton per acre may be expected if weevils are numerous in cotton on soil with sufficient fertility to produce one-half bale or more per acre.

These dividends will aggregate approximately $585,000.

Land of the Free: A rather tall, quietly dressed woman left the Guild theater after the last act of a show, which had a short run, and went up to a taxicab. . . "Sorry, Mrs. Roosevelt, but I have passengers," said the driver. . . "That's all right," returned the wife of the President of the United States. . . and waited for another cab. . . Capt. Irving ("Ike") Wolfe and his little daughter were walking along Madison avenue. . . Suddenly, the daughter left him and went up to a woman pedestrian. . . "Oh, Mrs. Roosevelt, you're all alone and no one is paying any attention to you!" exclaimed the child. . . and a smile lighted the first Lady's face. . . What a country America! . . . In what other land could the wife of the head of the nation go wherever she pleases without police or military escort? . . . and act exactly as if her husband were not the occupant of high office. . .
Names: Lanny Ross, with an eye cocked for the whimsical, named cows on his farm after songs he has popularized or which have particular significance to him. . . Aga Khan, Worth $800,000,000, but Is Strapped, Busted Indian Potentate, Fabulously Rich, Cannot Make Use of His Wealth.

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND. — Worth $800,000,000—but hard up!
The Aga Khan, reputedly one of the richest men on earth, whose very name stands for wealth, Lucullan luxury and princely prodigality, says he is broke, strapped, flat, not to say busted.
With his charming blonde French wife and seven-year-old son, the fabulously wealthy Indian potentate fled from France to Geneva to escape the Nazi advance and now, unable to get any of his money transferred from banks in London, Paris, Bombay and Cairo, the Aga Khan complains:
"We are almost destitute. What is the use of having money if you can't get it! With strict economy we have enough to live on for a year, but there can be no extravagance."

Of course, the Aga Khan's idea of being destitute differs from that of the average man. It is bound to—in view of the fact that his income, in normal times, runs around $20,000,000 a year. Nevertheless, it is a fact that he has been compelled to sell his famous racing stable for a mere half-million dollars, as well as to cut his usual retinue of servants and attendants in half, bringing it down to a skeleton staff of 20.

Like Being on Relief.
For the Aga Khan, that kind of thing practically amounts to going on relief. However, in the dark moments when he reflects on the dismal state of his financial affairs, the Indian potentate can take comfort in the thought that, as long as the British empire survives, his rule is not likely to let him starve. This, for the very good reason that, as spiritual chief of 78,000,000 Ismaili Mohammedans, he is an invaluable cog in the complicated machinery of state by which Britain maintains power in India.

Further, Indian Mohammedans are linked by religious sympathy with the Mohammedans of the Near East, where Britain is now fighting a life-and-death battle, and the friendship of the Aga Khan can do a lot toward keeping these wavering brown brothers on Britain's side.
So it can be safely assumed that the Aga Khan's "strict economy" does not mean that his diet will be reduced to the point where the local tailors will have to take a couple of coats in the wardrobe and his ample trousers. If such an untoward thing should happen, it would be a real and special tragedy to the Aga Khan.

His Weight in Gold.
Part of the tribute his Mohammedan followers pay him each year is determined by piling gold bars in a scale until they equal the Khan's weight. This, for the past decade, has never been less than 25 pounds. Thus, even the loss of 10 pounds, would cost him in the neighborhood of $4,000, so it may well be imagined that he looks with apprehension on the prospect of a reduced diet.
Even if he escapes this nightmare, the present situation of the Aga Khan contrasts sadly with the golden days when he was the freest-spending playboy of the Continent.
A man who controls the religious thoughts of 78,000,000 in India alone and of many millions of Moslems in other parts of the Near East is of tremendous importance to Great Britain, as is his son and heir, Prince Ali Khan. Father and son, while aware of their power, have shown no apparent lack of loyalty.

During the past month there were 2,694 cows on test. Of this number 696 were quality cows that produced over 800 pounds of milk for 40 pounds butterfat. The average production per cow was 566.5 pounds of milk and 25.9 pounds of butterfat. The average feed cost per cow was $5.56, making the feed cost 98 cents per 100 pounds of milk.

Scouts Hold Court Of Honor May 23, At City Hall

Plans To Add Additional Troop Discussed; Work Shows Splendid Results

The Local Boy Scout Advancement Committee, Mr. Patterson Hicks, chairman, held a Court of Honor at the City Hall at 7:30 P.M. May 23. The Court was opened by the Scouts reciting the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, led by James Carl Martin. Lions Enjoy Ladies Night At Blue Creek Camp

The chicken barbecue was in its glory Wednesday night and it reigned supreme at Blue Creek Camp when the Clanton Lions Club celebrated Ladies' Night. More than sixty Lions, ladies and friends, joined in making it the most successful gathering held at Blue Creek in a long time. More barbecued chicken than could be devoured was prepared for the guests and after the chicken came dancing. Those attending agreed that a "big time" was had by all and look forward to another such night in the not too distant future.

Central Alabama Hospital Gets Needed Improvement

Miss Annie Gardner, supervisor and "the boss" at Central Alabama Hospital invited the writer over Tuesday morning to see the improvements that had taken place there. All of the halls, up and down stairs have been covered with inlaid linoleum as have the office and the rooms. Miss Gardner is now going to work on getting the walls throughout the hospital redone. The work already finished has added wonderfully to the appearance and when the walls are cleaned and repainted we will have a beautiful little hospital.

Recently large fluorescent lights have been installed in the operating room which were badly needed also.

A CORRECTION

We stated in an advertisement for the First National Bank and the Peoples Savings Bank last week that both banks would be closed Friday, May 30th for Memorial Day. This was an error. The Banks will be closed on Tuesday, June 3rd instead, in celebration of Jefferson Davis' birthday. Both banks will remain open on Friday.

Harris Brothers Cover 1,900,000 Miles Yet Never Leave County

Equivalent To Seventy-six Trips Around Globe
116,998 Miles Behind A Horse

(By CLARK HEADLEY)

A record never before set at Clanton, is that of Messers Grady and Grover Harris, brothers, who have served the rural people of this section for a total of 64 years as mail carriers on Route 1 and 3, respectively, and having served the same route since the day of beginning in the early nineteen hundreds. The brothers live side by side in South Clanton, have the same number of children, and who knows what else?

Looking back over these years, figuring wildly, around curves, mud holes, detours, over mountains, bridges, creeks and through the woods, behind horses and on rims, we did the following calculating (you try it): The Harris brothers, have covered enough routes in Chilton county equivalent to seventy-six trips around the globe (detouring around Crete, Egypt); or 312 round trips from New York to Seattle; Washington; or, 1,028 trips from South Clanton to New York City; and many other points if you wanna figure it. Now, if we're wrong, crawl a road map, not us Anyways, they have covered approximately 1,900,000 miles.

Another interesting mileage figure, is they have covered enough miles behind horses, before the "Tin Lizzie" days, to circle the world four times and then go to Berlin, Germany (or somewhere else the same distance)—116,998 miles, approximately. Grover, the elder of the two, entered

DRAFTES NAMED TO LEAVE FOR MCLELLAN

The following men have been selected by Local Board No. 1 of Clanton for induction into the U. S. Army at Ft. McClellan, Aniston and shall report to the Local Board at 9:00 a.m. on June 3rd: William Herschel Hamilton, Stewart Evans Armstrong, Robert Furman Boyd, William Oliver Headley and Arthur Lee Foshee.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Smith, their daughter, Saradeen and son, Bill, Sinms Higgins and Miss Molley Bell of Mulberry have all gone to the coast for their vacation.

The president has approved WPA Project Number 50399 in the amount of $13,201.00 which is for the development of a Recreational center and swimming pool for Clanton. This was learned in a telegram received the latter part of last week from Congressman Pete Jarman and Senator Lister Hill.

Instead of the work starting at once on the Project, Mayor Stapp learned in a visit to WPA Headquarters at Montgomery Monday that it would be the latter part of July or the first of August before men could be released from defense projects to go to work on the swimming pool.

Only sixteen WPA workers in the county were available and they are classed by the light labor. This, of course, ruins the prospects of a pool this summer, but we are now assured of getting one and when it is completed it will be one of the best pieces of work done by the citizens of our city in a lone time.

Little Frank Patton Hurt In Wreck Near Verbena

Little Frank Patton, son of Carl Patton of Verbena, was seriously injured in an accident Sunday afternoon at Verbena. The radius rod, it is reported, broke on the Patton car and threw Frank, who was riding in the front seat with his father, through the windshield. The jagged glass cut the child's throat badly and for the coolness of his father, and his presence at the scene, the child would have possibly died to death. Frank is on the road to recovery now at Central Alabama Hospital.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

Many years ago there was a gathering of Beavers in the swamp near our plantation. As a boy I observed that these were wise little animals. They never undertook a task that they were not able to perform. They would not select trees to gnaw down that were more than a foot thick. I was reading a few days ago of a Beaver in Michigan that undertook to gnaw down a tree that was eight feet thick and after three years effort he gave up in despair. He found out that he had no more strength than a man. Know what you are capacitated to do and do it. Never undertake the impossible. Have the wisdom of the Beaver and undertake what you can do.

Years ago a book was written and the author died. A man who read the book was accused of committing a crime, and he in turn accused the book of inspiring him to the breaking of the law. The court tried the man and found him guilty and then the book was tried by the same court as a partner in the crime. The man and the book were condemned and sentenced. The man was whipped with forty nine stripes and ordered to serve a time in prison. The book was sent to be burned. To be sure there are books on the shelves that are books and burnshelves of some libraries, and there are books in some of our homes, that ed. Corrupt literature is instigating many a crime. A bad book becomes partner with the one who goes wrong by following its ideals. I am a candidate to like some books tried and burned.

In the war of 1794 the French people gained possession of an American town in an unusual manner. There were six hundred Austrians on guard and ready to defend their little city, but in the darkness of a night the French gained admission into the ranks of the Americans by deception, and when the attack when the attack was made the Frenchman sounded the Austrian rally in due form. No sooner than the man arose to fight than the Frenchman sounded a retreat on his trumpet. The Austrians were deceived by the signal and went off on a retreat in a moment. The Frenchmen rode into the city without striking a blow. Many a time we find an enemy in the ranks of the church and this deceiver sounds a retreat signal. At the sound of the note for retreat the church rings, pell-mell and the enemy rides in without having to strike a blow.

We were having a great revival in our church and community. Men were under conviction and all the church services were crowded with anxious listeners. The visiting preacher was pounding the facts of sin with telling results. All at once a child seemed to settle down over the services, and I knew that something was wrong. The next day reports began to float in and to my utter chagrin, I know them to be false through and through. Quickly I traced them to their source and discovered that the child had mistaken these reports and that under cover he had circulated them to the hurt of the meeting. When a pastor is holding a revival that is worth while, he needs not be surprised at any moment to hear any kind of a report about the preacher, or the meeting. When something is going on in the kingdom of God, the cohorts of the devil are never idle. If a revival fails to stir opposition, it is most likely that it has failed to convert sinners.

When I was a lad on the farm I used to watch the vultures with quite a bit of interest. I have watched them as they would fly high and then I have seen them curve their wings and come toward the earth with great speed. High up in the sky them had been following the scent of carrion and they had come to the locality where it was coming up from the earth. They came down in flocks. Then I have watched them as they would fly over blooming Crab Apple, beautiful rose gardens and sweet smelling Honey-suckle, but they cared nothing for sweet smelling flowers. They were vultures and cared for carrion. They were looking for that which was the opposite of Sweet Shrub. In like manner, there are human beings who are out in search for that which smells to high heaven. They pass over the commendable qualities and virtues of the good and settle down on that which is vile and repulsive. Where there is carrion in human society, there the human vultures will gather.

REAL PROGRESS AT CLANTON
The enclosed list of subscribers to the Advocate puts us on the Honor Roll, with more than one for every ten members. This success is due to the untiring efforts of Mrs. L. J. Stewart and her committee. They have gone cheerfully on with the work until they have gone over the top.

Our prayer meeting is still growing in interest, our largest attendance being 175 on the night that Dr. Andrews presided at the Quarterly Conference on Sunday morning. In spite of our Sunday morning congregations and also the evening services are making steady increase in attendance. The Church School is growing in proportion to the development in other departments of the church.

It will be able to report all financial obligations met in full for the first half of the year when our District Conference convenes in Selma.

We have just completed a survey of the city, which shows that we have more than 130 prospects for membership in the church. Many of these are the children of the church, but give their preference as Methodists. Others are members in other communities and give their preference as Clanton Methodist Church. We shall do our best to bring a large percentage of these into our fold.—T. C. Casaday, Pastor.

POLITICS NEVER COOLS—

Alabama is never free of political campaigns—politics just cools down a little occasionally. In eight months Alabama will be in the throes of another hot political campaign. Already the political writers of the big daily newspapers are speculating on the gubernatorial race next spring and trying to locate suitable men to put against the old warhorse, Bibb Graves.

On two or three occasions the political enemies have thought they had him down and out, when to their amazement he bobs up stronger than ever, and that is the present status of the case.

Senator John H. Bankhead will be a candidate to succeed himself next year, and it would be a compelling fact that he deserves for Alabama to elect him without opposition, but that is hardly to be expected.

During his ten years service in the senate, Senator John Bankhead has become the outstanding farm leader of the nation. No other member of congress has perhaps so well versed in the agricultural conditions in the United States as Senator Bankhead. Alabama should delight in electing him to the Senate.—Mountain Eagle.

Previews from the Press

(By MARK L. TUCKER)

The next governor of Alabama sent us subscription to the Andalusia Star the past week end. No, it wasn't Chauncey Sparks—Andalusia Star.

Now, we'll worry until we find out who it is you're talking about—Alexandria City Outlook.

Bibb Graves subscribed to the News last week. Now we guess we'll have to vote for him because we couldn't turn against one of our paid-in-advance subscribers.—Covington News.

Atticus Mullin claims that the Bibb Graves band wagon is already well loaded but the Little Colonel is holding to the reins himself.—Greenville Advocate.

It is said that the Band Wagon of Col. Bibb Graves is crowded.—Luverne Journal.

We predict, unless signs change, that Bibb Graves will be the next governor.—Ft. Payne Journal.

We found one or two little paragraphs on Editor Mark L. Tucker's editorial page in the Chilton County News last week that did not mention the name of Bibb Graves and the Lee County Bulletin, Auburn, practically called on Alabama citizens to place Graves in the Governor's chair for another term without the expense of an election.—LaFayette Sun.

GOVERNOR. It appears that David Bibb Graves and Chauncey Sparks, runner-up in the 1938 campaign, will have a two-way battle in 1942 Governor's campaign. Graves, twice-governor of Alabama it seems is headed for a third term. We doubt seriously if Sparks would ever run him a close second if there were only two in the campaign.

(From the Sulligent News, May 15)

We have just returned from a trip that has carried us over various sections of the state. We enjoyed this trip for we picked up many ideas and learned how other people feel about things in general.

On this trip we found one outstanding fact—and that was the majority, and we mean the vast majority, of the many people that we talked to, want Bibb Graves for our next governor.

We picked up many opinions, and we found many who believe that Col. Graves should be given the job without opposition. . . . Others think that it will be fooling to go on and run against "the little Colonel."

Last week we quoted Mark Tucker of the Chilton County News, on this particular subject, and went further to say that he had also found the majority for Graves in some of our travels. Since then we have had one or two other samples of the state and still find the same opinion.

(From The York Journal, May 15).

UNITY IN ALABAMA

Never in our memory has there been such unanimity of thought in Alabama as to the choice of a next Governor.

It seems that nearly all factions and groups are agreed that Col. Graves, twice Governor of Alabama, is the man.

There have been repeated efforts to bring other men, but the blight of public apathy has killed every suggested candidate.

Thus it is possible that Alabamians next year will name their Governor by what amounts to acclamation. Doubtless there will be another candidate or two, but unless things change rapidly in the next 12 months these other candidates will be running more with the expectation of publicity than with the hope of election.

Some observers may see in this situation an unhealthy condition in Alabama politics. The Times writes that "the Administration is including Anniston, units of the state from a death of leadership. Yet there is reason for satisfaction in the fact that, in times of stress like these, most Alabamians can turn with confidence to a man twice in harness."

(From The Anniston Times, May 15, 1941).

Quite a bit of talk going round about a fellow known as "Bibb the Builder" being named next governor of Alabama. Everybody seems agreed that the office is his for the asking.—Huntsboro Press.

Alabama Wants Bibb Graves For Governor Again

Graves Draws Principal Issues For 1942 Race

County Home Rule And Larger Slice Of State Revenue Advocated

By ATTICUS MULLIN
MOBILE, ALA.—What will become the two most important issues in the coming gubernatorial campaign, issues which have been smoldering under the surface for the last two years, were brought out into the open here Wednesday evening by Col. Bibb Graves, guest speaker at the banquet of county commissioners and probate judges.

Col. Graves did not discuss politics in a carefully prepared address, but he knew what would bring gubernatorial officials to their feet and he boldly announced that the counties were entitled to a more equitable distribution of the taxes that are raised in Alabama and that the trend toward centralized State government must not only be questioned but that what has been done to take away from the counties their sovereignty must be undone and local self-government restored.

It will be remembered that county officials were terribly displeased with the action of the legislature regarding the distribution of tax money and more displeased with the increase in the powers of State officials to regulate to some extent county finances and county affairs.

Col. Graves pleased the county officials and it was evident that he pleased them when they tore up the hands applauding. They were already applauded him vociferously before he started his speech and there were many calls from the banquet floor which indicated that Graves was wanted for governor next time.

276 Opinions
The writer does not want to put it too mildly by saying that Col. Graves was the hero of the convention and that his name was on the tongue of every county official from the time they began until late Thursday afternoon. We talked to 276 delegates to the convention, and we got 276 probate judges and county commissioners. They came from 63 of the 67 counties of Alabama. Of course there were more from some counties than others but in the cross-section we got of the convention, there was not a single voice raised against Graves for governor next time. It is true that four or five of those with whom the writer talked did not say they were for Graves but they would not say they were against him. In fact, most of all the probate judges and commissioners, with whom we talked, they might as well have their names as being strongly for Graves.

(From The Montgomery Advertiser, May 23, 1941).

THE COLONEL AND THE SQUIRE

A Birmingham daily burst forth with a story designed by its political writer to start Alabama voters to thinking about the possibility of opposition to Col. Bibb Graves for the Governor's chair next year.

The headline declared that Graves supporters, said that Squire Chauncey Sparks' runner-up to Frank Dixon in the last campaign, would be "the man to beat."

Perhaps few times in the history of the state has one man appeared as powerful a full year before the election, as does Col. Graves at the present time. Political observers from Mobile to Ardmore declare that if the election were held now that Graves would avalanche anyone who dared test him.

The daily declared that Judge Sparks is causing Graves supporters to guard against becoming over-confident, and that they were giving John Peach, present administration candidate, little consideration. The fact is, Peach nor Sparks either one is getting much attention.

The Barbour Squire, although a candidate with much dignity and many friends, is hardly a match for a man who is the only Alabamian who has served two four-year terms as governor, and who now has a well operating organization of friends from one end of the state to the other.

(From The Cullman Banner, May 15, 1941).

Under the heading: "Bibb Graves Band Wagon Overcrowded," Atticus Mullin writes in the Montgomery Advertiser, May 20th:

In the last few months politicians of varying degrees of strength have been importuning men close to Col. Graves to allow them to become county managers in the gubernatorial election next year wherein they feel certain Col. Graves will be a victor.

This writer has not seen "Bibb Graves" in months except on one or two occasions and is not in his confidence but we get a pretty good idea about why the great crowds are besieging his offices in the First National Bank Building when he is in Montgomery. Political factions within the various counties are now jockeying for position as they did in the last campaign for governor when Dixon was elected. In the first campaign for governor when Dixon was not the favorite you had to go usually under the cover of the stars to find campaign managers. But in his last campaign, when it looked as if Dixon had a cinch they ran over each other to be his campaign managers.

Bandwagon Creaks

Now we learn three-cents and four of old Dixon county campaign managers are trying to retain their county "bigness" or regain it by becoming Graves managers, and that thousands of all-time Graves men are also trying to become county managers. We learn that the heads of every important department in the Dixon administration are either outspoken for Graves, or have made every effort to connect themselves with him. It is learned that three of the smaller department heads have not as yet been able to make contacts although two of them have tried. As stated in the beginning of this article, we have not talked with Col. Graves in six months and possibly will not talk to him in another six months. But we know that his attitude has been that he did not need county managers. In fact he has never liked the idea, even of a Statewide campaign manager. He has, it will be remembered, been a candidate for the governor of Alabama three times already and has been successful in two of his campaigns. This will be his fourth venture and he starts out a favorite.

Needs More Now

There is not a successful politician in any county of Alabama who could help Col. Graves win the governorship because the Colonel is a favorite in every county. And there is not a successful politician in Alabama who does not possess, as a cherished possession, political enemies. Col. Graves knows that. And why should Col. Graves, with apparently no opposition in every county of Alabama for now, select a county campaign manager thereby losing at least a part of the votes he would undoubtedly get? He has never done it and we wonder if the pressure and the pilgrimages to Montgomery will change Col. Graves?

Who can say he realizes that he has a hard fight on his hands in his gubernatorial ambitions, must of necessity choose county campaign managers. He must do that because to win he must have at least one faction in a majority of the counties for him. Col. Graves has been successful in every election in every county for him would stand to lose at least 75,000 and perhaps 100,000 votes if he named county managers in each county. Because, to be good, a county manager must have a faction. And if he has a faction there is another faction that would stay up at night to cut his throat politically speaking.

We have watched the struggle among factions in many counties to drive the bandwagon of Col. Graves in their respective counties. We wonder if the Little Colonel has watched it, too?

Graves, Bankhead Tunnel Both Draw Admirers

By GROVER C. HALL, JR.

MOBILE, ALA.—The two things at the convention of the Alabama Association of the Admiration of Governor Simmons, city attorney for Opp, probably expressed the most vivid impression of the tunnel. Speaking of its blue and cream tile and bright lights, Simmons summed it up to this: "It looks like a great long bathroom."

(From the Alabama Journal, May 22, 1941).

Colonel Graves and "my wife Dix" came here from their Gulf Shores villa, tanned and hale. The colonel appeared unusually fresh. But he was no more hale, or animated—that's scarcely possible.

Here in the lobby he stood for a long time and received. Occasionally he took the lift upstairs for a political conference.

"This is our bath," he roared, putting his arm about H. C. Culverhouse, member the Jefferson County ruling body.

What he meant was that in 1929, as his first term was ending, he and Culverhouse laid the groundwork for the organization.

We had to get our story over to the legislature and we wouldn't do it as individuals," Culverhouse explained. Culverhouse was its first president.

Col. Graves' address perhaps struck the keynote of his campaign during next year. He urged a return to local self government and asserted that there must be a reallocation of revenue in this state (to city and county arms).

Graves was the only gubernatorial

THIS WEEK IN NATIONAL DEFENSE

Federal Loan Administrator Jones announced the allocation of $450,000,000 for use in enlarging and improving the bomber program by building Government-owned plants and increasing the supply of essential materials.

The War Department announced the award of contracts totaling $32,500,000 for 22-ton bombers to be produced by the following plants: Ford, General Motors, North, Tex., and Tulsa, Okla. The Department described the award of contracts as "a major step toward the 500 bombers a month goal" set by the President when he said the democracy must achieve superiority in the air. OPM Director Knudsen asked airplane manufacturers to prepare to leave undisciplined additional numbers of heavy bombers.

The Navy reported its air program "slightly ahead of schedule" with 350 planes on hand May 1, as compared to 2172 ten months before. The Department said that the Navy's training program will supply sufficient pilots for 15,000 planes, its goal.

Ships

The Maritime Commission announced the delivery of seven new ships, an addition of 50,200 tons, to the American merchant fleet. The Senate and House enacted legislation authorizing the President to recruit foreign shipbuilding immobilized in U. S. ports. The Maritime Commission Land asked newspaper editors, radio stations and other sources of public information to withhold news of merchant ships used in aid Britain and other democracies.

Aid To Europe

President Roosevelt authorized the dispatch of two merchant ships to Ireland with $300,000 worth of food distribution to civilians under supervision of the Red Cross. The ships will sail under Irish registry with Irish crews.

Civilian Defense

President Roosevelt established an Office of Civilian Defense and appointed New York's Mayor LaGuardia Director to carry out programs for the protection of life and property in emergency with the volunteer help of men, women and children throughout the nation. The office will organize and protect vital utilities in the event of attack, carry on first aid and death problems of welfare, evacuation, food and food.

FBI Director Hoover announced that 150,000 local law enforcement officers are being enlisted in a voluntary plan to rout fifth columnists.

Selective Service

Congress announced the Selective Service Act to exempt from service under the Act former regulars and reservists of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard. The act also announced that although the Army has sufficient dental and veterinary officers, dentists and veterinarians and students in these professions should be deferred to avoid a civilian shortage.

The OPM informed Selective Service Headquarters that there would be a shortage in the metal-working ranks and urged deferment to avoid this OPM pointed out that when a skilled worker is inducted, the plant loses not only the individual but also the time of a skilled man needed to train a replacement.

Labor Disputes

OPM Associate Hillman, speaking of New York, said "there are no insoluble problems in management-labor relations . . . only some prejudices, . . . that must be eliminated" to create the "mutual trust which must animate all sound labor policy." Cooperation as a result, he said, when labor problems are treated not as a "nuisance" but "worthy of serious study and consideration."

Foreign Affairs

Agriculture Secretary Wickard speaking at Hutchinson, Kansas, said: "In Latin America many countries are watching to see whether we can make good our promise or . . . simply talk and gesture . . . Millions of people are watching us who can't go to the polls unless our help is made effective."

Nazis and Fascists are watching us as we speak of justice and division. . . . fill this kind of indecision and division . . . they'll rule the world."

War Secretary Stimson and Navy Secretary Knox told their press conferences the Neutrality Act, which prohibits American shipping in combat zones.

candidate here, Chauncey Sparks, Eufaula, and John H. Peach, of Dalton, being conspicuous by their absence.

Atticus Mullin, in the Montgomery Advertiser, reports everything is getting on the Graves bandwagon. The it is sure to be a Graves landslide. Ft. Payne Journal says Graves is to be our Governor. . . . Other papers on the state make like statements. . . . At the back of up the observation that Graves is the man—anyone coming against the "little Colonel" is going to waste time and money. . . . Graves is certain to be the next Governor of Alabama.—York Journal.

50 MILE PER HOUR THRESHER MACHINE
An economy "trailer" threshing machine, developed to help farmers of the South grow more soil-building crops, has been demonstrated in Alabama and other states.

The new machine is the product of research and trials conducted by the Tennessee Valley Authority in cooperation with state agricultural experiment stations, and extension services of Valley states. It is designed especially for this section of the country where farms are small and fields small and usually sloping.

Mounted on rubber tires, the new thrasher is moved about as a trailer behind a passenger car or truck at fast as 50 miles an hour. Only a few minutes are required to set it up for a new job or to get ready to move again.

FARMERS URGED TO SAVE ALL OATS POSSIBLE
To meet an expected big demand for seed oats next Fall, Alabama farmers are being urged to "save every oat seed possible" for planting next Fall.

Since oats are "one of the most effective and satisfactory winter cover crops and may be used in qualifying for payments under the Alabama Conservation Plan," the state A.A.A. Committee and Extension workers are urging county and community committees to encourage and help farmers save all seed oats possible for planting by themselves and their neighbors next Fall.

zones of the seas. Addressing the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, Mr. Knox said the U. S. must be prepared to make sacrifices "that will match any sacrifices made by any generation of Americans before us."

Secretary of State Hull, speaking in Washington, said control of the seas is a prime objective of the Axis and his program for world domination.

Short the Axis succeeded, Mr. Hull said, all countries will face economic enslavement and control of international business by military and political forces.

Foreign Trade
President Roosevelt, opening Foreign Trade Week, said "the dictator nations already have achieved serious economic encirclement of the U. S." He said all Americans should fight against the economic slavery to which Germany and her allies would subject the world.

Raymond Geist, State Department Chief of Commercial Affairs, speaking in New York, said the international situation poses the question whether the peril confronting the nation "lies more in the struggle itself or in the cancerous post-war economic process" of an unfair peace. He said it would be fatal if Germany won because the U. S. would be compelled to adopt economic methods "which would slowly undermine our prosperity and our democratic way of life."

Secretary of State Hull said that after the war all nations should cooperate in international trade free from discrimination.

Other Activities
Congress increased the pay of parachute troop officers by $100 a month and the pay of enlisted parachutists by $50 a month, and authorized training of enlisted men as pilots. . . The Army announced testing of secret methods of combating blitz warfare. . . The Treasury sold $257,650,000 of Defense Bonds in the first 17 days "a better than expected" . . . The president reduced his request for relief funds for 1942 by $109,000,000. The Commerce Department reported exports to Japan running 48 per cent less than last year.

We doubt if Messer. Hitler and Mussolini think highly of their British antagonist, Winston Churchill and what he thinks is on record?

We see where a moving picture company has paid $283,000 for the film rights of a play. There's no telling how many plays a company can buy for $283,000.

Frankly, brethren and sisters, if you have the money, we know of no better buy than a subscription to The Chilton County News. (After all, even an editor has to eat.)

Feed Is Most Important Item In Poultry Raising
By PAT H. SMITH
County Agent, Chilton County

Feed is the largest single item in the cost of keeping chickens, therefore, utmost care should be taken to be sure that the desired results are gotten from the feed that you use.

In feeding, it is desirable to use feed that will produce large, vigorous, laying hens.

Feed a large amount of whole grain. This develops a large gizzard in the pullets which will enable them to consume and digest more mash when they become laying hens.

Feed a large amount of green feed should be cut and kept before them if a range cannot be supplied. This is important in producing good layers. Green feeds are not only important in feeding growing birds but should also be used in poultry rations as a year-round feeding practice.

It is our desire that every Chilton County poultry producer will be able to produce better layers this year than he has ever produced before and to produce them cheap as possible. In addition to feeding large quantities of scratch grain, feed a growing mash until the pullets are about ready to go in the laying house. A good home-mixed growing mash may be made by mixing:

100 pounds of 26 per cent supplement and 200 pounds of corn meal (preferably yellow corn meal).

The mash feed should gradually be changed from a growing mash to a laying mash after the pullets have developed to a large size and are reasonably fat or about about the time the pullets are ready for the laying house. A good home-mixed laying mash may be made by mixing:

100 pounds of 26 per cent supplement and 100 pounds of corn meal (preferably yellow).

Continue to feed whole grain and have plenty of water and green feed available.

Vaccinate Pullets
Growing pullets should be vaccinated against fowl pox, commonly called "sore head" as soon as the surplus cockerels are sold. Usually the pullets will be 10 to 12 weeks of age at this time.

The most common method of vaccination is the "dipping" method. The equipment needed for this method can be made by inserting two sewing machine needles into a cork stopper about one-eighth inch apart.

The needles are dipped into the fowl pox vaccine and then stuck through the web, lower side in the bend of the pullet's wing. Cockerels which are to be kept for breeding purposes should be vaccinated too. However, the cockerels which are to be sold should not be vaccinated and should be separated from the pullets before vaccinating.

Worms
Pullets should be individually treated for worms. A worm pill should be given at the same time you vaccinate.

Coccidiosis
Watch out for this common disease in growing pullets. The first sign of coccidiosis is the drooping of the wings, drop, feathers bed-matted, ruffled, and blood may be found on the floor and in the droppings. Clean your house thoroughly and give the birds 40 per cent dry bitermilk mash for 3 days.

Treatment for other diseases, common to poultry may be found on pages 273, 274 and 275 of the Alabama Handbook of Agriculture, 3rd edition. Yours for more profitable poultry on Chilton County farms.

FARMERS CAN SELL THEIR LOAN COTTON
All 1937 loan cotton has been taken over by the Government but cotton produced in 1938, 1939 and 1940 and placed in the Government loan can be reclaimed by the producer for resale if he desires.

Producers, to get full value from loan cotton, should study the staple and grade analysis of their loan cotton and figure carrying charges of around three-fourths cents for each year it has been in storage. Add carrying charges to the price advanced on the loan note, and subtract this from the current spot market price of cotton to get a fair indication of producer's equity in the cotton.

If producers have lost notes they may obtain the grade, staple and weight of cotton bales by writing to Commodity Credit Corporation, Birmingham.

The convention committee, Department of Alabama Spanish-American War Veterans has announced all in readiness for the annual convention to be held in Fairhope, June 1, 2nd and 3rd. All members and those who are not members are cordially invited to attend.

Alabama Youth Defense Day Will Be Observed

State-wide response has been given a proclamation by Gov. Frank M. Dixon to celebrate Thursday, June 26 as Alabama Youth Defense Day.

Parades and demonstrations are being planned by communities in all parts of the State to center around a major observance in Montgomery. Gov. Dixon will speak from the steps of the Capitol. His immediate audience will be youth delegates who will be elected by organization throughout the State, but his words will be carried to young men and women gathered in hundreds of communities.

Ceremonies at which the Governor's address will be broadcast will include speeches by local citizens and youth.

Many of these programs will be held at National Youth Administration projects. Gov. Dixon in his proclamation has asked citizens to visit the projects to see the part youth is taking in the defense program.

The day chosen for the celebration is the birthday of the National Youth Administration. This agency of the New Deal was created by executive order of President Roosevelt on June 26, 1935. Gov. Dixon remarked that it is most appropriate this date be selected for the celebration because of NYA's part in building an army of useful citizens.

The program at the Capitol in Montgomery will be preceded by a sight-seeing tour for the youth delegates. Points of interest to be seen in addition to the Capitol will include the Archives Building and the home of Jefferson Davis.

At the Capitol ceremony, Gov. Dixon will present the United States Flag and the State Flag to the youth delegation. A parade up Dexter Avenue will precede the ceremony.

Power Shortage Looms In Southeast

Federal Agencies and Power Companies Cooperate In Energy

May 25, 1941—Thomas W. Martin, president Alabama Power Company, commenting on the advertisement bearing the signatures of Federal Power Commission, Office of Production Management, the War Department, Tennessee Valley Authority, and a group of private electric companies in the Southeast, and appearing in the daily press, stated:

"The nation is engaged in a strenuous effort to complete its preparations for defense in the shortest possible time. Every part of the country is affected and every part is making its contribution."

"In the Southeastern part of the United States, national defense activities have greatly increased the use of electric power in industry. Large blocks of power, in ever-increasing quantities, have been going into such industries as aluminum, iron and steel, shipbuilding, chemical and electrometallurgical products, and many others. This increase in power demand has been experienced in all the Southeastern States. It is a general condition which applies to all the systems serving the region."

"Power demands in much of the area are currently about 25% above those of last year. A normal increase would have been about 5%, so that an additional load of some 20% of last year's load has been super-imposed upon the normal increase. Every indication is that requirements of power for national defense will increase still further."

"The power supply of the Southeastern States, both public and private, is normally generated largely in hydro-electric plants, supplemented by generation from steam plants. The hydro system includes storage reservoirs, the function of which is to supply water during the dry season (normally the Fall of the year) to operate power plants which make a vital contribution toward meeting the power demands. If these reservoirs should become exhausted, a serious power shortage would result."

"This year, the power systems in the Southeast had to face an unusual combination of adverse factors. With power demands at an all-time high because of national defense loads, river flows in much of the area have since the first of the year been at the lowest levels in 37 years. The power systems in the region, have been conserving their stored water to the utmost by operating every available steam plant in large and small. No plant has been kept out of service because it was inefficient. Regardless of cost, every available cubic foot of stored water has been conserved, for the manufacture of products to be used in national defense is paramount, and the cost cannot be counted at such a time."

"Notwithstanding all these efforts toward conserving the resources, the combination of high power demands and low river flows has caused the depletion of stored water reserves at such a rate that, if continued, a serious situation would result."

"Because of the seriousness of this problem, which is national in scope, in relation to the defense effort, and in relation to the respect to the river and the power systems, the power systems in both public and private, and departments of the United States government are most directly concerned with the continued production of national defense material, and to the customers of the utility systems in the Southeast to reduce their requirements of power. So important a situation may require some temporary inconveniences, but it will prevent a more drastic curtailment a few weeks hence, and it will insure the continued flow of power into the manufacture of defense products."

"Supplementing existing power resources, the power systems in the region will have completed a period of about six months of operation of steam plants with a capacity of 340,000 kilowatts. Plants which will be almost completely available will be a period of about six months of operation of steam plants with a capacity of 340,000 kilowatts. Plants which will be almost completely available will be a period of about six months of operation of steam plants with a capacity of 340,000 kilowatts."

"Mr. Martin said that an Alabama Power Company's new 100,000 kilowatt plant at Birmingham, although not completed, is being utilized for the production of power. This plant is capable of producing nearly 100,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity each day. The plant is under construction in other states are being rushed to completion and Alabama Power Company has on order 40,000 kilowatt generators to be installed at its Clanton plant."

"In joining with the government agencies and other power companies in making an appeal for voluntary curtailment of non-essential lighting, signs, and other power-consuming activities, Mr. Martin said that all our customers, as patriotic citizens, would gladly do their part to make it possible for the defense activities in the Southeast to proceed without a pause under the step we hope that our customers will forego, insofar as possible, the use of electricity for such non-essential purposes as sign, decorative window light, light recreation lighting, ornamental street lighting and other similar activities. It is our hope that general rationalization of the use of electricity will occur soon."

MT. CARMEL—Beat 3

The W. M. S. met at the church Saturday p.m. May 17, at 2:30. Business was attended to and the program was carried out with success. After program, refreshments were served.

Each one by Mrs. Gracie Clecker, urged all W. M. S. members to bring with us each third Sunday p.m. 2:00 o'clock and let's get our W. M. going in the right way again.

A large crowd from here attended the Memorial Day Service at Old Carmel near Adams Sunday, May 19. Several from this community attended the funeral of Mrs. Ray, who died Monday at her home here. We went to extend our heartfelt sympathy to the family and may God's rich blessings reach each one of them.

We wish to invite everyone to come to our Memorial Services Sunday, June 1. We're expecting some good singing beside the services and dinner in the grove. This says for all who will to come bringing a basket of lunch and let's enjoy the day.

Every business man in Clanton has a clear understanding of the importance of agricultural prosperity for their own well-being, we believe, of them are learning.

With all free publicity that comes to this paper newspaper editors are developing into a mighty shot. We hit a bull's eye every time we aim at the waste basket.—Glen Reaper.

AN APPEAL

To All Users Of Electric Light, Heat And Power

THE national defense program calls for an all-time high in production. Production of raw materials, aluminum, steel and finished products must go forward on an unheard of scale.

The Southeastern area is a large contributor to this defense production. In addition, the area, has been chosen for the location of many Army cantonments, air training bases, munitions plants and other defense facilities.

These defense activities require a great volume of power. The continued supply of this power throughout the emergency must not be interrupted or curtailed. This year an unprecedented drouth threatens that power supply throughout the Southeast.

Large additions to power supply for the region are now under top speed construction by T.V.A. and private companies. They are nearing completion. But, until these new sources of supply are actually delivering power, and especially during the next few months, it is imperative in the interest of defense that power be carefully conserved.

Even if normal rainfall should end the drouth, you will still be asked not to waste power. For every kilowatt hour you conserve at this time adds that much to the nation's capacity for defense.

The Federal Power Commission and the public and private power agencies in the area are cooperating on improved arrangements for interchange between the several systems in order to make every potential kilowatt hour available. But this may not prove enough to meet the emergency.

The undersigned governmental agencies and companies, therefore, appeal to the public to join immediately in a voluntary campaign of economy in the use of electricity. Such economy of use is a patriotic necessity.

If the arrangements for interchange of power are successful in making larger supplies of electricity available and the response to this appeal is sufficiently general and spontaneous, further drastic curtailment may be long postponed or, perhaps, forestalled altogether.

Your cooperation is needed.

Spirit of Old West Revived by Posse

Mounted Texas Group Aids
In Civic Projects.

EL PASO, TEXAS.—Originated four years ago by a group of business and professional men who love horses, like to have a good time and to serve when necessary as an adjunct to law-enforcement agencies, the El Paso's Sheriff's posse started something in the Southwest that is growing daily—a revival of the spirit of the Old West.

The posse has undertaken scores of activities to further the revival of the color of frontier days. Possemen ride to welcome visitors to El Paso, participate in parades and civic functions.

Up until now the posse has never been called on duty, but its membership provides an organization that is ready to work as well as play.

At present more than 100 members own the best and equipment, side arms and uniforms consisting of maroon shirts, gold ties and tan riding breeches.

The posse members are not directly connected with the sheriff's office, although Sheriff Clara Fox, prominent Southwest peace officer, and two of his deputies are posse members.

The posse meets twice each week for its sessions. Between meetings the posse meets afternoons and overnight rides near El Paso, goat-roping contests at the posse corral, barbecue and picnics and stage their shows.

Qualifications for membership are that a man be a reputable citizen, own a horse and riding equipment and be willing to give part of his time to the posse's activities. A $25 initiation fee is charged and yearly dues are $12.

Whittler Takes His Time To Carve Rare Puzzle

PUEBLO, COLO.—About six months ago Frank Cooper got a hankerin' to do some wood whittlin'.

So he got a piece of sugar pine and started to cut out a cowboy ridin' a bronc.

Four hundred hours later young Cooper had a finished cowboy, colored with water-paints and everything.

The wooden cowboy was something different.

First the rider could be taken off the horse.

The hat, chaps and spurs could be taken off the rider.

Then the saddle and hackamore would come off the horse.

Why, it almost took a jigsaw artist to put the cowboy and horse together again.

Frank now is whittlin' away on another piece of pine.

Australian Bush May Be Turned Into War Garden

CANBERRA.—Discovery that the Blackfellow of Australia can find a living in the bush where the white man would starve has led to a proposal that wild herbs be used to supplement the production of those who are digging for victory in the war.

Mrs. M. Dadsell has just completed a list of the aborigines' wild vegetables in the vicinity of Alice Springs, and pronounces them as nutritious as the white man's cultivated supplies.

The solanum leaf and fruit take the place of the tomato, the weed portulaca is as good as the carrot, turnip or turnip, and another leafy root, celandrine, is equivalent to cabbage, lettuce or spinach.

Telescopes Take Guesswork
Out of Peak Spotting

LAKE PLACID, N. Y.—Guesswork in spotting the peaks of the northern Adirondack range has been largely eliminated for travelers up the Whiteface Mountain Memorial highway.

As each visitor passes the toll-house he is presented with a chart, which identifies the principal mountains, lakes, and rivers, and gives the elevation of the different peaks.

At strategic points along the highway powerful telescopes have been placed. Here the mountain "climber" can adjust the sights to suit his vision and the weather conditions, and gaze away at the almost limitless panorama.

Patterson Hicks Gives Kiwanis Club Short
High School History

At a recent meeting of the Clanton Kiwanis Club Patterson Hicks gave some interesting facts regarding the growth of the modern high school. The high school as we know it today is an outgrowth of the industrial expansion of the country followed the Civil War. The high school was followed by the United States dates back to early colonial days when it was the purpose of the high school to prepare for college those few promising young men of the community who were to be leaders of the future. The first school established was the old Latin Grammar school. This school was followed by the academy which had its beginning about 1750, and by 1850 the academies had increased to 6097 in number. A few of these academies are still in existence and doing a fine job of teaching. The private military school for boys of which there are many excellent ones in the United States today is an outgrowth of the academy.

The modern high school came about as a result of several things: First the working man began to make more money and thereby raise his standard of living. One of his first desires was to give his children a better education. He demanded that the public provide this schooling and pay for it with tax money. Child labor laws were made more rigid and children found it harder to get employment, therefore they were allowed more time in which to attend school. The industrial development of the country took more and more people away from agriculture and thereby less labor was needed in the fields. The labor unions became more active in the interest of education for his children and the decrease of competition of child labor with that of adults. Compulsory school attendance laws enforced many children to attend school in the last quarter of the nineteenth century. The consolidation of schools and the transportation of children to and from school played no small part in the growth of the modern high school.

It is interesting to notice what the above facts have done for the growth of the high school of today. The public high schools as we know them today were established in the last quarter of the nineteenth century. They met with many serious objections, including court trials to decide if they were constitutional to tax the people to provide the children with high school instruction. Objections from denominational and private schools, and the criticism from some of the wealthier people that the free high schools were pauper schools, and therefore were attended only by the poorer classes.

In spite of these handicaps the high school grew because it met a need in the educational scheme of this country. By 1900 there was enrolled in the various types of high schools of the United States 700,000 boys and girls. Each ten years from then until 1930 the high school enrollment doubled, and in 1930 one half the population of the United States between the ages of 14 and 17 years enrolled in high school. In 1940 two-thirds of this population between 14 and 17 years were enrolled in the high school. In 1939 six and one half million boys and girls were enrolled in the high schools of this country. When we look at figures such as these we are not surprised that school expenses have doubled, tripled and multiplied ten and twenty times during the life of a middle aged man.

Kiwanis Plan Huge Celebration In Atlanta

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Elaborate plans are being formulated by officials of Alabama Kiwanis Clubs for the part in the state's clubs will play in the Kiwanis International Convention next month in Atlanta.

With the Atlanta Minstrels, a group composed almost entirely of Kiwanians, scheduled to assume the limelight in the entertainment at the convention, it is expected hundreds of Alabama Kiwanians will trek to the Georgia metropolis for the round of activity.

C. Lee, a member of the Birmingham Club and a member of the public affairs committee of Kiwanis International, is cooperation with Charles Harris, lieutenant governor of Kiwanis, in making plans to obtain the best representation possible from the Alabama clubs at the convention. Points out that never before has the Alabama group had as good an opportunity as this toward attending and enjoying an international meeting. This marks the first time in several years the convention has been brought South.

With the exception of Georgia the best attendance should come from the Alabama clubs.

We wish to thank all of you who helped and we sincerely hope and trust that you will be back with us a year from now.—H. T. Ousley, chairman.

BOY SCOUTS

as any Scouting has ever faced. The concept of personal responsibility, rights and obligations, the validity of the individual's conscience as the arbiter of right and wrong—these ideals toward which America has moved through history are attacked by dynamic forces in the world today. Scouting is the only force that can meet this and its first task is to demonstrate its vitality in the lives and actions of its members.

On February 8, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Honorary President of the Boy Scouts of America, said:

"The Boy Scouts of today are approaching manhood on the basis of the world's history. Recent events have threatened the security of free men everywhere, and the democratic way of life is being challenged in many parts of the world. The United States must be strong if our free way of life is to be maintained. One of our chief policies we, as a nation, have adopted the motto of the Boy Scout organization—BE PREPARED."

"You who are members of the Boy Scouts have a great opportunity to do your part in this great task. You have opportunities in your Scouting Program to develop those physical and mental qualities upon which the survival of a self-governing community depends."

The free way of life is the exacting way of life. It demands of its citizens the ability to think straight and to act decisively on the basis of clear moral principles. Thus, the program of Scouting is designed to help boys develop skills, make themselves physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight. It prepares them to face a world in which moral values are being denied. If the Scout Program helps give youth the faith and strength to act as free men, then Scouting is doing its job.

Since the Boy Scouts of America was incorporated on February 8, 1910, 9,382,416 persons have been active in the Movement. Membership on December 31, 1940, was 1,485,613 a gain of 67 per cent over 1939. There were 40,959 Troops, and 7,045 Packs, an increase of 7.5 per cent.

And yet in view of the expressed wish of boys to become Scouts, we should not take too much satisfaction in our accomplishment. Nine out of every twelve boys want to enter Scouting, but our present Troops provide opportunity for only four of these nine boys. Our responsibility is to see that the other five have a chance to be Scouts through the organization of more Troops.

There are more than 400 boys in Clanton who would like to be Scouts but cannot. It is regrettable that they do not have this opportunity. We have only one Troop of 15 boys, Mr. Fred Bucklewe is Scoutmaster and James Carl Martin is Assistant Scoutmaster. In Chilton County we have another Troop of 13 boys at Thorby with Mr. Phares Raybon as Scoutmaster. Two additional Troops are in the process of organization, one in Maplesville and an additional Troop at Clanton.

A Clanton District has been organized under the Montgomery Council, and the work is under the direction of A. G. Bliss, Council Executive, and Wm. H. Edwards, Field Executive. Mr. D. W. Waite is District Chairman; Dr. C. O. Lawrence, Vice Chairman; Burton Mullins, District Commissioner. Other Committee Chairmen are: Patterson Hicks, Chairman of Advancement; Dr. J. E. Edgar, Chairman of Leadership Training; John Mullins, Chairman of Finance Committee; Reuben Lowe, Chairman of Camping Activities; and a District Extension Committee, Mr. L. J. Stewart and Mr. Cohen Stapp, Health and Safety Committee, Dr. Charles Moore, Dr. V. J. Griggs, Dr. C. O. Lawrence, and Mr. Fred Bucklewe; Publicity Committee, Mr. T. E. Wyatt and Mr. R. M. Tucker. Other members of the District Committee are: Dr. T. C. Casaday, Dr. Oscar Davis, Mr. R. W. Williamson, Mr. Sam Powers, and Mr. John Hollis.

This Committee is to direct the Boy Scout Program in Clanton for the year of 1941. An Advancement Program has been in progress under the supervision of Mr. Patterson Hicks. The Scouts had a Camporee in Clanton on April 4th and 5th and participated in the Council Camporee in Cramton Bowl in Montgomery on May 8th. The Troop secured "B" rating in the Rally Events. This activity under the direction of Mr. R. M. Lowe. In the Leadership Training, 16 leaders have finished the first part of the Training Course under the direction of Dr. J. E. Edgar.

Mr. John Mullins, Chairman of the Finance Committee, says that if this work is to continue, the Troop must be organized, that more boys be given the opportunity of joining this great Citizenship Training Movement, this Committee must have financial support. The need will be a minimum of $300.00 for the year 1941. This money will be used in cooperating with the Montgomery Area Council and in securing the services of the Field Executive.

A Committee of busy local men will act on all business establishments and individuals, on June 10 and 11 to give everyone an opportunity to contribute to the Cause of Better Boyhood.

"THE LEADER OF TOMORROW ARE IN KNEE BRACES TODAY —HELP THE BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT TO GIVE THEM BETTER CITIZENSHIP TRAINING."

Lights of New York by L. L. STEVENSON

Fate: Since he does not care to have his name known, he may as well be identified as Smith. Ten years ago, a Chicago doctor in the course of a physical checkup informed Smith that quite possibly he would not live more than five years. Smith left the office stunned but, nevertheless, decided to having such a short time left, he might as well get the most out of his remaining days. So he gave up his insurance business and came to New York. At the time, he became proficient enough to play in an amateur orchestra which was all he wanted. He also re-established himself in business and is now in comfortable circumstances. As a matter of fact, he might have forgotten the dire prediction entirely if he hadn't encountered a Chicago friend recently. The friend informed him that the doctor had been wrong a few weeks of the time he had set for Smith's death.

Encroachment: Male sanctuaries have become fewer and fewer. For some time, women have had the possession of barbershops. Recently, the University club, after years of stolid male dignity, let down the bars and held a dinner dance and the walls echoed with feminine laughter. Then the sedate Union club gave way with a reception and tea to which each member was allowed to take two women guests. Now the New York Athletic club has bowed to the feminine influence. Up to two years ago, women were not permitted to pass the portals except on very special occasions. Then the dining room was opened to them Saturday and Sunday evenings. Finally that restriction was removed. And as if that were not enough, what was once a broker's office has been turned into a cocktail room for women.

Past Tense: Eugene O'Neill was a gold prospector in Honduras. . . Jimmy Dorsey swung a pickaxe in a Shenandoah, Pa., coal mine before he began swinging the blues. Harry Salter was an Oklahoma oil-well digger. . . Ethel Merman was a stenographer and she kept a notebook handy. . . Margie Hart, strip teaser, was a milkmaid on a Missouri farm. . . Ruby Foo, who now owns a string of Chinese restaurants, was once a dishwasher in a Chicago hospital. . . Erdine Caldwell, who wrote that long-lived "Tobacco Road," was a stage hand in a burlesque theater. . . Henry Youngman was a job printer in Brooklyn. . . Don Edmond, society beautician, was a tourist guide in Cairo, Egypt. . . Ben Hecht was a handy man with a midwestern circus. . . Lucile Manners was a private secretary. . . and I used to sell Columbus and Cincinnati papers on the streets of Kenton, Ohio.

Switch: Over in Jersey, there is a roadhouse patronized largely by Germans. The other evening, two of this department's scouts, M. A. and S. S., dropped in just to see what was going on. It was a quiet night with family parties sitting around sedately eating and drinking. Just to see what would happen, M. A. went up to the orchestra leader and asked him to play the "Horst Wessel" song. The reply was that that couldn't be done. So M. A. asked him if he could play "La Marseillaise." Without delay, the orchestra swung into the French national anthem and all the Germans present stood up and sang it lustily.

Macabre: He is a big speed cop who patrols the Boston Post road in the vicinity of Marmaroneck. Many motorists know him and speak to him when they pass or when they happen to be stopped by a light beside where he has taken a stand. He's always smiling and affable except of course when the he has been some infraction of the law. Then, despite the salutations of the past, there is a ticket or an arrest. Even that he makes as painless as possible. So his hobby may come some what as a shock to many of his acquaintances. He never misses an execution at Sing Sing. The night one or more condemned men have to sit in the electric chair, he so arranged his tour of duty that he may proceed on up to Ossining and be a witness.

End Piece: Pretty, dainty, she is one of the season's most charming debs. Recently, a hostess who had arranged a dinner in her honor, asked her how she enjoyed being a debutante. The girl replied that it was fine; that she liked the attention shown her and the dances. There was just one drawback—at every dinner, she had to eat chicken, green peas and ice cream. The hostess reddened a bit, and as you may have guessed, a little later the debutante sat down to a dinner of chicken, green peas and ice cream.

This One-Dollar Bill

No Great Temptation CLEMONS, S. C.—On a study table, accessible to 2,300 Clemson college cadets, is a perfectly good dollar bill.

Cadet Theo Tsiripoulous put it there as an experiment a month ago. No one has touched it. A neatly printed note beside the money says: "Thou shalt not steal."

DEFENSE WORK FINDS 4-H GROUP PREPARED

The 117,492 boys and girls enrolled in 4-H Club work in Alabama are part of the largest rural youth organization in the world and are in a position to make great contribution to any national defense program that may be involved. More than 20,000 worthwhile projects in every phase of farm work are being carried on by state 4-H'ers and should be a real aid in increasing food, feed and livestock production, states T. A. Sims, state 4-H leader, Auburn.

IT'S CANNING TIME AGAIN

"It's come time again to be canning your peas, beans, carrots etc." says Martha Massey, Farm Security Administration home management supervisor reminds the 340 housewives in Chilton County who made out canning budgets for the year with her in January and February. "With prices on store-bought goods going up the way they are," Miss Massey says "home canning is going to be more important this year than ever before, especially for the few folks who have very little cash money to spend. "Every jar of home-grown food put on the pantry shelf this summer will not only bring its usual dividends of better health to your family, it will serve also to increase in value like money in the bank."

"Many of the women working with us are already expert canners," Miss Massey said. "Last year they put up over 83,000 quarts of fruits, vegetables and meats. But there are always a lot of new tricks about canning to be learned. We expect all women who possibly can to come and brush up on their canning techniques."

large number of our home-makers reached their standard canning goal requirement of 85 quarts of food for the family and we are striving this year to make it possible for every family to can at least last year's surplus and many will go beyond that."

When the average American family for unity he means that other people should fall in line with his view.

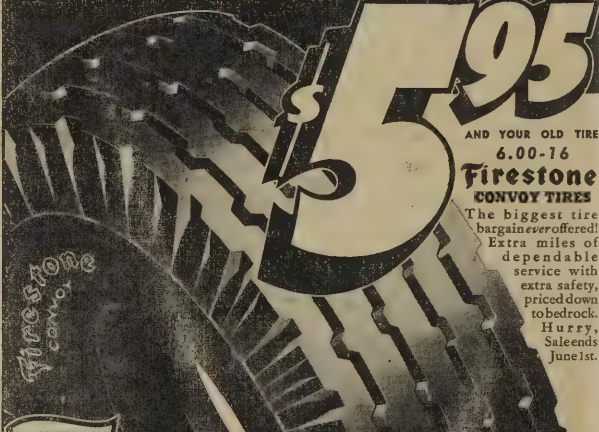

Few problems are capable of solution in mass meetings. Harangues seldom do more than stir emotion.

Experts Trace Faint Red Stars

Faded Suns, Perhaps 101 of Them, Seen in Eight Years' Search of Sky.

EVANSTON, ILL. — For eight years astronomers at Northwestern university have photographed and studied the sky in a quiet hunt for elusive celestial bodies known as faint red stars.

The other afternoon Dr. Oliver J. Lee, director of the university's Dearborn observatory, revealed a partial result of this search in announcing the discovery of 58 new faint red stars and the probable discovery of 45 others.

He reported this discovery before the annual meeting of the American Astronomical society in Philadelphia.

Red But Not Hot.

Only 55 such stars had previously been known in those zones of the sky, located in the Milky way, which were investigated by Dr. Lee and his associates, Ralph B. Baldwin, David W. Hamlin, and Richard F. Kinnaird.

The particular types of stars studied are known as classes R and N in the Draper classification. They are red in color, low in temperature, and have spectra characterized by bands of carbon and cyanogen.

Scientists are agreed that stars are constantly radiating away tremendous quantities of energy. Such a condition should result in their losing their luminosity, becoming in fact dead stars of the universe, small in size and relatively low in temperature. If such is the case, there should be great numbers of small stars of low temperature, like class R and N stars, even in our own region of the galactic system.

Reason to Expect More.

Heretofore astronomers have observed relatively few of such stars. The results of the present investigation therefore seem to prove that the number of such faint red stars in the universe is considerably greater than our present knowledge would indicate.

The region of the sky selected for the investigation—scientific terminology—centered at 0 degrees, plus 9 degrees, and plus 18 degrees of declination to a magnitude of 11.5.

This represents an area about as large as one-third of the whole hemisphere of the sky visible at any one time. A star of magnitude 11.5 is only 1/200th as bright as the faintest star visible to the naked eye.

In the course of the study more than 100,000 stars were photographed and examined. Of these, 117 were positively identified as faint red stars of classes R or N. The Northwestern astronomers listed with a question mark 45 others which they believe will prove to be of types R and N when they are observed by more powerful instruments than those of Dearborn observatory.

The paper read at Philadelphia by Dr. Lee presented findings which are only a part of a much broader investigation on which he and his associates have been engaged since 1932. This is a spectrographic survey of the whole sky, designed to classify all faint red stars up to a magnitude of 11.5.

Father Saved a German

Once, So Poilu Is Freed

VICHY.—Forty years ago Roland Regnier's father saved the life of a German marshal at Peking during the Boxer rebellion.

Today authorities revealed that Regnier had been freed from a German prison camp with full military honors and had rejoined his family in the occupied zone.

While in the camp, Regnier told another prisoner how his father, a French colonial infantryman, hauled Marshal Von Waldersee from a burning building just before it collapsed. The story worked its way up to officials, who checked and found it correct.

If somehow proclaimed the ultimate truth today, he would not live to see it accepted, even by the intelligent who seek it.

The human race owes most of its progress to the lives of obscure men and women, like the ordinary folks of Clanton.

MT. CARMEL

We are grateful to Bro. Hodges for the wonderful message he brought last Sunday and glad to have Mrs. Hodges. We are looking forward to having them back during revival services in July.

Next Sunday has been set aside as Memorial Day at Mt. Carmel church. A great day is planned with plenty of good quartet singing during the day. The public is extended a most cordial welcome, bring lunch and spend the day.

Our community was saddened last week when God saw fit to take Mrs. N. P. Ray from our midst. She was often at church and we will miss her so much. Our sympathy is with the family.

Farmers of this section are still working and wishing for rain. Crops are damaged quite a bit from the drought.

The creek bridge near the Thorsby Lane is under construction and has caused quite a bit of traffic confusion due to not having detour signs, where those who come that way might know before arriving at the creek. Maybe this difficulty will be forgotten when the new bridge is completed and we hope it won't be much longer.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Carr of Selma spent Saturday night with the Oden family and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Sewell.

"Pa and Ma" Sewell will leave Saturday to attend State Convocation for Spanish American War veterans at Fair Hope, which will be held June 1, 2, and 3rd. They also plan to visit their sons in Mobile and New Orleans and relatives in Miss. before they return. Miss Gladys Oden will accompany them.

Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Arnold of Clanton spent Saturday night and Sunday with the latter's parents here.

Mrs. Catherine Franklin continues to be ill at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Sewell of Bessemer were here Saturday and Sunday. They will be vacationing in Mobile and other places during the next week.

Floyd News

We are glad to say that we are still having gold prayer services.

Our Sunday school was good Sunday.

Our B. T. U. is still growing. There was a large crowd Sunday night.

Next Saturday night and Sunday is our regular preaching time. Bro. Lockhart will preach for us.

We have our conference on Saturday night.

The Second Sunday in June which will be the 8th of June, Bro. Joel Prickett, will preach for us. Bro. Prickett is a young preacher. Everybody come that can.

CANE CREEK

Our Sunday school is doing nicely. We invite everyone to come each Sunday. S. S. starts at 10.

Next Sunday, June 1, is our regular preaching day. Rev. Floyd Smith is our pastor. We invite all who can to come. Morning service begins at 11:00; night services begin at 7:30 o'clock.

We will have a general cleaning up at the church and cemetery Tuesday, June 3rd. All who can and will please come and bring things to work with. Remember the date, Tuesday, June 3.

On Sunday, June 8, we will have an all-day singing. We invite everyone to come and be with us.—Reporter.

Cure For World Ills Offered By Farley

NEW YORK—Rulers who seek to drive God out of the lives and hearts of their subjects are raising up a dangerous Frankenstein that will bring their own destruction and that of their people, James A. Farley, former postmaster general of the United States, told members of the St. George Association of the New York Postoffice at the Hibbel Astor Sunday.

"There is no force in the world today, nor has there been in past ages, that can destroy foundation established on the bedrock of eternal truth," times may seem in the ascendancy, but time will show that the enemies of religion and decency are merely actors, who strut and fret their hour upon the stage and then are heard no more.

"Faith watches over the cradles of nations; atheism argues at their graves. The lesson of what we may accomplish by holding fast to the idealism of our forefathers is too plain to go unrecognized, even in this age of force and materialism.

"At Jamestown, in 1607, and later at Plymouth the founding fathers recognized God; our colonists trusted in the power of prayer and their records bear the name of God; our coins have the inscription 'In God We Trust'; the U. S. Senate and House of Representatives have chaplains and open sessions with a prayer an oath is administered in all courts to remind of the presence of God, and the President of the United States concludes his oath of office with 'So help me God'.

"If we are to continue the work of our forefathers, we too, must be men of faith, trust, prayer, humility and the conviction that all things are possible to those who follow the rule of justice and practice the precept of honest dealings.

"What the world needs today is faith of Christ living in the hearts of men and women and the love of man for his neighbor."

OLD-AGE PENSION FUND RECEIVED IN MONTGOMERY

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Alabama's old-age pension fund received a $100,000 annual increase last week when Governor Dixon ordered the release of a $25,000 constitutional appropriation from the 1939 Legislature. The appropriation by Stat. We have Commissioner Laula Dunn.

The 1939 Act provides that the $25,000 above all other welfare funds, be made available when, in the opinion of the Governor, it could be paid without interfering with other appropriations. Miss Dunn stated. The recent grant, which will be used to take care of and increase present pensions, be matched by money for the counties, and the combined fund in turn matched by the Federal Government.

People who mind their own business successfully usually are too busy to check their noses in that of their neighbors.

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

J. Stewart, manager down at Blue Creek, was telling us the other day that not enough people in this town, especially Methodist, went to Sunday School. Now, according to Stewart, and he is absolutely right, folks should think more about getting up on Sunday morning and getting out to Sunday School. . . we did and thoroughly enjoyed it, and were starting back too, right away and try to make up for all this time been back-sliding.

We missed out on the Lions party Wednesday night at Blue Creek camp. We did hate it too. According to reports coming in everybody there had a wonderful time. . . we haven't been able to find the first one to say different, and that's something. Drove the wife to Birmingham for a few days and couldn't get back in time to get into there.

Incidentally, we think from what we heard, the committee in charge of affairs (Earl Parrish, J. E. Easterling and Cecil Ramsey) deserve a great deal of credit for their success in putting this thing over in a big way.

Gabby Tiffin and others are building a new court out on Second Avenue. . . to have lights and everything for the night. . . he's putting in a new house. Now when these husbands are not at home nights we will know where to find them.

"One With The Wind" has come out and gone and most everybody who saw it the second time liked it better than the first. . . so, we guess that you who were seeing it for the first time will just have to go over to the library to Charlie's and Minnie's to see it and see it again. It will be there for two days on June 11th and 12th.

Received a post card from Jack Lawrence this week telling us how much he was enjoying reading the News each day. He says by the time we get the paper, he is already in bed. . . he will be, but probably in the Caribbean somewhere. Jack, you remember, was delayed about two weeks in getting his ship to the Navy because it was addressed Andrew Jackson Lawrence, and not the one at the local postoffice knew him by that moniker.

Seems that the town turned out last Saturday night when the awful wreck happened 17 miles north of here on U. S. 31. Four are already dead at this writing and others are not expected to live. Over the week-end Birmingham got a dandy rain and Montgomery had a bit south of there got a good rain, but Chilton is still a dry county so far as rain is concerned.

Here is something that we picked up from the weekly press and worth reprinting:

A NEGRO REGISTRANT, The Elberton Star tells us, was struggling with his questionnaire. He looked it over for a long while, scratched his head and sweating profusely. Finally he said "I can't answer all dem questions in a year." So he turned the sheet over and wrote on the back "I is red dy when you is" and sent it to the board.

This humble citizen, we believe, spoke not only the sentiment of his race, but for all people of the South and, it is to be hoped, for the people of all other sections.

Everything happens to Lawrence Duffey, Lawrence and B. J. Leverett decided to go to the river to take some target practice with a 22 rifle. . . Lawrence got the BRIGHT idea of using some old radio tubes that he had saved down at Radio Electric Service Co. So, by the place of business in haste, loaded the box of tubes and to the river to shoot-em-up. They shot'em up all right. By mistake Lawrence picked up a box of new radio tubes. . . net loss. . . fifty cents. Bang, Bang!

Evelyn Robinson and Bonnie Guy won the free trip to Washington given by some of our merchants recently.

Head-On Collision Of Cars Brings Death To Four

Crash Occurs Saturday Evening Near Montevallo Cut-Off On U. S. 31

Four persons are dead and four others injured as a result of an automobile collision about five miles north of Jemison, just beyond the Montevallo cut-off intersection. The wreck occurred about 8:30 Saturday night when an automobile driven by Austin Holt collided with one driven by D. C. Evans of Birmingham.

According to reports, D. C. Evans, of Birmingham, was going to the home of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Sunberg, of Jemison when the wreck occurred. Other occupants of the Evans car were Mrs. Evans, their two daughters, Irene and Norma Jean; Mrs. Evans' sister, Miss Mildred Sunberg of Jemison and James Campbell of North Birmingham. D. C. Evans, who was driving, was killed instantly. Irene age 11 died about an hour later. Other occupants were carried to Hillman hospital in Birmingham, where Mrs. Evans' condition and Norma Jean's are reported as "critical" at this writing. Others in the car were severely cut.

The other car figuring in the wreck was a coupe said to have been driven by Austin Holt of Wetumpka, with one passenger, Fred Evans of Montgomery. Both died later in a Birmingham hospital. Both died Sunday night and Austin died Tuesday.

The victims were picked up by Bob White of Spigener Funeral Home and Leroy Martin, of Martin and Sons, who happened upon the scene while returning from Jasper.

Funeral services were held at New Salem church, Clanton, on Wednesday morning at 11 a.m. for Mr. D. C. Evans and his daughter, Irene. Services were conducted by Rev. Homer Carroll. Mr. Evans is survived by the widow, one daughter, Norma Jean, age 9; his mother, Mrs. W. L. Evans of Clanton; one brother, Oliver of Chicago, Ill.; six sisters, Mrs. E. F. Widen of Clanton, Mrs. L. H. Jones of Clanton, Mrs. Geneva Price of Clanton, Mrs. Frank Sullivan of Verbena, Mrs. O. R. Harris of Mason City, Washington; Mrs. Arthur Gibson of Texas. Irene is survived by her mother; one sister, Norma Jean; her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Sunberg of Jemison; and Mrs. M. L. Evans of Clanton. Spigener Funeral Home was in charge of the double funeral.

Two Chilton Students Are Graduated From Auburn

Two students from Chilton County received their degrees last Monday at the 69th Commencement Exercises of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute. Pres. L. N. Duncan awarded diplomas to 510 graduates, the largest in the history of the institution.

They are as follows: Bachelor of Science in Agricultural Education, John D. Griffin, Jr., Clanton; Braxton Luther LeCroy, Maplesville.

They will stay five days and while there they will visit all of the interesting and historic places. And by-the-way, both want to thank their many friends who gave them their support throughout the contest. They will leave Sunday morning, next, on Bon Voyage, Bonnie and Evelyn.

Postmaster Lowe is some fisherman: One day last week he went fishing down on the river to his camp. When dark came he went back to camp and left his boat and line set for a whopper which was supposed to bite that night. Next morning when the Postmaster reached his line it was out on the bank of the river and a bit tangled. Reaching over and turning a large rock he found a snake about three and a half feet long. He jerked up his pole that was stuck in the bank with the purpose of pulling the snake but alas, when he jerked his pole the snake followed; he was on the end of the line. . . Mr. Snake had swallowed the minnow and crawled out on the bank with the line, hook and sinker.

Three Divide First Prize In Goose Contest

The Goose Guessing Contest ended with everybody satisfied. It seems that the amount of corn that a goose can eat in thirty days is 17,248 grains. At least that is the number that the big gray goose ate that you have been seeing around in front of various business houses for the past month. The corn that was placed in the cup in the goose cage was counted each day and that business man taking care of the fowl wrote the number on a piece of paper and placed the slip in an envelope and sealed it. On the last day after all had finished making their guesses, the envelopes were opened and the total was 17,248.

Mrs. L. D. Eastirling, Mr. J. R. Holley and Adolph Smith, each guessed 17,250 to top first prize in the contest. First prize was $113.50. Second prize went to Mrs. J. R. Mullins, whose guess was 17,233. Third prize to Mrs. E. J. Deason, and Bill Simpson got the goose and cage.

F. D. R. WOULD DRAFT PROPERTY

WASHINGTON June 2—The Administration's request for power to draft personal property "of any kind or character" brought charges from President Roosevelt's congressional opponents today that he was heading toward "complete and total dictatorship."

"Communist . . . Socialistic" were the terms used by the Administration's most vehement critics to describe the request. Even Administration supporters were surprised although most of them declined comment.

The President would fix the price of the property to be taken over by the Government and if the owner found it unsatisfactory all he could do would be to take 75 per cent of the offered price in cash and sue for whatever else he could get.

R. A. F. START FIRES

LONDON, June 2—Large fires were started by Royal Air Force planes which raided Berlin during the night the Air Ministry said today.

Many fires were started in industrial buildings at Duesseldorf and in the Duisburg-Ruhrort area at the junction of the Ruhr and the Rhine, the ministry said.

Docks at Ostend and St. Nazaire on the Belgian-French invasion coast also were bombed.

The ministry said officially that only a small force of planes took part in the Berlin raid, and its statement that large fires were started was believed to mean that new long-range planes of the types which usually carry bombs of terrific destructive power, were used.

"OUR COUNTRY! IN HER INTERCOURSE WITH FOREIGN NATIONS MAY SHE ALWAYS BE IN THE RIGHT; BUT OUR COUNTRY RIGHT OR WRONG."—Stephen Decatur.

Mark Remarks:

The fellow who failed to harvest his cotton wheat and had during the pretty weather will be the first to howl the loudest about too much rain.

We wonder how many pots and pans will be contributed by the men made rich through the aluminum monopoly?

The daily headlines and radio bulletins worked up a fairly creditable victory (?) for the British as they were being routed from Crete. Only dumbbells, ignoramuses and just plain fools think that sort of thing will help the Allies win the final victory.

If Coca-Cola bottles keep shrinking, they soon will be serving "the pause that refreshes" out of the bottle cap.

Midling cotton was quoted in Montgomery yesterday at 13 cents. Wonder if it will be that high August 15th.

Maybe the reason the President put Thanksgiving off till the last Thursday in November, was because he was sure we would have the war won by that time.

Birmingham sensibly voted to kill the "daylight saving time" foolishness. Two to one.

Neil O. Davis, one of Alabama's cleverest newspaper men, editor and publisher of The Lee County Bulletin, Auburn was one of 15 newspaper men awarded the Neiman Fellowship for study at Harvard during the academic year beginning next September. Coosa-Alabama Dams

Senator Lister Hill is urging Congress to build dams on the Coosa-Alabama rivers as a part of the National Defense program. In a telegram the Senator says:

"To meet the urgent needs of our national defense and more particularly the production of aluminum for our airplanes let us build the dams on the Coosa-Alabama River and let us build them immediately."

Moral Decay To Blame For Conflict Abroad, Dr. Chenault Declares

Explanation of the war as a result of moral decay in the countries involved was given in a Sunday morning sermon by Dr. Fred R. Chenault, pastor of the First Methodist Church.

Pointing out that although England must now hoard food for her people, "400 tons of grain a week are being swallowed in England," Dr. Chenault said "England must pay for her sins, even as America has to pay for hers."

"We withdrew after the last great war from the responsibility of organizing peace. Worse still, we set up an appalling system of high tariffs based on the idea that we might sell to all countries, but deny them the privilege of selling to us," he said. Germany, too, must suffer for her sins "today and tomorrow" he added.

Dr. Chenault said the question "why does God permit such suffering among the nations" is often asked and answered it by saying that God not only does not permit it, but suffers with the suffering.

"God is not sitting alone the earth. He is down here with us and suffering with us," he said. "Never forget that a loving God cares and suffers with us until out of the folly and blindness of men's selfishness. He will bring some day His kingdom of peace."—Birmingham News.

Motor vehicle owners now pay at current rate, nearly five hundred million annually in gasoline and other automotive levies to the federal government.

When a motorist spends $1 for gasoline he must pay an average additional 47 cents in state and federal taxes.

EDITORIAL TALK

Publisher Mark Tucker of the Clanton Chilton County News was a visitor to the Journal last Friday afternoon. We were glad to have him as our visitor and invite him back to see us often. Editor Tucker is one of the well-known and successful newspaper men of the state.—York Journal.

MISSOURI IS FOR HIM—

Probrate Judge Edwin F. Cates, of Richmond, Randolph County, Missouri, was a pleasant caller at the Chilton County News office Saturday. Judge Cates spoke most complimentary of former Governor Bibb Graves, and Mrs. Graves, who they feared Missouri in the interest of the National Democratic ticket during the last campaign. He expressed gratification at the favorable prospects that Col. Graves would again be chosen Governor of Alabama.

COME AGAIN, BROTHER OF THE PRESS

Mr. Mark Tucker, editor of the Chilton County News made the editor of the Home a pleasant call recently. We were happy to see our good friend from our old home town, Clanton, where Mr. Lawrence established The Chilton View, the first paper in Chilton County. Our brother editor and his two sons are publishing a most excellent weekly, which does full credit to the beautiful county seat of Chilton. Come again Brother, we enjoyed the light of your countenance and look forward each week to reading your newspaper, which holds the standard high.—Our Southern Home, Livingston, Ala.

"UNDERTOW"

As one approaches Clanton from Birmingham he had better take it easy lest he takes it in the ditch. This portion of the Montgomery-Birmingham highway has what can best be described as undertow.

Driving at night I couldn't be sure what the difficulty was. But apparently it was the ribbon patches of gray-colored bituminous. When the right wheels hit these strips it is as though a strong magnet is taking you off the highway.

At Clanton the filling station operator and I fell into conversation about it.

"Don't worry," he said, "there's nothing wrong with your car. It's the way that asphalt is put down there. Trucks and cars come in here every day to see if their tires haven't gone down."

The Highway Department for some time has been engaged in covering the pock-marked highway with black top. No doubt that is the reason for the undertow, and it will be repaired.—Grover C. Hall, Jr., Alabama Journal.

MAGNOLIA GROVE

The editor of the Anniston Times was a recent visitor to "Magnolia Grove," the lovely Hobson home at Greensboro and he suggests in an editorial, printed elsewhere on this page, that it be restored and made a shrine to the memory of Richmond P. Hobson. He suggests that veterans of the Spanish-American war take it as a project, as it will be a large undertaking.

Since Hobson is a native son of Hale County we believe that Hale County Historical Society would be the proper authority to make a shrine of the home. It might be a large undertaking, but we are sure that the editor of the Times does not realize the capabilities of this splendid organization.

The News feels that the restoration of "Magnolia Grove" would be a small undertaking for an organization that could put out on such magnificence, a pageant of the size and aspect of that of several years ago, depicting a panoramic view of the life of the Mound-builders. The Times suggestion to restore the old home to its former glory is a brilliant one. Perhaps it will be made into a shrine to honor the name of the late Richmond P. Hobson.—Moundville News.

UNIVERSITY HIGHWAY NEWS

An announcement received Saturday from Montgomery indicated that all remaining links on the University Highway, connecting Tuscaloosa and the state capital by a short route, will be under contract by October 1.

State Highway Director Chris Sherlock said that road construction estimated to cost $4,300,000 and overpasses and underpasses costing $177,000—all on the federal aid system—are in list to be contracted for prior to that date. These estimates do not include roads and bridge work already let under contracts which exceed $1,188,000.

Projects along the University Highway route, announced to be under contract before October 1, include:

Autauga County—From Prattville to the Chilton County line, 23 miles.

Bibb County—From the Bibb-Chilton line to the Tuscaloosa County line, 28 miles.

Chilton County—From the Autauga-Chilton line to the Bibb County line, 17.1 miles.

Tuscaloosa County—The 4-mile strip from Duncanville to the Tuscaloosa-Bibb County line.

The section in Tuscaloosa County from Duncanville to the county line will complete this county's link in the route to the state capital. Tuscaloosa to Duncanville, about 13 miles, has already been constructed and is now being widened and base is being applied for paving this summer. This work done by the state convicts is expected to be completed before the cold weather season sets in next fall.—Tuscaloosa News.

Make The Rivers Work

The water shortage and the low stage of the rivers in the Southeast make this an appropriate time to pursue with vigor the plans for complete development of the Coosa-Alabama river.

The Coosa and the Tallapoosa which unite at Wetumpka to form the Alabama river are already sources of enormous electric power production through the great hydroelectric plants located upon them. Engineers have found that still greater quantities of power are in this river system awaiting harnessing.

One thing about hydroelectric power always to be remembered is that water flowing downstream can be made to do its work over and over as it passes through the turbines of each plant. The same water flowing past Gadsden in the Coosa first whirls the turbines of Lay Dam, does the same thing when it reaches Mitchell dam, and completes its work of power generation only when it has passed through Jordan dam's penstocks. Water of the Tallapoosa does not complete its work at Martin dam, but turns wheels at Upper Tallassee and Thurlow dams further down stream.

Whenever there is sufficient fall in the river to permit an additional dam, the same water can be made to do some work. The engineers have shown that these great Alabama streams have still greater possibilities through additional power dams, and through impounding dams which will bring the water under better control. The war department's attitude is favorable. We ought not to neglect any opportunity to get this further development of the Coosa-Alabama system underway promptly. Alabama Journal.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

A Jewish soldier attended the services in camp conducted by the army Chaplain and he heard about Christ. The teachings and ideals of Christ were portrayed in such beauty until the young soldier learned to love and reverence the man of Galilee. He went to the Rabbi and said, "Of late I have heard much about Christ of the Christian people. We claim that He is the Son of God, but the Gentile world claims that He has come." "That is true," replied the Rabbi. "Well," asked the young Jew, "When our Christ shall come, what will He have on Jesus Christ of the Gentile world?" The Rabbi's answer is not recorded. The world today would like to have an answer to the question of that soldier boy. Men may improve on many things, but no one can improve on Jesus.

Mechanics are well aware that the engines on which they work can be improved. The Artist knows that someone will paint a better picture reached perfection in the refection of his than the one that he has completed. The Architect knows that he has not last structure. The musician knows that someone will write a better song. All of us know that there is a state of imperfection everywhere. Knowing this there is a constant struggle to improve over the past. When wise and saintly men view the life and character the ideals and teaching of Jesus Christ they find perfection personified. Even Pilot said, "I find no fault in Him". The Jews may be looking for the coming of another Christ, but they are deceived if they think that a better Christ will ever appear. No one can improve on the Christ of the Christ of God.

While standing on the dock I saw a small craft turn its bow toward the deep waters of the Gulf. A friend remarked, "An ocean steamer is coming in." I wanted to know how he knew this as there was no ship in sight. "Because," replied the man, "that boat is carrying out a pilot". The incoming ship had a pilot and a captain, but far out in the deep another pilot climbed on board the vessel and took complete charge. There were dangers in that port that the captain knew not of and a pilot must take charge. When the pilot climber on board and put his hand upon the wheel, the ship was under competency and knowledge. He knew the dangerous place and could direct the ship to safety. Just a trans-fer takes place in a human heart when Jesus comes in to take charge. Christ knows all the seas and all the dangers of human travel and He alone can land us safely in the port of Paradise. Better let Jesus take charge of your life.

Two passengers entered a coach at the central depot and took a seat. They were satisfied and started to talking about the disturbed public. It was evident that they were satisfied with their ability to take care of themselves. Just then the smiling porter came up and said, "Gentlemen, you will have to move up." "Why? What is wrong with this coach?" asked the two men. "Nothing is wrong with this coach," replied the porter. "Except it is not coupled to anything that will carry you anywhere." That is the trouble with many of the creeds today. That is the trouble with many satisfied men and women. They pride themselves that they are able to take care of themselves. And yet, they are not coupled to anything that will carry them anywhere. The soul that would journey heavenward must be sure about its couplings. Because you are satisfied with yourself, is no guarantee that you are going places. Better investigate your couplings.

History tells of a young man who ground paint for Italy's most famous artist. His position was a humble one, but it was important. In the passing of the years this young man developed marked evidence of his master's skill. One day an enemy of Raphael came to this young man and urged him to leave his master and go into business for himself. He was promised a training school for Artists, he would have wealth, honor and a place in the king's palace. The young man said: "Sir, I'm not ambitious to establish a school, and I am not anxious to live in the palace, but I am ambitious to catch the spirit of Raphael and to reproduce in myself his ideals." I knew a preacher who was offered more money than he was receiving as a minister of the gospel and he quit preaching. As for me I have but one ambition and that is to catch the spirit of my Lord and let His ideals live over in me. As that personifies Jesus Christ, is not a failure.

THE ALL 'ROUND NEED OF A COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER

The commercial welfare of a community depends upon its professional and business enterprises. The social welfare of a community depends upon its religious, educational and civic organizations. The progressive welfare of a community depends upon its newspaper because all other assets of a community would be seriously handicapped without a local newspaper. The commercial enterprises need its advertising columns. The social institutions need the free space that is continuously devoted to their activities. Everybody in the community needs the hometown paper for commercial and social information and community news. The writer has witnessed the deadness of communities without the life-giving impetus of a properly supported newspaper.—Samson Ledger.

WAYS TO ERADICATE WEEDS IN PASTURES

By mowing and hand-pulling weeds in permanent pasture for one season most weeds can be eradicated, says C. Lowery, extension agronomist, Auburn.

"Weeds can be brought under control if a few days each year are spent walking over the pasture and hand-pulling after the mowing machine."

How MUCH Rain?

DURING the past few days, scattered showers may have occurred in Alabama and elsewhere in the drouth-stricken Southeastern States. Others may occur shortly. While these showers are beneficial to local crops, they are of little help in relieving the serious power shortage that impends in the Southeast as a result of the drouth at a time when defense industries have greatly increased their demands for power. The increased demand comes largely from the production of aluminum, and from other industries producing materials for national defense.

The remaining water in the combined storage basins of power production facilities in the Southeast is at such low levels that, for the power situation to be even temporarily relieved, there must be heavy GENERAL rains, during the next few weeks, over the larger part of the Southeastern area, and the total rainfall must average several inches fairly evenly distributed over the hydro-electric watersheds to afford relief to the existing situation. Thereafter, more than normal rainfall will be necessary to bring the total 1941 rainfall up to average.

So, although you may have enjoyed welcome local showers, they have not relieved the power situation; IT IS STILL SERIOUS AND IS LIKELY TO REMAIN SO, because defense production is being speeded up still more, and general rains do not ordinarily occur during the summer months.

THIS CRITICAL SITUATION, THE SERIOUSNESS OF WHICH CANNOT BE OVER-EMPHASIZED, CALLS FOR THE CONTINUED AND INCREASING NEED FOR CONSERVATION OF ELECTRICITY ON THE PART OF EVERY PATRIOTIC CITIZEN IN RESPONSE TO THE REQUEST OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT, THE OFFICE OF PRODUCTION MANAGEMENT, THE FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION, AND THE ELECTRIC POWER SYSTEMS.

Whatever the inconvenience to the individual, Southeastern defense industries MUST continue to run without pause. We are confident that our 156,977 customers want to cooperate.

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY

THIS WEEK IN NATIONAL DEFENSE

President Roosevelt, stating the European War is "coming very close to home," proclaimed an unlimited national emergency. The President called upon "all loyal citizens to place the nation's need in mind and in action" and said "the nation will expect all individuals and all groups to play their full parts, without stint and without selfishness."

Speaking over the radio, the President said it is the U. S. policy to give "every possible assistance" to Britain and her allies by whatever measures are necessary. He also said U. S. will not accept a Nazi-dominated world and will resist any German attempt to gain control of the seas or bases which could be used for an attack on the Western Hemisphere.

Production

DPM Director of Purchases Nelson, speaking at Baltimore, said Germany is producing war materials at a rate of fifty billion a year. Britain production is at the rate of fifteen billion a year, and the least we can do is see to it that British and American production together will top fifty billion.

Mr. Nelson said "by throwing himself and his business into the defense program a business man risks something; by staying out he risks everything—not merely his business but the framework in which it is conducted, the set of economic and political arrangements which make the very existence of his business possible."

Army

Army Chief of Staff Marshall announced that training maneuvers this summer and fall are designed to create an "all-purpose" force capable of operating in the arctic, the tropics, in deserts or mountains. He said every man must be given basic infantry training before he can "pull his weight" as a specialist.

Under Secretary of War Patterson, speaking in New York, denied charges the Army is devoting too much time to basic training. He said "ours is not a mass Army, staking its success on sheer weight of men and machines." He said the ratio of infantry to air service—nine to one in 1917-18—is now almost one to one and "our plans call for a higher proportion of armored and motorized units, than Germany has today."

Navy

The President approved legislation authorizing the purchase or construction of 58 additional naval auxiliary ships. The Maritime Commission began immediate acquisition of the vessels, including the 27,000-ton "America", largest liner ever built in the United States. The Navy asked Congress to grant naval commanders authority to "take whatever steps they deem necessary . . . for proper protection of the naval forces" in the U. S. territorial waters.

Navy Secretary Knox announced the Navy will open 23 schools for training regular and reserve enlisted men as petty officers. Mr. Knox estimated 114,500 of the Navy's 256,000 enlisted men will be petty officers by July 1. The Navy also announced a three-month course at Harvard to train 400 college graduates as supply officers.

Air

The President asked Congress for an additional $279,000,000 for planes for the Army and $529,000,000 for planes for the Navy. The War Department announced that construction of new Air Corps schools is "proceeding much faster than expected," with eight of 10 stations already completed and 50 partially occupied. Some of the fields, the Department said, were completed in three months.

The Air Corps announced that examinations of applicants for flying cadet appointments who have not had two years college have been changed to include seven instead of nine subjects, with two of the subjects elective.

Pilots For Britain

War Secretary Stimson announced arrangements to train 8,000 RAF pilots, bombardiers and navigators in U. S. civilian and Army schools. The U. S. will defray some of the cost from lease-lend funds. Mr. Stimson said the program would not interfere with U. S. pilot training.

Ships

The Maritime Commission awarded contracts for 123 additional merchant vessels. To date, the Commission said, 850 ships have been ordered—312 emergency vessels, 85 cargo ships for private contract, 72 tankers and 60 ships on British contracts. The Commission said the first of the emergency ships will be completed by November, a month ahead of schedule.

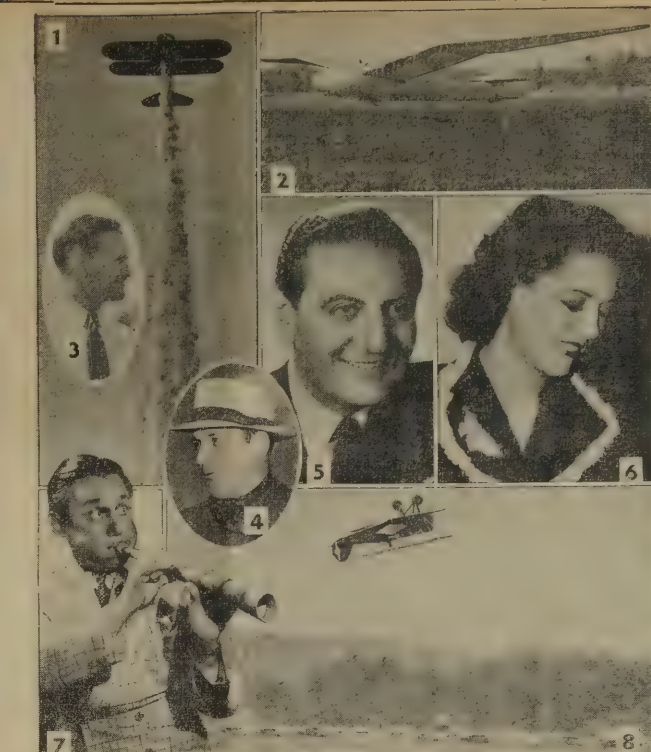

Congress voted the president authority to requisition foreign ships in U. S. ports.

Defense Housing

President Roosevelt approved construction of 9,000 additional dwelling units for civilian industrial worker families renting for from $6 to $8 per week, and Army and Navy enlisted personnel in 32 localities, and use of 274 trailers, as temporary housing in defense areas. Defense Housing Coordinator Palmer reported total allocations for family dwelling units to be 87,260 as of May 24. During the week ended May 24, 1,600 homes were finished making the total completed 12,261. Mr. Palmer reported.

Labor Secretary Perkins reported more dwelling units were provided in non-farm areas during the first quarter of 1941 than during any corresponding period since 1929.

LACK OF COMPETENT INSPECTORS STILTON CAUSE OF FIRES

Editor, Chilton County News, Clanton, Ala.

In answer to Mr. A. R. Forsyth, Chairman of the Department of Finance with reference to school building fires in the past two years; It is my opinion after four years experience in State Fire Marshal's Office, plus making numerous investigations for that department, that the cause of so many school fires is the lack of competent inspectors making inspections of school buildings and other public buildings. Mr. Frank N. Julian, the most competent Insurance Commissioner and Fire Marshal Ex-Officio Alabama ever had and stands at the top of the list of Insurance Commissioners in our nation, but he does not have competent inspectors for this class of inspection work. This does not mean that the deputy fire marshals in his department are not good investigators in case of arson, because they are, and have made good records, but they are not trained to tell when a building is properly wired and constructed to eliminate fires.

While in the fire marshal's office for four years I made over one thousand inspections of public school and other public buildings. Eighty per cent of these inspections I had to order additional safety appliances and methods which were complied with, which in my judgement saved many thousands of dollars and lives. Ninety per cent of the school fires in the past two years has been caused from defective wiring, spontaneous combustion, general carelessness, indifference and bad heating systems, which could have been avoided by trained mechanical inspectors.

If the department of Education or the Fire Marshal's Office had the authority to place competent men in positions to make recommendations to throw those in charge the fire hazards it would have been a great savings to the State running into thousands of dollars.

After thirty years as an electrician and inspector and having successfully passed two civil service examinations and holding a certificate as an electrician and inspector from the U. S. Veterans Vocational Training School, I believe I am competent to speak on this subject. Prior to the present administration there were employees in the Fire Marshal's Office who were competent to pass on the construction of public buildings and see to it that fire hazards mechanical and electrical were eliminated. There were employees who could read plans and specifications and Architects from all over the State sent their blue prints to the Fire Marshal's Office for approval. There were also men who were familiar with safety in industries and were called upon to make inspections for the safety of the workmen and who could make talks, and demonstrate fire prevention. During the former administration more buildings were condemned on account of improper construction, fire hazards, dilapidated conditions dangerous to life, limb and property since the fire marshal's office was created in 1919 meaning that every fire hazard was removed by repairing or by demolition, this was done without any court order or ill feeling as the citizens were willing to cooperate when they were shown by men who knew their business how to prevent fires and save lives.

It is my opinion that the fire insurance rates in Alabama on all buildings could be reduced from ten to twenty five per cent if they were properly inspected and inform the property owners what had to be done to have their fire insurance rates reduced, which they would gladly do.

Former Deputy Fire Marshal P. H. Lipman, 807 S. Hull Street, Montgomery, Ala.

Plans For Living Given By FSA

Plans for living and for production in 1941 by approximately 65,000 small farm families in the state of Alabama, Georgia, S. C. and Florida have been completed as a basis of loans from the Farm Security Administration.

In Chilton County plans for improved farm and home management have been made for 340 families, involving loans of approximately $70,000.

These loans are made only after sound farm and home management plans, calling for adequate supervision are approved. The first principle involved is that condition, under which low-income families will live will be improved, and that programs of production within their capacity to perform and their ability to repay loans will be mapped out.

The completion of these loans, it was pointed out by Marvin Durbin, FSA Supervisor for Chilton County, may be expected from past experience to be of great value both from social and economic view points.

Not only may it be expected that the living condition of 340 families be improved their outlook as American citizens broadened, and their contributions to local and national life increased, but the flow of their investments and of their increased income will as in the past, add greatly to the well-being of their community and country.

"However," said Supervisor Durbin "the plan is no less important than the loan. It establishes an obligation of the FSA borrower to himself and to his community. It sets before his eye a goal of achievement higher than he might have looked to otherwise and puts his affairs in systematic order so that his future operations will grow in hope and practical sense."

"The FSA stands, therefore, not only for lending but also for planning and for helping to carry out the plans. The farm is linked with the home. Production is linked with living. The farmer is linked with living. The farmer is helped not only as a farmer but also as a citizen who seeks an adequate fulfillment of his place in a democratic society. The real opportunity lies in the plan, and the loan is the means of carrying out the plan."

4,000 Auburn Students Are Finger-Printed

MONTGOMTRY, ALA.—Using the facilities and equipment of the State Department of Public Safety, the Auburn students, both men and women, as well as every member of the faculty including Dr. L. N. Duncan, President, have been fingerprinted for the official records of the State and Nation.

The procedure, carried out under a cooperative arrangement with Director James F. Brawner of the Public Safety Department, the Auburn student body and Dr. Duncan, was finally wound up yesterday.

The finger-printing equipment was set up at Auburn and instruction given in the Special Investigator C. P. Donaldson of the State Highway Patrol, who is a graduate of the National Police Academy and an identification expert. From there on out the work was under the direction of Charles W. Edwards, Register for Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

The FBI in Washington long ago advocated the recording of his or her finger-prints by every citizen of the United States, in order to establish permanent identification records for their benefit. Action of the student body at Auburn providing for the making of such records, such as the voluntary action on the part of each individual student, however, one hundred per cent recording resulted.

The finger-print records of the Auburn students and faculty were made in duplicate. One copy of each will be kept in the Special Investigator C. P. Donaldson of the State Highway Patrol. The other will become a part of the records of the FBI in Washington. Photostatic copies of any of them may be obtained on proper application, at any time, from either source.

IN MEMORY

In loving memory of my mother who died June 8, 1940:

Since mother is gone,
I'm sad and forlorn;
For God has called her away,
But Jesus knew best,
And gave her sweet rest,
In that bright land of day.

Now Mother is gone,
And I'll shun ways of wrong;
I want to see her some day,
I'll clasp her dear hand;
When I reach that glad land,
And we will be happy for aye.
—Her granddaughter, Mrs. G. O. Crumpton.

The federal and state governments now are collecting gasoline taxes at the rate of $1,250,000,000 annually. That amount is more than what was collected by the federal, state and all local governments for all taxes during the horse and buggy days.

The Alabama Land Use Planning committee met in Auburn Monday and Tuesday, June 2 and 3, and prepared a unified farm program for submission to officials of the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington.

FOUR-DAY RED CROSS TRAINING TO BE HELD AT AUBURN

AUBURN, ALA.—Dr. L. N. Duncan, president of the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, announced this week that preliminary plans had been completed for the four-day Red Cross Training for National Defense Institute to be held at Auburn, June 16-19, 1941, for the State of Alabama and Georgia. The Institute will bring representatives from over two hundred and fifty chapters with an estimated attendance of over 1,000 for the four days.

W. C. Hunt, manager of the Eastern Area of the American Red Cross, stated that the Auburn Institute would be the most important ever held by the Red Cross in this section, especially since it will include in the discussion the relationship between the Red Cross and the Military and Naval Services, National Defense and War Relief. He is urging chapter officials to be present in order to secure the proper interpretation of the Red Cross services to the present National Defense programs.

Prof. A. D. Burke of Auburn and Chairman of the Lee County Red Cross Chapter is in charge of local arrangements. He stated that reservations were already being made for meals and lodging for representatives of the chapters included in the Institute area. Each chapter will forward to Professor Burke a complete reservation for each day by June 10.

W. W. Jefferson, Assistant Manager of the Red Cross in the Eastern Area, stated and the program for the Institute would be as follows: Monday, June 16, National Defense, Disaster Preparedness, Roll Call; Tuesday, June 17, Volunteer Services (Production and other) Military and Naval Welfare Service, and Claims work; Wednesday, June 18, Safety Services (First Aid, Water Safety, and Disaster Prevention Health Services); Thursday, June 19, Executive Secretaries Conference (Executive session only).

CRYOLITE CONTROLS TOMATO FRUIT WORK

Dusting with equal parts of cryolite and water when first fruit begins to form—peating twice at two-week intervals will control the tomato fruit worm which will soon be attacking the early crop of tomatoes.

Tomato fruit worm is the one garden pest that deris and ruin. Non-toxic compounds have generally proved ineffective against and for this reason the cryolite-talc mixture is used, reports F. E. Guyton, Auburn.

"rikbon of light"

makes roads safer for night driving

If you had to pile your family in the car and speed across Alabama tonight, you'd wish for the visibility and safety of "concrete all the way"—wouldn't you?

As a matter of fact, if Alabama paved with concrete all the way on main roads such as U.S. 80, U.S. 31 and U.S. 78—to name a few—it would be real public economy as well as adding to the safety and the comfort of all motorists. Cost of maintenance of concrete on Alabama's main highways is only one-third that of other surfaces. Actual figures in Alabama and all over the country prove concrete's economy.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture reports that new records for the production of milk and dairy products are being set as a result of the best prices farmers, relatively low prices for feeds, for dairy products in more than ten and the best early pastures since 1929.

Although diets are considerably below normal, food supplies in most countries of continental Europe are expected to be sufficient to prevent serious distress at least until the arrival of the new crop, reports the United States Department of Agriculture.

The average motor vehicle owner in the United States contributes approximately $30 in taxes each year over and above the amount regarded by experts of the federal government as his "fair share" of road costs.

Most of the automobiles on the highways of America are worth less than $150 and are operated largely by families with earnings of less than $30 a week.

Bicyclists Warned Of State Traffic Laws

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Closing of schools during the past two weeks for the summer period has released from classrooms thousands of young Alabamians who for the next three months will be devoting most of their waking hours to various recreational activities. One of the most popular, widespread and wholesome forms this recreation will take, is bicycle riding.

Stating that this thought had been in his mind for some days, Director James F. Brawner of the Department of Public Safety said yesterday that though bicycling is the finest sort of exercise, he felt that in all justice to the youngsters they should be reminded of the things they should all know and remember in order to assure their safety while riding on the public streets and highways.

"Equipped with only two wheels compared to the four on which automobiles and trucks roll from place to place, the bicycle is nonetheless a vehicle and is so classified by the laws of Alabama," the Director stated. "Being so classified, they are, therefore, subject to the same traffic rules and regulations as motor vehicles in cities, towns, incorporated communities and on the open highways."

"I think it is a fair estimate that fully 75 per cent of those who ride bicycles in Alabama are boys and girls of high school age or younger. I want to appeal especially, therefore, to these young people as well as their parents, to cooperate with this department and police authorities in cities and towns in our efforts to safeguard them. Traffic lights, regulations governing right, left and other turns, should be strictly observed by all cyclists, as should the rules governing rights-of-way of motor vehicles and pedestrians."

The temptation to take chances or to put it plainly "show off," should at all times be resisted. The momentary thrill to be derived from it is out of all proportion to the peril it involves. Being careful always pays dividends, and it should be kept in mind that when you take chances you are endangering not only your own safety but the safety of others as well.

"Avoid speeding. Keep your bicycle under control. Never ride 'double' or 'triple' on busy streets or thoroughfares or somewhere else, if you must on private premises only. It is dangerous under any circumstances. Never attempt to take rides by hold. Use one hand to the rear of an automobile and trying to steer your bicycle with the other hand."

"Those learning to ride should do so in a location where there is no danger of a collision with a motor vehicle or pedestrian. All bicycles should be fully equipped with good brakes, reflectors, warning bells or horns, and lamps."

"I think it may reasonably be said that there is no such thing as riding for pleasure on an open highway crowded with motor traffic. The cyclist being in the same category with the horseback or buggy rider, under such conditions. Cycling on busy motor traffic routes should be undertaken only when necessity requires, for relatively short distances, and during daylight hours, if possible."

FIVE POINT DAIRY PROGRAM FOR ALABAMA

Most Alabama farmers are familiar with the general outline of the food program announced on April 3. Under this plan, the Department of Agriculture has promised to support certain average prices over a two year period for dairy products, eggs, chickens and hogs. For each farm family to contribute their bit to the plan of producing more dairy products for defense, F. W. Burns, extension dairyman, offers the following suggestions.

Farmers should feed their family cows more liberally so as to have an adequate supply of milk, butter, and cheese for home use. A minimum of 100 gallons of milk per farm family should be provided.

All heifer calves sired by purebred bulls should be saved and raised as many farm families in Alabama still do not have an adequate milk supply.

Farmers, having markets for products such as cheese plants or condensaries should feed their cows more liberally so as to expand her present production at least 6 to 8 per cent.

Grade A milk producers need to expand their production to care for the increase in population in war cities and to supply the needs of soldiers located in Army camps in the state.

Business men can cooperate with farmers in providing local markets for dairy products in sections of the state where cows are available to support small plants or other dairy products plants.

Business men can cooperate with farmers in providing local markets for dairy products in sections of the state where cows are available to support small plants or other dairy products plants.

FARMERS ADVISED TO HOLD LOAN COTTON

Senator John H. Bankhead advises Alabama cotton farmers to keep their loan cotton in storage. He issued a statement following President Roosevelt's signing of legislation establishing mandatory loans at 85 per cent on cotton, corn, wheat, rice and tobacco.

Bankhead termed the price-pegging farm loan bill as the beginning of "a new era in rural life."

24 STATES URGE CONGRESS TO DROP GASOLINE TAX

Twenty-four states, including Alabama, have petitioned Congress in recent years to drop its duplicating federal tax on gasoline and leave that field to the states, Earl M. Hearne, Secretary, Alabama Petroleum Industries Committee said this week.

"Despite these protests of the states, the federal gasoline tax, adopted as a temporary, emergency measure in 1932, has been extended repeatedly," said Mr. Hearne. "Last year the rate was increased by 50 per cent."

"The federal tax on gasoline is already equivalent to an average of 12 per cent of the retail price. That is a very heavy tax, especially in view of the fact that the states also impose stiff taxes on motor fuel."

"The petitions of protest filed by the 24 states urging Congress to withdraw from its invasion of the field of motor taxation point out that gasoline tax revenue is the chief source of funds for road building and that the states have pledged their motor fuel receipts to meet interest and principal payments on hundreds of million of dollars of highway bonds issued to speed up road building programs."

91 YEARS OF PROGRESS

A Historical Tour of the Louisville & Nashville R.R.

TO COAL AND STEEL

Important to the L. & N., because of the impetus it gave to the Birmingham District's iron and steel industry, was the first successful manufacture of coke pig iron. Alabama at Osmore on February 28, 1876.

In 1877 the L. & N. moved into a new general office building at Second and Main streets, Louisville, and acquired several small lines in Kentucky at about the same time. Steel began to replace iron in its track in the seventies and the Westinghouse air brake was first applied to L. & N. equipment.

In 1880 the Old Reliable reached the Gulf ports of New Orleans, Mobile and Pensacola through the acquisition of the Mobile & Montgomery, the New Orleans, Mobile & Texas, and the Pensacola railroads. The timber-eating saw worm ferodo navalis caused much difficulty in maintaining pilings-supported trestles on the line between Mobile and New Orleans but was eventually overcome by treating the timbers with creosote. This line was one of the first in the country to use the creosote method of preserving timber.

Other major stretches of trackage secured in the early eighties gave the L. & N. a line between St. Louis, Mo., and Nashville, Tenn., via Evansville, Ind., and between Montgomery and Selma, Ala.

Improvements and additions to the Road's track and rolling stock and refinements in the service have continued to the present day. Many millions of dollars were spent in the past year for new freight equipment and improvements to plant facilities. Thus, the Louisville & Nashville keeps its house in order to be ready to handle any business that might be offered it speedily, efficiently and safely.

Newspaper men have a word for nearly everything. When the French in 1914 began hiding their weapons of war with imitations of natural surroundings, the gentlemen of the press called it camouflage. When military strategists began to devise strategy in step formation, the members of the Fourth Estate called it echelon. They didn't miss it in this war either. They called it air-craft fire, flank, and an airplane coming up as angling up. But one word that the newspapermen have developed has lasted through wind and weather, and has become part of the modern vocabulary of words. This is the word which will last through this war, and probably will always be part of the world language. The word is blitzkrieg.

After the first world war, German military men began to talk of a war which would be over before it started. The war of 1914-1918 had lasted such a long struggle. Therefore, the next war would have to be over in a hurry or otherwise, the Germans would lose. Military circles in the Third Reich, the generals and the admirals began to talk of a new kind of war, a war which was as quick as lightning.

The newspapers got hold of the idea. They developed a delirious connotation for two German words. The French word wasn't suitable; neither was the American war. But the very sound of the German krieg suited them; and they borrowed blitz from one of Santa Claus' reindeers.

Thus came blitzkrieg, a word that has brought glory and honor to Hitler, suffering and torment for thousands of those living under the heel of the Nazi menace.

But what, in reality, has blitzkrieg meant. It has been a false word, has only been the imagination of news men in which has made blitzkrieg the symbol of a new kind of desperate, horrible warfare? Or has there really been the lightning bolt of the blitz?

Let's look at Poland—the first to fall by force under the Nazi whip.

When Hitler invaded that country, neutral military men had the blitzkrieg all figured out. They reasoned that according to all calculations, blitzkrieg meant in the Hitler vocabulary a gain of some thirty-two miles a day. The first two days, neutral observers were jubilant. Hitler wasn't making his pre-determined speed. But some 26 days later, Hitler had all of Poland ready to partition with Russia. His blitzkrieg had been even greater than they had anticipated.

But Hitler stopped. The war lagged. Of course, it was merely luck that the Germans had taken Poland so quickly, they thought. Now he had no where to turn. The war would soon be over, with a victory for the Allies. But just as soon as they thought like that, Hitler acted. Denmark fell. Norway gave in. Belgium capitulated. Holland swam in the failure of her dykes. And France, the once great center and seat of all European learning, gave in as if she were a sponge and a mighty hand had squeezed all the water out of her.

But days and weeks and months rolled by. Once again the Allies thought that Hitler was stopped, that it wouldn't be long now before the war would be over, with a victory for the Allies. And then as before, when once they thought that, Hitler thundered to victory in Bulgaria, in Rumania, Yugoslavia, and Greece.

So we sit at home and ask ourselves why Hitler did not go ahead in the first month of the war and take all these countries, instead of taking them gradually. We were amazed at the bombers and tanks and the guns. It seemed so queer that he didn't get it all over with at once, instead of leaving that interval in between each conquest.

But what we didn't see was that in those intervals of apparent inactivity, Hitler was doing then what it took to win the all-out battle in a short length of time. Hitler was blitz-krieging the souls and the hearts and the minds of the people he was about ready to invade and conquer and destroy.

While we would sit idly by, Hitler would have won his blitzkrieg, his battle, without a gun being fired, with, out a shell being wasted.

And that is just what is happening today, here, in this country, in America. We are allowing ourselves to be blitz-krieged—to be given to an attitude of despair and horror and lost hope.

We have lost part of the vision of

Our Flag's Birthday - June 14

Citizens of every State will join together in the celebration of Flag Day June 14. On that date the Stars and Stripes will pass a new milestone on its long march through the years which began in the dark days of the Revolution.

When a thoughtful nation pauses to remember the birthday of Old Glory, beloved emblem of our country for 164 years, it will also recall that it was in 1777 that the Stars and Stripes first waved "o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

Long before Old Glory became the flag of our country, there were scores of banners representing the hopes and aspirations of the colonists. Some of them displayed beavers, anchors, pine trees and other insignia, often with the words, "Liberty," "An Appeal to Heaven," or some similar slogan.

The so-called "rattlesnake flag" appeared in several designs. Sometimes the rattlesnake was displayed on either a plain white or yellow banner; sometimes it was shown undulating across the thirteen red and white stripes, or coiled at the foot of a pine tree. Often it bore the slogan, "Don't tread on me!"

The first flag to show a unity of purpose on the part of the colonists was the Grand Union Flag, or Navy ensign, sometimes called the Congress Colors. It had thirteen stripes, alternate red and white, and it bore the cross of St. George and St. Andrew where the white stars in a blue field now appear.

This flag was flown at Cambridge, Mass., in January, 1776, when the Continental Army came into existence. It was carried ashore by blue-jackets and marines in the Bahamas that year and it figured in many stirring episodes, but it was never officially recognized by Congress as the flag of the United States.

There is a certain mystery regarding the origin of our flag which has never been solved. Historians fail to agree as to who designed the flag or as to the origin of its chief symbolism, the stars and stripes, although a number of ingenious theories have been advanced.

Many persons believe that Betsy Ross, a Philadelphia needlewoman made the first sample of the Stars and Stripes, but the fate of that original banner is unknown. Soon after it was authorized by Congress the flag was flown at a number of locations, and its popularity was assured.

From time to time changes in the number of stars and stripes have been authorized and both the flags flown at Tripoli and at Ft. McHenry had fifteen stars and stripes.

Yet today, save for forty-eight instead of thirteen stars which now appear in the blue field, the flag is much the same as it was 64 years ago.

Old Glory embodies the essence of patriotism. Its spirit is the spirit of the American nation. Its history is the history of the American people. Embazoned upon its folds in letters of living light are the names and fame of our heroic dead, the Fathers of the Republic who pledged upon its altars their lives to their fortunes and their sacred honor.

Our flag bears witness to the immense expansion of our national boundaries, the development of our natural resources and the splendid structure of our mutually helpful social system. It prophesies the triumph of popular liberty and national righteousness throughout the world.

In recent years it has been the custom to observe June 14, the anniversary of our flag's adoption, as Flag Day. It is also an opportune time for all Americans to renew this solemn vow: "I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands; one nation, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all"—Amen.

the future. We have lost part of the wisdom of the past. We have gained the selfishness and the sorrow of the present, and we have begun to lose faith and that hope which would in the end win all battles.

We are, slowly and surely, beginning to blitzkrieg ourselves, and our battle will be lost unless the American spirit and American hope and courage can rise to meet the situation.

American labor must forget strikes. American business must forget enormous profit. The American people must forget luxuries. American politicians must forget personal desires and selfish interests. These will be the first steps in a counter-blitzkrieg against the forces of tyranny and catastrophe.

If we are able to carry out these steps and then have the vision and the strength to carry through with the other things we must do, then, and only then, will America be able to live freely away from the thought of the word blitzkrieg, and to be able to see that the world lives in that same peace of mind and that same security of body.

Gayda declared that the Axis is prepared to launch a new phase of the war immediately and that all phases of possible United States entry into the conflict have been examined.
"Today," he writes, "a new offensive must be launched. Britain cries to the United States for help. The Axis powers can mass their reserves of military and political force in both Europe and other parts of the world—for either defense or offense."
He said that there was no doubt that Hitler and Mussolini had examined the results of the "war cycle which has just been completed and outlined plans for the new phase of the war which will commence immediately for the victorious Axis forces."

TOKYO, June 3.—Japan is supplying Germany with 1,500 tons of essential commodities and commodities every day, informed sources declared today, and efforts are being made to increase this despite a recent 500 per cent advance in freight rates to Berlin on Soviet Russia's Trans-Siberian Railway.
The shipments from Japan, Manchuria and Japanese-occupied sections of China have been going out smoothly for several months, these sources said, and Germany has sought to minimize effects of the British sea blockade by trading through her Axis partners in the Far East.

First Paving Project On U. S. 31 In Chilton County Completed

The first step in the modernization of U. S. 31 from Birmingham to Montgomery and coming through the heart of Chilton has been completed. The state's busiest thoroughfare has been opened to heavy traffic and the public has shown its preference for this route by crowding it for the past several days, since its first improvement project has been completed.

Clanton is enjoying the heaviest tourist traffic that it has seen in several years. Also, those traveling from north to south on their vacations are using this most direct and convenient route to the Gulf.

The improved highway being built from the curve about three miles north of Clanton to Calera is also fast becoming a reality. When this project is completed the distance from Clanton to Calera will be lessened about six miles. All bad curves that have been in the past made driving hazardous on this piece of road will now be eliminated.

BUTTONS, BUTTONS, WHO'S GOT THE BUTTONS?

The Boy Scouts of Troop 57 made the rounds of residences last Tuesday collecting buttons for the Red Cross. James Carl Martin was the leader in the movement and gathered a peck of them.

Next Tuesday, June 17th the Scouts will again make the rounds in quest of buttons of any size or kind, they can use them all. If you have any surplus buttons laying around the house get them ready—the Scouts will call for them.

Organizations or individuals may, of course, display in a proper manner, the Flag of the United States of America either daily or as often as desired. The following days, and other appropriate local or national public or historical occasions of a military, civil or religious nature, may be considered appropriate.

New Year's Day, January 1; Lincoln's birthday, February 12; Washington's Birthday, February 22; Easter Sunday (variable); Jefferson's birthday, April 13; Mother's Day (second Sunday in May); National Maritime Day, May 22; Memorial Day, May 30; Flag Day, June 14; Independence Day, July 4; Labor Day (last Sunday in September); Columbus Day, October 12; Armistice Day, November 11; Thanksgiving Day (the last Thursday in November), and Christmas Day, December 25.

Attempts to "improve" the appearance of the National Flag by other methods of display, such as fastening it into a rosette or using it as draping, lack the respect due this symbol of our country.

Whether indoors or out, the Flag should not be festooned over doorways or arches, tied in a bow-knot, or otherwise employed in a purely decorative manner. For these purposes, bunting of the national colors is more appropriate and, since the blue union is the Flag's honor point, the bunting should be arranged with that color uppermost.

At unveiling ceremonies the National Flag should form a distinctive feature of the program, but should not be used as a covering for the statue.

The use of the Flag for athletic uniforms, handkerchiefs, napkins, or other purposes lacking in dignity and respect, while not strictly a violation of law, is offensive to persons of patriotic feeling.

When the Flag becomes soiled, it may be laundered with propriety. This is best done in one's own home.

Chilton To Share In New Highway Building Program

Furthering of University Highway Will Absorb Much of Expenditures

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Road construction estimated to cost $4,300,000 and overpass and underpass projects for elimination of grade crossings calling for the expending of an additional $177,000—all on the Federal Aid System—are slated to be put under contract in Alabama between now and Oct. 1, 1941. These figures have been released by State Director Chris J. Sherlock, who stated that the work to be let on both types of construction is expected to exceed four and three-quarter million dollars, or approximately $4,877,000.

He added that the estimated cost of these projects does not include that of road and bridge building work on which bids were opened by Highway Department engineers during the recent annual convention in Mobile of Alabama Road Builders' Association. Contracts for that work have since been awarded amounting to $960,620.58. Neither does it include additional work on which bids were opened April 18 and on which contracts have been let totaling $227,766.49.

Projects affecting Chilton County are to be awarded before October 1st, are as follows:

Autauga County. From Prattville to the Chilton County line—(University), —23 miles.

Bibb County—From the Chilton-Autauga County line to the Tuscaloosa County line—(University Highway)—28 miles.

Chilton County—From the Chilton line to the Bibb County line—17.1 miles.

Council Says That Reckless Driving Must Stop

The City Council has had many complaints about reckless driving in Clanton. The reports are that certain people in town apparently try to see how many corners they can turn on two wheels of an automobile.

At the last regular meeting of the Council instructions were issued for the Police Force to stop this reckless driving. We hope that it will not be necessary to arrest and fine anyone, so we are taking this means of asking everyone to please drive more carefully, thereby protecting the lives of others as well as their own.—C. E. STAPP, Mayor.

Saturday Is Final Day For Filing Intention Sheets

1,800 Operators Have Failed To State Position On Stamp Program

By PAT H. SMITH

County Agent, Chilton County There are about 1,800 operators in Chilton County who have not signed an "Intention Sheet" to participate in the Cotton Stamp Program and Saturday afternoon, June 14 is the last day to sign. This is the program whereby farmers may earn cotton stamps for reducing their acreage planted to cotton in 1941 below the acreage planted in 1940 or below the 1941 allotment if the 1941 allotment is less than the 1940 planted acreage. This pay in Cotton Stamps is based on 10 cents per pound times the 1941 AAA normal yields times the number tenant or farmer operator without tenants may earn not over $25.00 worth of stamps. A tenant or operator with two or more worksheds or an operator with one or more tenants may earn up to $50.00 worth of stamps. These stamps may be used in purchasing cotton goods from your merchant.

No one will be eligible to receive these stamps unless an "Intention Sheet" is signed by Saturday noon, June 14. This means that everyone who has not signed this sheet should do so at once if they are to receive any stamps. These sheets may be signed at the AAA office in Clanton anytime between now and noon Saturday, June 14. Only the operator of the farm can sign this sheet.

It is felt that there are many farmers in Chilton County who will be eligible for stamps due to the dry weather reducing their cotton acreage. Many of these who will be eligible have not signed their "Intention Sheets". Unless this sheet is signed no stamps can be issued even though the cotton acreage has been reduced. The signing of this sheet does not obligate in any way; therefore, it is hoped that every farmer will sign one of these not later than Saturday noon, June 14.

CLYDE MIMS GROCERY DISPLAYS LARGE ONIONS

HELP THE FIRE DEPARTMENT BY STAYING AWAY TO THE EDITORS:

We will appreciate it if you will call to the attention of the people of Clanton, the fact that there is a State Law against following the Fire Truck. As a result of some citizens following the fire truck last week, one car loaded with 4 or 5 spectators, came very near being in a serious accident.

The Fire Department is manned by volunteers. When he fails to catch the truck, they report to the fire in their own automobiles or trucks. The citizenship of Clanton can do of valuable assistance to the fire department if they will pull into the curb as the fire siren starts blowing, and stay there until the truck and the boys in their private conveyances have time to reach the fire.

We do not want to arrest anyone for violating the law. Therefore, we are asking this means of asking everyone to cooperate by not following the fire truck and by not congregating at the fire.

—C. E. STAPP, Mayor.

But where life is more terrible than death, it is then the truest valour to dare to live—Sir Thos. Browne.

Mark Remarks:

The real reason why there is no more speed in the Defense Program is because there are too many people who are more interested in what they are going to get out of it than they are in how to help win the war.

The newspapers that are now objecting to the property confiscation bill, are the same ones that were applauding the president, when he asked for the confiscation of the youth of the land to go into military training, in order that Our American Way of Life might be preserved.

And God said: "Let there be light, and there was light."—Blackouts are caused by the Devil's work.

The corner stone of a lasting friendship cannot be fashioned with a chisel of hate and a mallet of might.

N. L. Bracking, the man you meet to wear diamonds, in a letter to the Hartford News-Herald, found in Geneva County, from whence he came, said that six out of nine University graduates who had applied for positions in a questionnaire after the question: "Who is governor of Alabama?" answered, "Bibb Graves."

Asas, G. Dobbins is really stepping along with his Annetion Times. He is two-timing us each week now, and we will not be surprised when we find the Times on our exchange table each day. More power to you Charlie.

Farmers and soldiers, the two most essential groups in the Nations plan for safety, receive the lowest pay for their services of any group. Re-adjustment here is badly needed, if we expect to survive and continue to prosper as a democracy.

The Communists in this country constitute a danger to the American Way of Life than do the Socialists and Fascists; and the three combined are creating a menace that is fast becoming acute.

Under the Heading: "Bad Political Timinag," The Selma Times of Sunday carried a lengthy editorial from The Selma Daily Home stating in essence that Bibb Graves had started his campaign for Governor too soon. Some advice from the Daily Home editor endorsed by the Selma Times-Journal editor, coaching Bibb Graves in matters political, in comparison, is like Mark who Remarks telling Orville Wright how to build airplanes.

Now that the President is asking for power to confiscate property along with man power, we may expect to hear less and less about "forcing men to work." In an emergency the president should have the power to force both to work in the interest of the common good.

"More than $65 billion dollars of wealth in the United States in the form of dollar producing securities are untaxed." These securities should be taxed to help carry the defense and all out aid to Britain burden. Congress granted these special privileges—only Congress can take them away.

AOAT is what is going to take to lick the Axis juggernaut: Aluminum, Oil, Airplanes and Tanks. And lots of 'em.

Westbrook Pegler, the columnist says, "You can't regulate industry and not regulate people." Westbrook could also have added, but didn't "You can't regulate people and not regulate industry."

A few months ago we were howling over-production of just about every commodity known to man; today we are howling about shortages of many of the most important commodities necessary in our National Defense Program. It makes us wonder if we know what we actually have—or want.

If Davey Jones should "pull the plug out of the bottom of the ocean" and let all the water out, another war would be started within twenty-four hours over the metal that has been sunk.

The Montgomery Advertiser suggested that the people go out to the ball games, turn their lights out at home, and thus save enough electricity to light the baseball park. This suggestion was made in Greenville a week ago by the president of the Rotary Club. Great minds!—Greenville Advocate.

Yeah, great minds; like the fellow who stopped using the radio in his automobile in order to conserve electricity to aid the National Defense.

Five persons are dead as a result of two automobiles going head-on here in Chilton County last week. From what I have been told both cars were going at a very high rate of speed, over what is perhaps the roughest stretch of road on U. S. 31 between Jemison and Birmingham. As far as could be learned there was no reason for unusual speed on the part of either driver. One driver was bringing his sister-in-law with his wife and other members of his family to Jemison; he was killed instantly; his wife and a daughter died later in a Birmingham hospital. The other driver, with a friend, were going to Birmingham for the week end, had all night to get there in. This was not an accident, but gross criminal negligence on the part of someone who is now beyond the realm of physical punishment. Moral: you may be next one to meet an irresponsible reckless driver coming down the highway. Better, can arrive late than to arrive in the back end of an ambulance.

EDITORIAL TALK

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO—

Fifteen years ago the greatest public question of the moment was: "Will Gertrude Ederle be able to swim the English Channel?" How times have changed!—Tuscaloosa News.

"VERTICAL ENVELOPMENT"

"Vertical envelopment" is the military term for landing troops from planes as was done by the Germans on Crete. It's frightful business, one imagines, by whatever name it is called.—DeKalb Times.

GREED—

Greed, if we knew not the meaning of that word there would be no war.—Ft. Payne Journal.

GEORGE DIDN'T DO IT—

"Grant cinches city recreational project" says a big headline in The Chilton County News, making us wonder what our Congressman was doing cinching projects for Clanton, which is 'way out of his bailiwick. But we found that it was a WPA Grant, and not a George Grant that was referred to—Greenville Advocate.

THE NEWSPAPER

People never go to a store and ask the merchant to give them a pack of chewing gum, box of matches, can of meat, a bottled drink, cake of soap, paper of pins or anything else that sells for a nickel—yet there are folks who never think of sending a nickel when they want a copy of the newspaper. Just because a few extra copies are in the office no one signs they are free than the extra can of meat or box of matches left in the store after you have made your purchase.—Cherokee County Herald.

END OF HONEYMOON

War is now to become real to the people of the United States, thinks David Lawrence, United States News, and this reality will be felt first by the business men and consumers, not by the armies and navies, not by the men who later do the fighting. This, thinks the News, will be brought about by a shortage of essential raw materials which will force those factories without defense orders to shut down, thereby leaving thousands of laborers out of work. This enforced idleness will be felt along many lines and will bring a foretaste of what is in store for us. The News terms this the defense honeymoon coming to an end.—Clark County Democrat.

WHY NOT BUY "ALABAMA"? OUR PRODUCTS ARE JUST AS GOOD

Idaho potatoes, western meat, Georgia peaches, Washington apples, Wisconsin cheese, Georgia water-melons, Florida oranges and Missouri mules. These and countless other advertisements meet the eye, extolling the goodness and qualifications of produce and such that we here in Alabama can buy from other states. We know now that everything, especially the vegetables and other eatables that we must have can be grown or manufactured right here in Alabama. Are we just plain suckers for something that comes from other states or is it just a human failing that we think simply because the name of another state is tagged on what we want that it must be better? A great, money backed concerted movement to have stuff from Alabama tagged as such needs to be initiated—but to make this action successful Alabama consumers must buy "Alabama."—Fell City News.

WHAT WOULD WILL SAY TODAY

If Will Rogers were alive today, what would he say about the American trend toward war? When he was alive the beloved American philosopher and humorist had some very truthful and plain things to say about European-American relations, and events since his death have shown his words to be prophetic.

"Europe tells us they want our moral leadership and moral responsibility and tells us we're so big, and so strong, and so wonderful, and so marvelous. But they're the same folks that call us Uncle Shylock and money grabbers and blatant and ill-mannered and all the time talking about how we won the war. I don't see how these two ideas work together. I think we should be sympathetic toward European nations and all that, but we don't have to marry Europe. And when the country finds itself married to Europe there ain't none of this divorce in Reno by noon. Say, listen, you're tied up and going to find it hard to break loose. And then they'd sue us for non-support."

What would Will Rogers say today? It would do the American people good to hear some common sense in the midst of propaganda. Is there no way out but in? Must we forever pay Europe's bills?—Roanoke Leader.

SAVING LIVES ON OUR HIGHWAYS

There are, perhaps, many thousands of ways in which an automobile or a pedestrian can die in connection with highway accidents.

You can't possibly know all of the tentacles that sudden death, reaches after you as you speed along the highway, whizzing nowhere in particular at sixty miles an hour.

There is only one defense against all the hazards of motoring, so far as you are responsible for your own safety. That is to drive carefully at all times and obey traffic regulations implicitly.

Of course, many thousands of Americans are killed and injured every year while driving sanely and carefully. They are the victims of careless, irresponsible and lawless drivers who make motoring a hazard.

Pedestrians die by the hundreds every month because they dared to use the highway despite the danger that speeding drivers might not see them as they marched along or crossed arteries of traffic. Some of them invite their fate by taking unnecessary risks, by disregarding regulations designed for their protection and by carelessly risking their lives before speeding vehicles.

It is time for all traffic authorities to make a determined effort to enforce all traffic regulations. No matter how minor a violation may be, the guilty motorist should be apprehended and punished. By the same reasoning an offending pedestrian, likewise, should be compelled to obey traffic regulations.

The prompt and permanent enforcement of traffic regulations, including signs along the roadway, would do much to make the public safety conscious. The man or woman, driver or pedestrian, who is fined a few dollars for failure to obey the laws of the road, will soon come to the point of observing the rules, if only to avoid the penalty.

In the long run, such a campaign for enforcement of safety regulations will do something toward saving the lives of some hundred persons who are killed every day on our highways.

IT LOOKS EASY

The mere matter of taking off a few months traveling over the states 67 counties contacting the political big-wigs and sewing up their support with some well-directed promises, and being elected governor of Alabama may look pretty easy to some people, but if it does, they are laboring under gross delusions.

Thus, every time Alabama's election time rolls around, there are quite a number in the "field" of potentialities, even go so far as to announce their intentions of running, drop out at the last minute by failing to qualify.

Thus far in the state, we have five men who are potential candidates, and three of them have already announced that they are definitely going to qualify. John Peach of Decatur, Hillary J. Carville of Clay County, and Dr. J. B. Mills of Ozark, all have announced their intentions, definitely to be in there slugging next year. Bibb Graves and Chauncey Sparks, known to be candidates all over the state, have not spoken definitely about their races as yet.

Peach, when he made his announcement, a few months ago, was marked as the Dixon candidate, who hoped to carry on as the present governor is doing and since that time has been feeling the state's political pulse, is apparently still involved so much in the race that he is closely connected with the administrations will mean that he will have some support.

Carville of Clay County, who, according to a Birmingham news commentator, is going to campaign in an ex-wagon, is reported to be without any organized support, will probably run for his own pleasure.

Dr. Mills, Ozark dentist, is basing his campaign on Bibb Graves, plans a tirade against the "Little Colonel" in about the same fashion as was employed by Chauncey Sparks in the last campaign, when he passed out sales tax tokens, declaring that if he were elected, they would be removed.

Some question has been raised as to whether Peach or Sparks will receive the whole-hearted endorsement of the present administration, whatever strength that would mean, but in some circles it is believed that Sparks will be the stronger of the two for two good reasons: first, he has made the race before... made a creditable showing against Frank Dixon in the last gubernatorial race; and second, he has laid his ground-work for some good organized support.

Graves, on the other hand, has kept in touch constantly with the goings-on throughout the state and has been rising in strength for the past three years, and has probably garnered more organized endorsements than any governor in history. He has said little nothing definite, is carefully laying his plans.

Most Graves enthusiasts believe that he will overwhelm any kind of opposition that is put against him, believe that aside from Sparks, the rest left for the "field" will be few indeed. His opponents, however, declare that his campaign has gotten too far along to come to its proper peak next spring, go further by saying that a very terse and definite reaction to the Graves gubernatorial methods will arise before voting time.—Cullman Banner.

NUTRITIONAL CONFERENCE RECOMMENDS MORE FOODS

Among the final recommendations of the National Nutrition Conference for Defense were these:

1. Increase the production of agricultural products in which the American diet is deficient.
2. Encourage greater use of resources for home foods, by means of conservation practices, pasture improvement and gardens.
3. Improve distribution of foods through new methods and economies in processing, marketing, packaging and labelling.
4. Make the fullest possible use of such practical devices as the food stamp plan and school lunch program.
5. Mobilize every educational media and method to accomplish these purposes.

Gross income and government payments in Alabama in 1940 amounted to $168,734,000 while in 1939 this figure was $173,293,000. Gross income includes not only cash crops and livestock sold but value of crops and livestock retained and used on the farm.—G.O.P.

Cash income per day per 100 persons during April was $1.09, as reported by 141 farmers cooperating in Alabama poultry demonstration.

How Much Electricity to Produce the Aluminum For a Fighter Plane?

IT TAKES about fifteen hundred pounds of aluminum alloy to make one type of small training plane. Fighter planes require fifty-five hundred pounds, and bombers take from eighteen to thirty thousand pounds. That's the reason aluminum is the nation's Number One defense material.

The production of aluminum alone requires 10 kilowatt-hours of electrical energy for EACH pound of finished product. A large part of ALL of the aluminum produced in the United States is made in the Southeast. Consequently huge INCREASED amounts of electric power from Southeastern power production facilities are necessary to meet the needs of national defense not only in the aluminum industry, but also in other Southeastern industries engaged in defense production.

So, every time you have saved 10 kilowatt-hours of electricity, you have made available enough electricity for the production of one pound of aluminum. When this saving has been repeated fifty-five hundred times, there is enough power to make aluminum for another fighter plane.

HOW MUCH IS 10 KILOWATT-HOURS OF ELECTRICITY?

It is the quantity required for typical electric uses as follows:

A 100-watt lamp operating	100 hours
An attic ventilating fan operating	30 hours
A 10 horsepower motor (loaded) operating	80 minutes
A 100 horsepower motor (loaded) operating	8 minutes
A 25 horsepower air-conditioning unit	32 minutes

These few examples give you an idea of the all-out cooperation required from every industry, store, institution and individual to supply the demands of national defense during the drouth.

They further illustrate the effect that mass economy in the many uses of electric energy can have on keeping up the water storages, so essential to the production of aluminum and other important defense materials.

ALL NON-DEFENSE ACTIVITIES MAY HAVE TO CURTAIL

If the water in the hydro-electric reservoirs should become exhausted, the generators in the storage plants would be of little or no use. Entire reliance must then be placed on steam generating plants, already running 24 hours a day, together with such power as can be obtained from other sources and from the greatly reduced natural river flows.

The voluntary curtailment of the use of electricity in response to the appeals of Government agencies and the power systems in the Southeast has been gratifying, and is appreciated; but it is not enough to meet the critical situation. Unless the situation is relieved AT ONCE by widespread, heavy and extended GENERAL rainfall all over the Southeastern hydro-electric watersheds, GENERAL CURTAILMENT OF ELECTRICITY USE IN INDUSTRIAL PLANTS WILL BE THE ONLY ANSWER TO KEEPING DEFENSE INDUSTRIES OPERATING AT TOP SPEED!

We are not alarmists, but we would be failing in our duty if we did not fully acquaint you with the situation. Please, if you have not already considered the situation serious enough to warrant your voluntary curtailment of your use of electricity, do so now TO THE LIMIT OF YOUR ABILITY, and have the satisfaction of knowing that you are doing your part toward keeping national defense industries running.

Maintenance!
More maintenance! what will be left for New Roads ?

Concrete roads help answer that problem.

Concrete costs only one-third as much for maintenance, per mile per year, as other surfaces on Alabama's main roads.

So-called "low cost roads" may seem cheap at first. But in a few years their expense for repairs and maintenance eats heavily into construction funds. Appeal to your public officials to pave your main traveled roads with concrete. Concrete is lower in cost per year, including maintenance. And its high visibility at night, its skid-resistance, wet or dry, saves lives and property.

Dr. Gragg Suggests County Prepare
Now To Safeguard Its Future

COUNTY-WIDE ORGANIZATION TO WORK FOR GOOD OF COMMUNITY PROPOSED

Dear Editor:

About two years ago I wrote an article for one or both of our local papers under the heading of "Where are we going and what will we do when we get there?"

I think if those who took the time to peruse that article will do so, they will admit that I was not far from correct in my predictions at that time. I leave that to them.

Now, for the present, let's get right down to the facts as pertain to our country as a whole on the one hand and to our own Chilton County as a community on the other hand.

It seems that we have persistently done nothing today that could, by the broadest range of imagination, be put off till tomorrow. Especially does this hold regarding preparedness.

After World War No. 1, we took a sea and did target practice at it. We considered part of our Navy out to tried singling it with some old time airplanes armed with old style light and powerless bombs. We pronounced this a failure, and finished the ships off with broadside from some ships and torpedoes from others and called that a good job.

Then, traveling under the theory that all was going to be peace, pleasure and happiness ever after, we waited around twenty years before we decided to float another battleship. This was done a few months ago, and before long it will be ready for active service.

I believe we have two more coming in sometime this year. You should not forget that it requires about a year after one of these babies are floated to get it ready for service. It requires from three to five years from beginning of construction till completion and commissioning.

Practically the same condition held good with our air forces. We were content to brag about how quick one of our racing planes could cross the continent, or how many passengers, an American Airways Clipper could carry across the ocean, or how fast one of our new attack planes could dive. We Americans seem to be entirely unmindful of the fact that we were sitting back in an easy chair and bragging about a little handful of "samples" and forgetting to put these things in any sort of production let alone mass production; while the sickening fact remained that the great bulk of our air force was the slow going, hundred mile an hour type, compared with some other countries' much larger production and three-hundred miles an hour speed.

At last we have awakened from our lethargy. We are now trying to do in a year or two, what might reasonably have been accomplished in a period of five to ten years. But, alas, we have the enemy, not at our door, but within our household. Now that we are trying to build battleships; and go into mass production of fighting planes, tanks, and other war material too numerous to mention; an enemy arises in our midst. Ill-timed strikes by the scores, are being called in many of the largest plants producing the most needed material.

Do we need to be alarmed? Is there danger ahead for the unprepared? Should we as a people, come to understand the gravities of the situation? Our President says yes. His cabinet says yes. The Congress says yes.

Mr. Willkie, the erstwhile opponent of President Roosevelt, says that Britain is tottering, and needs our wholehearted help, now. And goes further and says that he has no respect for a Republican who would attempt, at this critical moment, to slow down or antagonize this measure. And he says he has no respect for a democrat who would seek to profit or gain office by it.

If the leading wise men of both great political parties are agreed on a unanimous yes; then who says no. It seems to me that both labor and capital should realize that the inevitable result of lack of cooperation and non-production, will mean, first a victory for Hitler and second the destruction of capital; and steady work at a few cents a day for the laborer who is now striking that is paying several dollars a day.

But let us turn our attention to matters pertaining to us locally. Locally, what is the matter. Comparatively speaking, we are giving nothing and getting nothing. Is there anything at hand or nearby to do. Yes, the Coosa River should be developed. At the recent meeting in Washington, regarding the development of the Coosa, scores of men were there representing other parts of Alabama and Georgia, but not a single representative went from Chilton County. This state of affairs was keenly observed by our Congressman; could he wholeheartedly work for a thing that we passed unnoticed.

Other big projects worth many millions are being located and developed in many parts of this state and all over the United States. All this money going to the other fellow.

Of course a few men from Chilton; comparatively few indeed, are leaving home and going to these places. These places are situated from fifty to one thousand miles away and these men are traveling all this distance to earn a few dollars of these millions; when, if we were getting our share of the development, many many more would be working and all would be at home.

Development of the Coosa would make an open waterway from North-west Georgia and Northeast Alabama all the way down through the center of our state to Mobile in the extreme Southwest, including some of the best cities and towns in the state. It would develop much of what is now an undeveloped territory; and make it possible for hundreds of families to live in comfort where such a thing is now impossible.

Right here in our Chilton-Coosa section of the river, there would be two docks to build and quite a length of canal to dig. Many hundreds of men would have work on this construction for quite a long while.

Closer home, here at Clanton, we have one of the best small airports to be found anywhere. It is the property of Chilton County and our people should be justly proud of it, and of the foresight of our Commissioners in making it possible for us to have it.

Recently the War Dept. through some of our Aviation Officials have tentatively offered to double the size of our airport if we will furnish the land and survey it. The government would meet all the expense of grading, building, filling, draining, fencing, sodding, lighting, etc. This would bring somewhere around fifty thousand dollars or more to Chilton County and give one hundred men work for a long time. This would make our field large enough to accommodate any size ship and would assure us a mail and passenger service in the very near future. Any town of much size, without air service from now on, will be like one of our field improved? Because it is the most strategic field of its size in Alabama. I say this without fear of contradiction. We are so near Maxwell Field as to be a natural sub-field in time of war or peace. From the air we are in sight of both Lay Dam and Mitchell Dam, and will be a natural guard field for both of them and their transmission equipment going out to supply a great part of the southeast.

We are on a direct line between Birmingham and Montgomery and almost midway between the two and near enough to be used for an out-post field for either or both. At present Uncle Sam is taking over the job of training some ten thousand British Pilots annually. More than five hundred of these are in Montgomery now. If our field is enlarged in time, we will doubtless get several hundred of these students. Besides the money, the advertising will be quite an asset.

Are we going to do our bit, and while helping our country, help ourselves locally? It will take some effort individually and collectively. We must pull together. Incidentally, I might mention that some of us made all the preliminary arrangements for Clanton to have a National Guard Unit a few months ago. Our Congressman was giving his hearty support and cooperation, but when the time came to land this proposition somebody was "asleep at the switch", locally.

The things I have mentioned and others that I have not mentioned or even thought of can be done if enough interest is manifested by concerted action.

It seems to me that we should have a county-wide organization, through which matters might be dealt with a broad way and not be left to catch small community to fight alone for things that are needed for the betterment of our entire county, state and Nation. Mr. Editor, what do you and your readers think about it?

—DR. V. J. GRAGG.

FIVE ISABELLA GIRLS RECEIVE STATE DEGREE

The Seventh Annual F. H. A. convention met at the Alabama college at Montevallo, June 5-7. About 400 girls attended this convention with over 200 chapters represented.

Six girls from the Isabella F. H. A. Chapter with their advisor, Miss Evelyn Studdard, attended this convention. Five of these girls received their State Degree. The Isabella F. H. A. Chapter and school as a whole should commend these girls, as they are the first girls from this school to receive this degree. With much determination and after receiving the first three degrees, these girls kept striving for this State Future Homemakers Degree. These girls were Carolyn Deramus, Sara Traywick, Betty Lee Tucker, Eva Conway and Susie Nell Sexton. Mary Ann Oden attended as an officer.

Each girl reported each moment a very enjoyable one, and will look forward in attending the convention next year.

Railroad Head Alarmed At Defiance Of Labor Leaders

JACKSON, TENN.—The following letter was sent to Congressman Heron C. Pearson by J. B. Triggett, President of G. M. & O. Railroad: Honorable Heron C. Pearson, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Heron: Like other Americans all over the land I am troubled. All my life I have taken for granted the patriotic unity and, therefore, power of the United States. It has never occurred to me to fear that this Nation would not, at any time have a leadership which could, in a crisis, develop our human and material resources into impregnable defense.

During the past week I have become increasingly frightened for my country. Within the past year or two I have had occasion to be thrilled by the bold declarations of our President as he condemned greed and deceit and inhumanity and religious persecution. His assurances of aid to those helpless and suffering people who have been the blameless victims of the Hitler blight have my approval and have aroused my pride. But our boastful faith in these assurances is being given a set-back by the transpiring happenings in our Homeland.

It is not the Lindberghs about whom we have to be concerned but it is the indifference of our Government to the spirit of defiance of the Lewises and the Bridges and others of that character.

If our own citizenship becomes dismayed when we find that the leadership of this Nation seems to admit its impotency in handling an industrial element which puts spoils before patriotism, then how can we expect a mobility war machine like that of Germany to be impressed by our warnings. I am not intending to criticize the laborer. My sympathy lie largely in his direction. But when a so-called labor leader becomes mightier than the Government, it is high time for all of us to tremble. When it becomes necessary for the people of this country to send representatives to New York to consult one man as to whether or not we may have fuel with which to keep our defense industries running, then surely must be something wrong either with us as a people or with our leaders.

When it is possible for a so-called labor leader to announce in public print, "we defeated the combined efforts of the police, the courts, the employers and Washington to break the strike and we won a real victory," then the day has arrived, not for Hitler to be frightened are law-abiding no matter whether they are rich or poor.

It is hardly necessary for me to say that I have no material interest of any kind which would cause me to write a letter like this and I am no better patriot than millions of others, but I repeat again, I am troubled.

Sincerely,
L. D. TRIGGETT,
President G. M. & O. Railroad.

COTTON PASSES 14-CENT LEVEL

NEW ORLEANS, June 10.—Fourteen cent cotton appeared today for the first time, since early April, 1937.

A variety of bullish factors backed the rise, including Washington reports congressional leaders would seek higher parity prices, heavy demand for cotton goods, larger consumption estimates and unfavorable weather in the belt.

The market closed with a net gain of 12 to 13 points.

NEW BATTLESHIP

WASHINGTON.—The Navy, setting the pace for private shipbuilders in the race for construction of a two-ocean fleet, expects to launch at least one of its first 45,000-ton battleships, the New Jersey, next January, about nine months ahead of schedule.

The dreadnaught, for which expanded ways had to be built and which will cost in excess of $90,000,000 is rapidly taking shape in the Philadelphia Navy Yard. A sister ship, the Wisconsin, is well along in an adjoining building way.

AMERICAN FREIGHTER SUNK

American relations with Germany underwent a severe new strain Tuesday.

The captain of a Brazilian rescue ship declared flatly in a radiogram to the Associated Press that the United States steamship Robin Moor, sunk in the South Atlantic on May 21 "was torpedoed" and government officials in Washington expressed grave concern over other reports that the vessel was sent to the bottom by a German U-boat.

If true, it would be the first American ship torpedoed since the World War.

GERMANS GIVE IT THE "LIE"

BERLIN.—German sources said today that roundabout reports of the sinking of the American ship Robin Moor are "confusing, unclear, and contradictory."

The German admiralty said nothing. An authorized spokesman had said that discussion is impossible until that authentic reports are awaited and it was known precisely what happened.

BRITISH NEAR DAMASCUS

LONDON.—The British and Free French drive into French-mandated Syria and Lebanon was officially described as "proceeding satisfactorily."

Tuesday and Cairo sources declared British columns were less than ten miles from Damascus.

"The general impression is that Arab reaction to the arrival of our forces is favorable," a communique of the command said.

28 YEARS OLD & OLDER

WASHINGTON.—With less than an hour of debate, the Senate today tentatively approved an amendment to the Selective Service Act to allow President Roosevelt to defer draft registrants who are 28 years old and older from compulsory military service.

The action was taken by voice vote and was subject to possible reversal on final passage.

In response to questions from colleagues, Sen. Hill, a member of the military affairs committee, explained that if a registrant should reach 28 years of age on July 2, or anytime after the July 1 deadline, he would be removed from the president's discretionary authority to defer him from the draft until the arrival of another July 1.

ARMY PLANS LANDING FIELDS ALONG ROADS

WASHINGTON.—The Army Air Corps today disclosed it has started surveys for construction of 400 emergency landing fields along U. S. highways.

Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, air corps chief, told the House roads committee these fields will be constructed by widening highways at strategic points. He declined to discuss their probable locations.

Estimating they will cost about $50,000 each, he said they would be used for possible "mass movement" of planes.

Six Years
A LEADER

In 1935 we inaugurated our first Rebel. It was the only streamlined train in the South and one of the few in the country.

At the same time another new feature was added to our passenger service. The Rebel train hostesses were the first in America.

Streamlined trains are now numerous, and their personnel generally includes a hostess.

The G. M. & O. is still keeping its pace, and at the end of six years we find ourselves operating five luxury Rebels.

May we not take this occasion to renew the assurance of our desire to furnish the best transportation facilities which our means and ability will permit.

FEED THE BOYS IN CAMP, SAYS MARVIN DURBIN

When the several thousand baby chicks they have "on order" come cheeping out to the farms of 340 FSA borrowers in Chilton County who have agreed to do their bit in the Department of Agriculture's Food For Defense Program, these folks must be ready to care for them, supervisor Marvin Durbin says.

So next week these new "defense farmers" will be given instructions in how to prepare for the induction of these war-foot birds.

Demonstrations will be given in how to build cheaply a dependable brooder, to care for the chicks each farmer is to receive.

"We women know who generally has to do most of the work of chicken raising," Miss Martha Massey, Home Management Supervisor, laughed, "so while the men make brooders we had better decide how we are going to keep our hens alive and laying." This is to be accomplished by good feeding, proper housing and strict sanitation.

Some 21,000 chicks have been ordered, or have been received already and are to the flock of 270 FSA borrowers in Chilton County this spring through this FOOD FOR DEFENSE campaign, Mr. Durbin said. Special supplemental loans are being made to these families for extra milk cows and brood sows as well as poultry, he explained. This is all a part of the general effort to increase production of those strength-giving foods for which there will be such a great need during the present emergency.

"These folks are volunteering for this food production job with the same kind of wholeheartedness that many of their sons have shown in volunteering for actual army service," Mr. Durbin said. "Word comes now that more than men or guns, England needs food. The old folks who stay home on the farm it seems, this time will have the most important role of all to do."

PREVIEWS

By IRVIN LANDE

The United States today is engaged in the greatest national preparedness program any nation in the entire history of our nation has ever attempted to undertake. The ancient Hittites, Persians, and Babylonians did remarkable feats of warfare, but their preparedness was nothing compared to the demands America today is making upon her resources. The Mongols and the Turks seized great areas; but their offensive was nothing more than hand to hand combat. The Greeks and Cretons of old fought fiercely; but they did not force warfare outside of their phalanx. The Romans, under Caesar, took the Germans, the Gauls and the Helvetians, but they did not prepare except for local combat. Richard Lion-Heart did not do more than prepare his small army for the Crusades. Napoleon united Germany but did not prepare his army sufficiently well for the conquest of Russia. Simon Bolivar united and freed South America, but he and San Martin and Miranda did not fight on a large scale. And even in the last war, the Kaiser had prepared his army, but he had not prepared his people, his industrial strength, or his national morale.

Now America is preparing. The great industrial giant of the new West is flexing its muscles for the future. It is getting ready. It is getting ready for the greatest battle of all times. It certainly does not want this battle, but the night is forced upon it and is deciding to accept the responsibility.

It has been just a little over a year since America began to prepare herself, and prepare herself on the greatest scale any nation has ever prepared herself before in all history. At the beginning of this year of National Defense, the Regular Army has consisted of 230,000 enlisted men and 13,500 officers, which is a total of 243,500, besides 225,000 National Guardsmen. Now, one year later, the army has been increased in manpower to 1,302,500, including 473,000 Regulars, 270,000 Guardsmen, 490,000 Selecteds and 79,000 Regular, Reserve and National Guard Officers.

Not only in manpower has the Army been increased. Last year, there were only six divisions—five for the infantry and one for the cavalry. Now, at the present, there is a total of thirty—twenty-seven infantry, one cavalry and two armored divisions. Another cavalry and two armored divisions are on the way, as well as two divisions modeled after the German panzer units.

In money terms, the defense program is enormous. We have already spent five billion dollars. We have contracted for thirteen billion five hundred million dollars. And over forty-four billion has been recommended and appropriated—or, in other words, one thousand two hundred dollars for every wage earner of America.

The Navy too has not been omitted. At the time Congress and America began to realize that the freedom of the seas was in danger, the Navy consisted of fifteen battleships, five aircraft carriers, 36 light and heavy cruisers, 118 destroyers, and 94 submarines. And by 1945 the goal is to have 32 battleships, 18 aircraft carriers, 97 light and heavy cruisers, 364 destroyers, and 183 submarines—a total of 690 combat vessels. At present we have 37. In truth, if figures do not lie, and thus do not, then America is really preparing like it has never prepared before, and like it hopes it will never again be forced to prepare in the future.

And, on the other America is also preparing. Every day we are working ahead in emphasizing the need for armaments, and America is determined not to fall short there. A year ago, the Army Air Corps had only 3,322 pilots and was training 1,894 cadets. The Navy had then only about 3,000 pilots. At present the Army has almost 10,000 pilots and 15,000 cadets in training.

The Navy has been increased to 44,000. Furthermore, the Army plans to turn out 30,000 airmen every year—The Navy expects to have 15,000 pilots by mid-1944. New planes too are being built. And being built quickly. In April output reached 1,427 planes. By next August the output is expected to reach 2,000; 3,000 by May 1942.

America is, then, without a doubt, preparing for something. But the majority of Americans do not know what we are really preparing for. We call it the battle of the ideas—the democratic and the fascist. Yet, we do not see or do not want to see, where or when or how this battle is to take place. We refuse to face the facts. And because we refuse to face them, because we do not want the courage and sagacity to face them, we are left confused, perplexed, irritated. In refusing to acknowledge the truth, we allow ourselves to drift into passive determination, irresponsible leadership and inadvertent failure.

When France fell, when the Netherlands, Belgium, Norway and Denmark capitulated, America began to prepare. We knew that we would have to fight if Britain lost. We kept preparing on a vast scale. After Rumania, Bulgaria, Greece, Yugoslavia and Crete gave in, we were still preparing. But we had lost sight of what we were preparing for. We knew that Great Britain was our last line of defense, between peace and war. As long as Britain stood up, America was safe. The minute Britain fell, we knew that we would be actively engaged in war.

All the other countries have given in, only Britain and a few other dependencies have been able to stand up. Behind the wall of Great Britain, America has acted shamefully, incapable, even idiotically. We have prepared our defense to a measure. But we have neglected to weed our personal prejudices, individual profit, and selfish interests. We have tried to act like a nation at war, and at the same time like a nation at peace. One minute we would recognize the tremendous responsibility of aiding Britain to the end and giving her all the benefit of our natural resources—the next minute we would turn around and argue over strikes and walk-outs, strikes and walkouts that hinder the very course that America is taking.

We have acted like America is invincible, even though she has no boxing gloves. And once she realized the need for boxing gloves, and got them, we forgot that the fighter not trained to fighting cannot win.

We hope that Britain does not lose. We have taken some steps to insure the fact that she does not lose. One minute our leaders tell us that democracy will be victorious, because British sea-power cannot be beaten, and that, as long as Britain rules the waves America can live on, unencumbered. But at the next moment, they tell us that Hitler will take out his Nazi whip on us as soon as Britain loses—take it on because we sided Britain. One day we are told that America is invincible that no foreign enemy can beat a path to our door, over three thousand miles of ocean, and over the strength of the American Navy. The next day we look seriously at all the defense work that is being carried out—at all the improvement in the navy, army and air force.

If we give any thought to the matter at all, we wonder. We wonder why, if Britain can't be beaten, if no enemy can reach the Western Hemisphere, why build all the defenses that we are building. We can even wonder if we foresee power can reach us, why aid Britain at all; for such aid would be a drain on American resources. Then again, we wonder, if Britain is sure to lose, why send her our planes and ships, for we will need them ourselves. We are also puzzled over the fact that if Britain wins this war, what are we, as free, democratic Americans going to do with all the army camps, with all the surplus housing with all the excess ammunition, with all the boys who being out of army service, will want jobs and work and employment. We are fearful of the present. We are doubtful of the future.

And that is the reason why America is confused. That is why we, as Americans, are perplexed. We have refused to face the facts for so long that we can't face them now. We have devoted ourselves to pleasure, to profit, and to our selfish desires. Now, when we need a clear path and a true vision we never have needed them before. We are left without that truth and logic.

But fortunately, the battle is not lost. We still have time to see clearly, to look logically, to think truthfully. For many years, Americans have had no faith in their leaders. They had lost vision for their resources. They had come to disbelieve their commentators and their writers. They fought the opinions of one another. They did not trust themselves.

But now, after years of disbelief and untruth, the decision for the future rests on the shoulders of the same men and women who have before ignored their destiny. They can ignore it no longer; for, if they should, it will pass from their hands the power and the decision to make something out of that destiny. We, as Americans, realize that the course and the destiny of the American people has always been, and always will be, to establish, both in example and in action, a world based on peace and goodwill and brotherhood. From the very first settlers who came here for religious liberty and political freedom to those who inhabit this nation today, America has held this shining ideal.

What we do in the future, as a military power, as an economic power and as a spiritual power, will be to re-assess that ideal, and to write it on our banners and to hold it high. The battle that we will have part in, will not be a glorious thing. It will be hard and determined. And the hardest part about it will be the making up of our inner minds and our hearts. We must admit that we are confused; for we are. We must admit that we have acted selfishly in the past; for we have. But, we must decide that we will carry out our tremendous responsibility for we certainly have one. This is, in truth, what we are confronted with.

Obviously, it is difficult. But if we set before us that highest aim—of peace and goodwill for all mankind as well as for ourselves—and around that goal build our course of action, the future will not seem nearly so dark nor so difficult. But, should we ignore the fact that we are confused at present, that we have made many catastrophic mistakes in the past, that we have no great ideal for the future, we shall never realize our goal, our aim, our destiny. But what will be more shameful—should we ignore our ideal and our work toward it, we will go down in the history books of the future as the most selfish nation that this earth had ever had the misfortune to give one hundred and sixty-four years of peace and freedom to.

POND WEED CONTROL
GIVEN BY BOTANIST

Alabama farm pond owners can eradicate those weeds that are on the water's surface and those that protrude above the surface by cutting them periodically, reports E. V. Smith, associate botanist of the Experiment Station. By keeping the weeds' leaves destroyed the plants will be starved, four or five cuttings during the summer being sufficient.

Smith says that ponds that are properly cared for and fertilized from the beginning are not bothered with underwater weeds which are more difficult to eradicate than those growing on or above the surface.

HOWARD CENTENNIAL
WINDING UP NOW

BIRMINGHAM, ALA. — Howard College's $500,000 centennial campaign now winding up its second month, has gradually been spread over the state, with the launching of the drive in 11 counties.

Counties in which the organizations have been set up or preliminary plans made for the formation of a drive include Jefferson, Shelby, Chilton, Montgomery, Autauga, Lee, Chambers, Calhoun, Etowah, Marshall and Dallas counties.

The state Baptist institution is seeking a half million dollars by January 3, when it will be 100 years old. This fund will be used in beginning a $250,000 building program and in clearing the college of all indebtedness and improving the campus.

LAND-USE PLANNING PROGRAM SUBMITTED

Alabama's Land Use Planning Committee, meeting in Auburn June 2 and 3, prepared a unified farm program and sent it to Washington.

The committee endorsed parity prices and income for farmers, marketing quotas, commodity loans, benefit payments, surplus removal activities, production credit, tenant purchase, rehabilitation loans, food, soil, and forestry conservation. It also recommended construction of hospitals in rural centers, a rural housing program, and construction of defense houses in both urban and rural areas.

The committee endorsed more medical services rural areas through cooperative health insurance and sanitary facilities, gathering of information on the availability of farm labor and the need for sufficient labor on farms and in industries, study of share-rentals on livestock farms, and organization of county defense councils throughout Alabama.

PROPER CARE INCREASES LIFE OF COTTON GOODS

Proper washing, drying, ironing and storage must be practiced if Alabama farm women are to get the most wear from their cotton goods, reports Catherine Haynes and Nell Pickens, extension specialist, Auburn, who urge women to consider the following points in care of cottons:

1. Use a mild soap on materials that show a tendency to fade—a stronger soap may be used on white or heavy cloth.
2. Rinse garments in plenty of warm water as cold water hardens the soap and makes it more difficult to remove.
3. If clothes have been well washed and properly rinsed, boiling and bluing is not necessary.
4. Sunlight is a bleach for white cottons. Colored cottons should be dried in the shade.
5. Irons too hot will weaken cotton fabrics, even when the scorch is not deep enough to be seen.
6. Fold articles as little as possible, creases the length of service of household.
7. Proper storage protects and inhale cotton articles and clothing.

The 1940 value of milk consumed on the Alabama farms where produced was $20,388,000. This figure is exceeded only by Texas and N. C.

Alabama farmers voted 14,131 to 976 for the peanut marketing quota, held recently, in which peanut producers in 16 peanut producing states approved quotas for a three-year period.

THE ARMY'S ON THE MOVE!

ARMY maneuvers on a scale vastly greater than ever attempted in this country are under way and will continue for several months. The scene of these maneuvers is the nine southern states served by Southern Bell.
 It will be both a test and training for the army as well as for the civilian population which provides the vital means of communication, transportation and supply.
 Essential to the success of these maneuvers is an adequate, dependable system of telephone communication. This the Southern Bell Company is providing whenever, wherever and in whatever amount the fast shifting armies require. This means that the Telephone Company, like the army, is keeping its sources of supply, transportation facilities and man power ready day and night so it can act on the moment. Past years of training and experience in meeting emergencies have already prepared our army of telephone workers for this task.
 It is the Telephone Company's plan to take care of the army's needs with little, if any, serious interference with the public's accustomed use of the service. During these maneuvers, however, there may be occasions when for short periods of time our facilities will be mainly required to meet the army's sudden and unexpected needs. Should this happen in your community, your whole-hearted cooperation will be a helpful contribution to the successful advancement of preparedness.

WINNER OF SPEEDWAY CLASSIC

Driving his teammate's car from 15th place to a spectacular victory in one of the most dramatic races ever held at the historic Indianapolis Speedway, Mauri Rose won his first 500-mile race on May 30th.
 Starting the race in the coveted pole position by reason of his highest qualifying speed of 128.691, Rose was well up with the leaders when his car developed engine trouble after 155 miles and was forced out of the race. Lou Moore, owner of the car which Rose had been driving, asked Rose to relieve Floyd Davis, who was driving another one of Moore's cars, and Rose drove to victory at an average speed of 115.17 miles per hour without a tire change or tire trouble of any kind. This was the 22nd consecutive year that Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in this great race.

 One by one, Rose passed the other cars in the race until he had his car in 4th position. At the 300 mile mark a broken wheel eliminated Wilbur Shaw, defending champion and three-time winner, who was leading the race at that point. Driving spectacularly around the turns and brilliantly on the straightaways, Mauri Rose soon overtook the other leading cars and swept across the finish line in a final burst of speed. After completing an extra lap around the 2 1/2-mile track, Rose pulled into the pits to let Floyd Davis drive the winning car into victory lane. Davis, however, already was waiting in the winner's pen to congratulate Rose on his remarkable exhibition of driving.

 Rex Mays, popular California driver, won second place money for the second consecutive year. He was followed across the finish line by Ted Horn, Ralph Hepburn and Cliff Bergere, in that order, all of them riding on Firestone Tires.

THIS WEEK IN NATIONAL DEFENSE

Dr. Will Alexander of the OPM, speaking in Atlantic City, said defense industries will need 4,000,000 more workers by January. He said as examples, the San Diego, San Francisco and Vallejo areas of California will need 31,000; Detroit, 66,000 to 88,000; Philadelphia, 77,000; northern New Jersey, 33,000; Dallas and Fort Worth, 17,200; and Wichita, 7,000. He asked employers not to discriminate against persons with necessary skills because of race, religion or color.
 Labor Secretary Perkins reported 324,000 workers will be needed in the shipbuilding industry, 408,000 in aircraft, 291,000 in machine tools and ordnance, and 384,000 in other defense industries. She said the greatest single need is for 156,000 skilled machinists and 139,000 semi-skilled assemblers.
 War Secretary Stimson announced that skilled workers in the Army will be released, if required in key civilian jobs, upon the request of former employers. Sidney Hillman, OPM Associate Director, again appealed to all unemployed, all persons not in defense industries, and all persons who can do more highly skilled work than required by their present job, to register at local public employment offices so they may be trained and placed in defense work.

ed purchases of 28 merchant ships for use as Army and Navy auxiliaries and ordered Atlantic and Gulf Coast line ship operators to make available 50 per cent of their tonnage. The Navy has 60 and 70 vessels, totaling 375,000 tons, for the 2,000,000-ton emergency shipping pool for lease-lend operations.
 Navy Secretary Knox announced that competitions would be worked out to speed building of ships by awards to the fastest workers and the fastest shipyards.
Navy
 Navy Secretary Knox announced the launching of the 35,000-ton battleship South Dakota five months ahead of schedule. He said he hoped the warship would be ready for service by January although this normally takes a year after launching. Mr. Knox said the Navy's 35,000-ton ships for exceed in power, guns and armor the sunken German warship Bismark. The Navy announced that all Atlantic bases acquired from Great Britain are now available for limited operations and will be completely finished within a week.
Army Air
 The War Department announced high school graduates without sufficient education to become officers may enlist in the Air Corps for training as pilots. Applicants between 19 and 22 will receive preference. The Army said eventually 20 per cent of its pilots may be enlisted men who will be trained to fly and given the rating of flight sergeant with pay of $108 to $207 per month, depending on length of service.

PROSPECTIVE CANDIDATE WRITES TO NEWS

Chilton County News
 Clanton, Alabama.
 Dear Sir:
 Remembering and believing in the old adage of "taking time by the forelock," I am using this opportunity to let you know that, at the proper time I will officially and publicly announce my candidacy for the office of Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries.
 Since becoming of age, I have wrestled my livelihood directly from the soil and for the past twenty years have served my constituents, either as their Legislator or their State Senator. Having served for sixteen years on the Legislative Agricultural Committee, I honestly feel, has equipped me with an unusually keen appreciation of both the basic and practical problems of the farmers, and of the legislature insofar as that branch of the State Government is capable of applying constructive legislation to our agricultural problems. I believe that my years of legislative experience will help me to help others who earn their living from the soil. My record, both as a Legislator and a Senator, is an open book—and one of which I am not ashamed. I have always been vigorous in my support of all constructive legislation, particularly that pertaining to Agriculture, Education and Good Roads.
 I have met each of you in person in the near future, but during the interim, I do want you to know of my intentions and should you feel favorable to my candidacy for the office, I will sincerely appreciate anything that you might do or say in my behalf.
 Again reiterating my wish for your support, I am Respectfully yours,
 R. M. GUY,

REPLANTING OF GARDENS AFTER RAIN IS ADVISED

Gardens which have died during the drought can be kept clean of weeds and grasses and replanted to good advantage after sufficient rains are obtained. "The ground," according to L. M. Ware, experiment station horticulturist, "must be disturbed as little as possible during the drought so that the small amount of moisture available and any surviving plants will not be lost. For this reason pulling of weeds and grasses, not plowing, is suggested. Planting after rains can be done without further preparation to land where crops have died. On a small furrow is advised. If plantings are not to follow crop failures, then preparation and fertilization are necessary after which another rain is needed before planting for best results.

Lima and snap beans, okra, and collards can be planted when moisture is sufficient.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

One day a bright young man stood by the bedside of a very sick brother. The doctor came in and great anxiety was on the face of the entire family. The doctor made a thorough examination and then gave treatment. He said to the anxious parents on leaving "The boy is all right now and he is going to live". Light and hope flooded the soul of the weeping parents and their countenances changed from gloom to light. This young man who stood by the bedside of a dying brother decided that night to become a Physician. Years later he was one of the most famous doctors in America. He was asked why he decided to become a physician and this was his reply. "I am a doctor because I wanted to do the things in life that would bring light and hope into saddened hearts of a saddened world". In selecting your life work be sure that your choice will be doing the thing that will dispel gloom and bring sunshine and hope.

Here is how the Apostles died. Matthew suffered martyrdom by having a sword thrust through his body while in Ethiopia. Mark died while being dragged through the streets of Alexandria. Luke was hanged upon an Olive tree in the land of Greece. He was thrown into a cauldron of boiling oil, but had a miraculous escape. He was slain in Rome by a sword. Peter was crucified in Rome with his head downward. James the greater was beheaded at Jerusalem, while James the less was thrown from the lofty pinnacle of the temple and then beaten to death with a fuller's club. Phillip was hanged in Phrygia. Bartholomew was sliced to pieces and his body was crucified and preached until he died. A sword was thrust through the body of Thomas and he died. Jude was swung up and shot through with many arrows. Matthias was first stoned and then beheaded. Barnabas was stoned in Lycaonia. St. Paul was beheaded in Rome. All of these died because they believed in Jesus Christ. You are not having such a hard time as you think.

After the world war a soldier came home and out of his belongings he hung on the wall of his bed room a faded, old-colored life preserver. "To me" said this soldier, "that is not an ordinary life preserver. It kept me afloat ten hours after the submarine had sent our ship to the bottom of the sea. I want that life preserver to hang there where I can see it the next night at night and the first thing in the morning. Never do I want to forget what that life preserver means to me". You are saved by grace and never should you let Jesus Christ get out of your sight. If Jesus means anything to you, why not give Him the headline place in your life?

History tells us that Richard the Third went out one morning just at the break of day to spy on his own army sentinels. He found one of his tired soldier asleep at his post. Without making a noise the king thrust his sword through the body of the sleeping sentinel and then wrote the following note and placed it on his body, "I found him asleep and have left him to go." What a contrast there is between Richard the Third and Jesus of Galilee. Jesus found his disciples asleep and the last time his kind heart said, "The spirit is willing but the flesh is weak". Just suppose that Jesus should thrust a sword through the chest of every sleeping church member, every professed disciple who is now asleep on his post of duty.

A Christian worker went to a jeweler and bought a nice watch for his daily use. He observed that there were twelve Roman figures on the dial of his watch. On his desk he had a slogan in large type "CHRIST IS THE LORD". He saw that the slogan had twelve letters and so he went to the jeweler and had him place a letter in the place of each Roman figure and around the rim of his watch at each hour point were these letters "CHRIST IS THE LORD". If the Christian worker looked at his watch at mid-day or at midnight, "Christ Is The Lord." It mattered not the hour or place Christ was Lord all the time and everywhere.

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

The first cotton bloom of the season comes to our desk. And as it comes from the North once said, it's a white bloom so this fellow must raise a white flag. Anyway, it was grown by D. Elders of Jemison Road, N. E. raised on the place of P. J. Nor-

... wonder how many of you know the flag of the United States of America. I pledge Allegiance to the flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands. One Nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all. There 'tis, copied it from a book.

... and while we're about it, bet you know there were eleven Commandments. Well, there are ... and can prove it too.

... Russell Suttley says that Jewell is a prizefighter who won the world's title in the Booster drawing. He says that he don't speak that he will boss out at his house anymore, 'til money's spent either.

... George Nagel and his attractive wife, Birmingham spent several hours at the place. George is State Editor of the Birmingham News and a writer. We also enjoyed the guests of Doyle Buckles, Field Representative of the Alabama Press Association, who stopped with us for a short while.

... Can you tell us why there is not a bridge on the Higgins Ferry Road to let people know that the bridge over Creek just below the cemetery is repaired? One has to back up a block or more to place a sign, which is so easy to place a sign not to let the public that construction work is being done there and they could pass.

... Someone called the News office Monday and asked if Shorty Hendley was in. Upon being told that he wasn't, he replied, "well, if he ain't there we'll wait to talk to him then."

... Credit for this newsy item goes to W. D. P. Gulp, who is our Mr. Nip. Here is the story: Mrs. Culp's "We know a tale on a young girl that we can't resist telling. It is that this young lady had one of those housecleaning spells that are necessary to the happiness of the female half of the population. In the process, she collected a number of items, which she decided to burn in the fireplace. After the fire was started, there came out of the fireplace a flaming ball that hopped frantically around the room. With the help of a woman she put out the fire and allowed a considerably singed and frightened child to escape to safer territory.

... Did you ever have a wreck with either car when no one was in either? It was confusing, isn't it. ... It happened to us Sunday morning anyway. Our car was parked in front of the house and F. D. Kellum's was parked in front of Grady Reynolds', something started Kellum's car rolling and wound up against old Betsy in front of our house. ... Not much harm done, something ought to be done when automobiles go around having wrecks without anybody in them.

READER ENDORSES MORAL ECHOES

... Mr. J. M. Williams of Verbena was the News office Monday morning and early to ask us not to distinguish his paper. He says he couldn't get along without reading the Moral Echoes each week. That's his favorite column of the paper. We appreciate Mr. Williams' attitude and always glad to have our subscribers on us.

Two Men Meet Violent Death In Chilton County; Both From Gunfire

Ellis Foshee Meets Death Sunday Afternoon Near Thorsby

Information received was to the effect that Foshee early Sunday morning had, in company with two other men, driven a buggy along an abandoned road near Kendrick's home and when reaching a fence which Kendrick had erected across the road there same down and then went to Kendrick's home and there told Kendrick that he had tore the fence down and that he would continue to tear same down if it was rebuilt. Robert Easterling, local taxi driver, age 28, was instantly killed in the Clanton Bus Station Cafeteria last Thursday night by the proprietor, Millard Lancaster. Mr. Lancaster, it is reported, had been missing sums of money from his cash register, and had decided to go back to his place of business after he had left in an effort to apprehend the pilferer. County Should Produce 189 Registrants On July 1

Chilton County is expected to produce 196 registrants on July 1, 1941, according to figures released by the State Director of Selective Service.

This figure was reached after a careful tabulation of census figures and the normal increase in population, Gen. Smith said. Altogether, 22,000 young men who have reached the age of 21 since October 16, 1940, are expected to register in Alabama. Chilton County's expected registration will be .0089 per cent of that total.

Under the first call for registrants, which included all males who were between the ages of 21 and 36 on October 16, 1940, Chilton County registered 3,334 men. The new registration is expected to bring the total to 3,330 men registered for Selective Service in this county.

Under a recent proclamation by the President, all men who have reached their 21st birthday between October 16, 1940 and July 1, 1941 are required to register on July 1, 1941. In Chilton County they must report for registration at Clanton, sometime between the hours of 7:30 a.m. and 9:30 p.m.

This Week In National Defense

President Roosevelt, declaring a strike at the North American Aviation plant in Inglewood, Calif., was impeding the defense program, ordered the Army to operate the plant after workers rejected Mediation Board terms of settlement. Two days after taking over, the Army reported "100 percent efficiency" with all employees, returned to work. The President said plants which he might be forced to place under Federal control will be returned to private management as soon as possible.

The Mediation Board announced settlement of three labor disputes including the dispute of the soft coal industry. The U. S. Conciliation Service announced settlement of 34 additional disputes.

Selective Service Headquarters ordered reclassification of all registrants "impeding the defense program." The order said "the citizen who has been deferred because of the job he is performing in the national defense program cannot expect to retain the status of deferment when he ceases to work on the job for which he was deferred."

F. S. A. Distributes Livestock To County's Farmers

Drive Being Made To Overcome Shortage Of Essential Food Items

In an effort to increase the supply of strength giving foods in this country and to avert a possible shortage of essential food items the farmers of this and other counties of the country are being furnished through the local FSA office with Poultry, Cows and Hogs with which they may increase the nation's supply of eggs, pork and beef.

The necessity for feeding our own population and at the same time furnishing the embattled British with food has placed a severe strain upon our already overtaxed farm resources. A serious shortage in these essential food items is already being felt and it is for this reason that the Department of Agriculture has instituted its "Food For Defense" program.

Marvin Durbin, director of the local FSA office states that every effort is being made to allow the 300 borrowers from the FSA to cooperate in the program.

In its initial effort in this county the agency has already done a substantial job. 15,000 baby chicks were delivered last week to the farms of Chilton along with 159 cows and 150 brood sows.

The plan calls for a distribution of 25,000 chicks all told in the county. The local hatcheries have been booked till well into July and after using all the local market could supply the remainder were purchased from foreign hatcheries.

Special instruction and consultation has been given to those receiving the initial shipment of chicks. The proper care, protection and sanitation has been explained and so far the results have been better than was expected.

In order to control the price changes natural incident to such an increase these farm products the Department of Agriculture has set a minimum price (Chicago Basis) which will be paid. No 1 eggs will sell at 22c; Pork at $9.00 per hundred on the hoof; Cream at 31 cents per pound for butterfat. All those who can be urged to participate in this program to raise more food for defense. It is the farmer who stays at home and provides the food who in the end pays just how much of a success our defense effort will be.

"LOS ANGELES HERE WE COME-AND HOW"

These were the words probably spoken by Miss Ruby Leigh Duffey of Mt. Creek and Miss Lee Etta Kyser of Marbury when they boarded the Pan American in Clanton last Monday night. They were headed for a two month visit with Mrs. Duffey's brother, Lawrence Duffey (no, not the radio fixer in Clanton). How long they'll spend in sunny California depends. Their tickets cover a period of six months.

The Senate approved a bill to defer men who reach their 28th birthday by July 1 of this year, except those already in the Service.

Ships The OPM granted full priority for materials necessary in the building of 289 merchant ships for U. S. and Great Britain and the 312 special lease-lend vessels.

OPM Production Director Biggers, speaking at Quebec, said, "almost every ship now building in our rapidly expanding yards is ahead of schedule."

The Maritime Commission directed the Southern Pacific Company to deliver for national defense purposes its entire fleet of 10 vessels (66,000 tons) formerly used in coastwise trade.

Lease-Lend Aid President Roosevelt reported to Congress that $75,202,425 of war materials have been transferred to the belligerents, since enactment of the lease-lend law and $4,277,412,879 has been allocated for further aid out of the seven billion provided by Congress. He said that work has started on agreements with foreign governments on the terms (Continued on Page 7)

Mark Remarks:

"Making War Safe." — Editorial headline in Montgomery Advertiser. There is no such thing as "making war safe."

No, Europe's war isn't any worse than Sherman's; ask any Georgian.

Watts more, this shortage of electricity is no light matter.

Already the war psychology is being felt in this country; homicides are noticeably on the increase.

Chilton County News received the first cotton bloom last week; now, if it had been a water melon—well, you know what.

If the money spent for cigarettes was spent for food and clothing there wouldn't be so many undernourished and underclothed children in this country.

Forcing a lot of people to buy less gasoline would really be rendering them a distinct service, instead of causing a hardship.

"Britain Ready to Take Offensive"—Headline in Alabama Journal. Now that's NEWS.

A lot of folks are interested in all this talk about "freezing credits," hoping theirs will be next.

Chilton County News could survive the shock of a dozen or so subscribers (who are behind with their subscription) coming in and paying up.

The defense needs for aluminum, it is said, will cut down the supply of pots and pans. So what? A lot of people here in America got along very well a long time without aluminum pots and pans; and would continue to manage very well if they never saw another aluminum pot or pan.

Mark.

EDITORIAL TALK

BRITISH IN WASHINGTON

We have too many British around Washington. Their ideas and the American idea, don't "jibe" and we see where one of them wants America to have—careless days and meatless days. There is no occasion for such rot in the States. The American Sugar Refining Co. of America is always heeding the United States allowing foreign importation of sugar. The Philippine Island want to ship us the million pounds and we don't need it—Phoenix City Girard-Journal.

There were also too many British in Washington in 1814.

TAXES NECESSARY

We believe that everyone should pay some tax to the support of the government. The payment of taxes tends to create a different interest in government in the minds of the individual. It is a wrong idea that the government is an agency from which to get something. The taxpayer has a sense of giving something for the government he enjoys that the non-taxpayer does not have. Every adult should pay some amount of direct taxes for the support of his government, local, state and national.—The Moulton Advertiser.

And a Sales Tax is the fairest tax that can be levied. Everyone pays for the support of the government in exactly the same proportion; the fellow who pays $10,000 for a tractor pays one thousand times as much tax as the fellow who buys a $1.00 plow stock.

APPRECIATION

We do not appreciate a luxury or necessity until it is about to be taken from us, goes an old saying. . . . We can readily appreciate that adage now since electricity is getting to the point that it might be scarce. We all know now how handy and essential electrical energy is to our everyday life.—Sumter County Journal.

PHONEY BUSINESS

The good old U. S. A. is now buying hogs from Canada with lease-and-money and then sending the bacon to Britain. In other words, we are giving British bacon and giving it back to Britain, all of which goes to show that the American sucker is still biting strong.—Phoenix-Girard Journal.

CROWDED SIDEWALKS

Jay Thornton (The Haleyville Advertiser-Journal), seems mighty proud of his town, at least he brags on it like this, "The writer was in Greensboro, county seat of Hale county in the Black Belt—last Saturday morning and returned to Haleyville Sunday afternoon. In Greensboro, the sidewalks were crammed with negroes. In Haleyville the sidewalks were crammed with white folks. The contrast was striking." Well, down here our sidewalks are just crammed with pretty girls, and if you don't believe it, just come down some afternoon and we'll prove it.—The Covington News.

MUSICAL MUSIC

We are old fashioned enough to think that the popular songs of the gay nineties are a lot more musical and singable than the so-called popular songs of today.—Moulton Advertiser.

AFTER THE WAR

"Even though the war stopped soon, it would be a long time before Europe would be on a self-sufficing basis in livestock products," says Claud R. Wickard, secretary of agriculture. After the war, a large part of the world will be looking to the United States for food.—Louverne Journal.

THEY CALL IT AMERICA

In times like these many of us are suspicious of persons whose names are difficult to pronounce, or whose accents are too pronounced. It is revealing to read figures of the racial and religious mixtures that call itself America. In one of our exchanges we are informed that they are:

"One-third of a million Indian
"One-third of a million Oriental, Filipino and Mexican "15,000,000 Anglo-Saxon; 10,000,000 Irish
"15,000,000 Teutonic; 9,000,000 Slav
"5,000,000 Italian; 4,000,000 Scandinavian
"2,000,000 French; 13,000,000 Negro
"1,000,000 each Finns, Lithuanian and Greek."

In addition according to the same we are:

"2,000 Anglican-Episcopalian
"40,000 Evangelical Protestant
"1,000,000 Greek Catholic
"4,500,000 Jewish
"Two-thirds of a million Mormon
"One-tenth of a million Quaker
"22,000,000 Roman Catholic
"One and one-half million Christian Scientists."—Shelby County Democrat.

FOR SPEEDERS

We believe a highway ought to be built for nothing but speeders and road hogs. Then turn them all loose on it and see how fast they could exterminate each other. It would be a great sport watching them explode.—Oneonta Southern Democrat.

Letters To The Editor

The following letter from Squire J. A. Sample to Hon. G. C. Walker and Mr. Walker's reply, are self explanatory:

STANTON, ALA.
MAY 29, 1941

Mr. G. C. Walker,
Clanton, Alabama.

Dear Mr. Walker: It is being generally discussed that you will be a candidate for the legislature next year, and many of my friends have asked me how you stood on the Old-Age Pension. I feel that we should know how you stand on this important question before making any promise as to how we will vote. I will appreciate a letter from you, that we may know your position on a matter so important to us.

Thanking you, I am,
Your very truly,
J. A. SAMPLE
Justice of The Peace.

June 6, 1941

Mr. J. A. Sample,
Stanton, Alabama.
Dear Mr. Sample:

I have your letter of May 29, 1941 and was glad to hear from you. Answering your inquiry in regard to my position in the Old-Age Pension, will say this:

The Legislature of Alabama passed a law, and the law was approved on September 16, 1939, providing for an Old Age Assistance. Section 3 of this Act provides, "Qld Age Assistance shall be payable under this Act to any NEEDY person who has obtained the age of 65 years." Just who are the "NEEDY" and who are not, the Act does not say, and this places the duty on some Director or Supervisor to determine who are NEEDY ones.

I am in favor of an Old-Age Pension law, that when a person reaches the age of 65 years and upon this person furnishing satisfactory proof of need, he or she is automatically placed upon the list of the needy. The State Government has made provisions for all people who reach the age of 65, this provision is upon the condition that the State and County match this appropriation. I am in favor of matching this appropriation, cut out the red tape and let our old people have the money.

Hoping the above is the information desired. I am,
Yours very truly,
G. C. WALKER

ALABAMA WANTS BIBB GRAVES FOR GOVERNOR AGAIN

As He Was, As He Is, and As He Will Be; Just Plain Bibb Graves—Of the People, For the People and By the People. — Editorial Comment.

ELECT BIBB GRAVES FOR GOVERNOR

(From The Mountain Eagle, Jasper)
Col. Bibb Graves, twice governor of Alabama will become a candidate for a third term in 1942. The Eagle is reliably informed, and there is no doubt that public sentiment all over the state is overwhelmingly in favor of electing him for a third term.

He is the choice of the people of Alabama for governor, and any opposition to his forthcoming candidacy that may develop in the near future will realize the truth of the above statement on or before the Democratic primary election in 1942.

It is not too early for the people of Alabama to begin to think about the election in 1942. The summer of 1941 is at hand, the winter will soon pass away and with the returning spring time, Alabama may be confronted with another political campaign with its inevitable arguments, intrigues and speech-making. But the best speeches to be made for the "Little Colonel" will not be delivered by human voices. Numerous substantial school buildings and numerous hard-surfaced roads and bridges throughout the state will speak for him; progressive legislation enacted by the Graves Administration in the interest of human welfare (and not repealed by an adverse administration) will speak for him; the following list of his achievements will speak for him effectively than any human voice can speak. "By their fruits ye shall know them." The works of Bibb Graves are well known and appreciated in Alabama.

Because of the great European conflict, which is apparently spreading over the world today, untold horrors are clouded with anxiety and faced by a sense of loneliness and separation. The need for unity in Alabama and the nation today was never greater and it will become increasingly so in 1942. National defense is now and will be in 1942 a great concern. "United We stand, divided we fall." "Divide and conquer," says Adolf Hitler.

It being absolutely true that national defense is our greatest concern, it being true that the very existence of our way of life in America is gravely threatened, our people must realize that this is no time for a bitter long-drawn out political fight in which Bibb Graves is the overwhelming choice of the people of Alabama for governor. President Roosevelt, three times choice of the majority of Americans for president, our leader, and it will be good policy for Alabama to select officials who will work in harmony with the President, our leader.

Bibb Graves, whose close friendship with President Roosevelt began some twenty-five years ago, is in complete agreement with the President's policies and has been all along. The President has shown on several occasions that he appreciates Bibb Graves, the most recent evidence being his appointment of Col. Graves on the advisory committee for the construction of military highways from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Our greatest concern now, as just stated, is national defense, but after the war will come a vast readjustment problem that will require unity, also.

Any well informed person knows that Bibb Graves is the choice of a majority of the people of Alabama for governor in 1942. This is no time for internal friction, which would certainly result in a hot political campaign. We MUST devote our efforts to the serious business of National Defense.

Why not make it unanimous for Bibb Graves in 1942?

RUMOR BOYS GO TO WORK

(From The Anniston Times)
Alabama Magazine, political mouthpiece of the arch-reactionaries of the state, reports "that speculation has steadily increased as to whether DeCatur's affable Attorney John H. Peach will actually go to the post" for governor.

This admission, paving the way for Peach to retire from the field, is unexpected. While Peach is regarded by those who know him as a high-type gentleman, his candidacy, believed by many to have come under the sponsorship of Gov. Frank M. Dixon, caused hardly a ripple of interest.

Chauncey Sparks, runner-up against Frank Dixon, appears to be the man who will have to face Col. Bibb Graves, twice-governor and heavily favored for another term of office.

Indication of the sort of ammunition likely to be used in the coming campaign, Alabama Magazine this week publishes a "rumor story" to the effect that Graves has explained plans for wrecking the state merit system. This editor himself heard this week a rumor of Graves' plan to end the Pardon and Parole Board.

To our readers we suggest that these rumor-mongers be placed promptly on the spot by asking them a few questions. Ask them when Bibb Graves said what he is purported to have said. Ask them to whom he said it. When they admit their inability to give details of the statement, as they will have to, then ask them how, if they are honest and fair minded men, they can go about spreading stuff that has no basis in fact?

These are questions also applicable to publications that print unfounded and uninvestigated rumors.

While it probably will be many months before platforms are issued by the candidates for governor, we predict now that Colonel Graves will offer no attack on such progressive laws as those giving us modern civil service and pardon and parole systems.

Those able to think clearly and willing to think fairly will admit that the two Graves administrations, while not without fault, yet set a new standard of progressiveness in roads, in health and in schools. At no fundamental point has any administration following him dared fall below that standard.

Now Governor Dixon has made a real contribution in his installation of progressive pardon and parole methods, and of the merit system. While we have disliked some of his allegations, we freely admit that his work in modernizing the machinery of state government has been excellent.

No small, grudging man is Col. Bibb Graves. Therefore we believe that he will salute the good of the Dixon administration, keep it and built on it just as other governors following him have put the stamp of approval on his advances in roads, health and schools.

DRAFT GRAVES

(From The Fort Payne Journal)
Only a short time ago we drafted Roosevelt for a third term for President and broke all records. It begins to look as if "Draft Graves for a third term for governor of Alabama" will also be a precedent.

WITHOUT OPPOSITION

(From The Wedowee Press)
"FORMER GOV. BIBB GRAVES may be nominated and elected Governor without opposition."

FROM THE FOUR CORNERS

(From The Sumter County Journal)
From the four corners of Alabama the trend for the next governor seems to be "all out" for Graves. . . . It seems that the "little Colonel" is already elected and the election nearly a year away.

LET'S HAVE HARMONY

(From The Livingston Democrat)
To persons interested in seeing the United States make every effort count in the present national emergency the strife, turmoil and, in some cases, unwarranted strikes which have taken place in plants engaged on national defense contracts are inexplicable. Unusually high wages, as compared with the $21 per month paid trainees in the army, do not seem to be sufficient inducement to keep down trouble.

The present is not the time for industrial strife nor does it seem to us to be the time for violent political contests. In this state it is pretty generally understood that there is one man upon whom the people seem to have centered for governor in the 1942 contest. They have tried him out on two previous occasions and have found that he was amply qualified for the duties of the office.

They know he is in full accord with the New Deal and the national administration in Washington; they know that he and President Roosevelt are old friends, their relationship dating back to the Wilson administration, and therefore, he can be of vast benefit to the state and the nation in aiding in the present national emergency.

The voters also realize that this leading candidate for the governorship next year has been one of the staunchest friends of education and agriculture and legislation designed for human welfare. They know full well that no backward step will be taken in his four-year administration and for these reasons the Limestone Democrat suggests that:

Alabama democrats unanimously nominate Bibb Graves for governor in May, 1942, thus avoiding a fight, the result of which probably is already "twit in the stars."

BOUQUET—POLITICAL STRAWS

(From The Reanoke Leader)
Atticus Mullin, Montgomery Advertiser staff writer, attended the convention of county commissioners and progressive judges in Mobile last week and wrote personal comments about various officers he saw there as well as his observations about the political outlook for 1942. . . .

Atticus' political observations: Col. Bibb Graves, who addressed the gathering and called for a more equitable distribution of taxes to the counties and a return to local self-government, was a hero of the convention. Out of 276 delegates from 63 counties who were interviewed, not a single one raised a voice against Graves for governor next time, although four or five did not say they were for him.

Just another of those indications that Graves will be hard to beat.

NEXT GOVERNOR

(From The Andalusia Star)
The next governor of Alabama sent us his subscription to The Andalusia Star the past week-end. 'Ne, it wasn't Chauncey Sparks.

EVERY COUNTY

(From The Fort Payne Journal)
Although ex-governor Graves has not yet announced for governor, the cry seems to be going "EVERY COUNTY for Graves." We wonder if that will be the slogan . . .

It matters not what sort of organization that is, or is not, brought forth by DeKalb County. DeKalb will vote for Bibb Graves for governor next year. We want you to know that.

"HIGH LIFE" BAITS WILL CONTROL ANTS

Ants, which have become prevalent during the last few weeks, can be controlled with carbon disulphide or paraffin baits, advises F. S. Arant, associate entomologist, Alabama Experiment Station, Auburn.

Procedure of eradication is determined by local conditions. If colonies of ants can be located in the soil, dig several holes two to six inches in depth and two inches in diameter and fill each of these a tablespoon of carbon disulphide (high life), packing moist into the openings. Paraffin-kerosene can be substituted for carbon disulphide. The treatment is dusting with two per cent rotenone dust at weekly intervals around the base and foundations of the house.

In combating ants, other than Argentine ants, already in the house, use a bait prepared by dissolving four ounces of sugar in nine quarts of water and adding out-half ounce of rotenone. Place the bait in shallow containers and put small pieces of sponge in the poison. If ants feed on it, rub a little tartr emetic on strips of bacon, says Arant.

Directions for the Argentine ant bait are: Mix together nine pounds of granulated sugar, 9 pints of water, 6 grams of tarric acid (crystals), 8.4 grams of sodium benzoate and boil slowly for 30 minutes and cool. Heat one-half pint of water nearly to boiling and dissolve 15 grams of sodium arsenite in it. Pour the sodium arsenite solution into the sirup mixture and add one and one-quarter pounds of honey and mix thoroughly. Place one-half pint of poison along with a piece of sponge (to keep ants from drowning in the liquid) in the cans.

Farmers this spring have been paying highest wages in 10 years, reports the Agricultural Situation publication. Reason given for this is the increasing number of laborers drawn into industrial plants and military training.

Drill in rows and thin later, spot in hills and thin, or plant in beds and transplant are three methods of growing collards which have proved successful, according to F. E. Johnstone, plant breeder, Alabama Experiment Station, Auburn. Plant now Louisiana Sweet, Green Glazed or Morning Heading variety, he says.

EVEN WITH RAIN, CURTAILMENT MUST CONTINUE

THE water in storage reservoirs for power production is at such low levels that it could not be restored to safe levels without much heavier rains than may be expected at this season. Heavy rains, falling almost continuously for several days, COULD fill depleted reservoirs, but this is only a remote possibility for the immediate future. The best which can be reasonably hoped for is to stop the drain on dangerously low supplies of stored water. This can be accomplished only by reducing the total system output. It is essential, therefore, that you curtail your use of electricity until heavy, general rains relieve the situation.

We and other power systems of the Southeast, in cooperation with Federal agencies, are doing everything possible to conserve our supply of stored water and protect the service to our customers, so that you may resume your normal use of electric power at the earliest possible date. For the duration of the national emergency, however, we all recognize that defense industries must have first call on available electric power.

Your willingness to cooperate to make this possible has been, and is, appreciated by all concerned.

Church attendance here was very good Sunday morning with many visitors present. In the absence of the pastor, who is conducting a revival elsewhere, Rev. Joe Gibson preached a splendid sermon at the morning hour. The Sunshine Chorus sang "Open My Eyes That I May See".

Among those attending the Methodist District Conference in Selma last week were Miss Inez McKee, Mr. J. D. Culp, Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Culp. They also visited the Methodist Children's Home while in Selma.

All people of this community who use Octagon products are urged to turn in their coupons to the Sunday school to be sent to the Children's Home. The orphans get greater benefits from them than we do, and they need them more, so please turn them in.

The Home Demonstration Club met on Tuesday, June 10, at the home of Mrs. W. E. Owens. A demonstration on the making of slip covers for furniture was given to an audience of women of the community.

The home of Mr. J. E. Williams, Sr. was struck by lightning last Saturday and damaged slightly. Several members of the family were shocked but none were injured. We'd be willing to bet that Mr. Eugene paid the preacher on Sunday.

Carl Culp and Carlos Owen left here last Friday to begin a year of military service at Ft. McClellan. We will miss them of course, but we are proud to have young men who are able and willing to serve our country.

The children and grandchildren of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Williams met in reunion at the old family home, which is now the residence of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Williams. An informal dinner was served to the following relatives and friends of the family:

Mr. and Mrs. O. Y. Sims, Oliver Jr., and Louise Sims; Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Deason, and Mr. and Mrs. Doc Culver, of Birmingham; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Williams, Sr., Lamar, Hollis, Delmar, Imogene, Leon, Howard, and Melchie Williams; Mr. and Mrs. Crawford Owens; James, Barney, Anna, Willodean, John Earl, Frank, Pat and Frances Owens; Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Williams and Beth; Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Williams and Betty Jo, of Mobile; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Williams, Jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Sims and daughter, Dorothy; Barney Mims, Dorothy Culp, Frances Culp, Cliff Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Hattox Autrey and baby of Selma, and Miss Dorothy Chadler, of Selma. Afternoon callers included Misses Dora and Lurline Graves, of Stanton, Mrs. J. D. Culp and Mrs. D. P. Culp.

Miss Beth Williams has returned from her visit to Selma and is entertaining as her guest Miss Dorothy Chandler of Selma.

Mr. Barney Mims of Maplesville spent the week end with relatives and friends here.

Mr. Lamar Williams spent Saturday night with Mr. Bernice Culp.

A group of young people were entertained at the home of Mr. Eugene Williams, Saturday night at an informal musical social.

Misses Beth Williams and Dorothy Chandler spent Saturday night with Miss Euell Smith.

Mrs. Dave Smith and Miss Euell Smith, of Clanton, spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Smith.

Margaret Williams is spending a few weeks with her aunt, Mrs. R. C. Ward in Pensacola.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Sanders spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Houston Coggins, and family.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Williams and daughter Betty Jo, of Mobile, spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Sims and family.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Williams, Jr., spent Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. Jodie Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Roseberry spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Roseberry of Antioch country.

Mr. and Mrs. Parnell Ratliff and week end with Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Culp.

Mr. and Mrs. Odie Headley were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Culp.

Mr. and Mrs. William Vance of Clanton visited Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Patterson Sunday.

Mrs. Clyde Sims entertained as guests Sunday afternoon her mother, Mrs. Grover of Stanton and her sisters, Misses Dora and Lurline Grover.

Mrs. Shelley Gilliland, who is convalescing from a recent illness, continues to improve.

Mrs. J. D. Culp and Osmond Culp and Mr. D. P. Culp visited Birmingham on Monday.

Co-ed Secures Pilot's License

MIAMI, Fla., June.—Indicative of the enthusiasm with which the nation's college students are taking to aviation, was the granting last week to glamorous Dorothy Ashe, socially prominent daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Bowman F. Ashe (he is president of the University of Miami) of a private pilot's license at the Embury-Riddle Seaplane base here by H. A. Orr, CAA inspector (right) under the government's Civilian Pilot Training Program.

Dorothy, who was born in Pittsburgh where her father was dean of men at the University of Pittsburgh, before assuming his present post, was graduated from the University of Miami on May 27. She has applied to the army air corps for permission to take a basic training course, fitting her to ferry planes and participate in other defense work in the event of war. "I want to do my part to defeat Hitler," she declared.

"POINTERS" ON POTATO DIGGING AND STORING

Dig Irish potatoes when the vines begin to die and fall over. If left in the ground, longer than this they will not store well. This is the advice L. M. Ware, Experiment Station horticulturist, Auburn, gives Alabama farmers preparing to harvest the spring crop of potatoes.

Additional pointers by Ware on digging and storing Irish potatoes include the following:

1. Do not allow potatoes to be exposed to sun any longer than absolutely necessary after digging. Exposure causes rotting in storage.
2. Follow the plow and pick up potatoes.
3. Store in crates that permit free circulation of air. Orange crates make ideal containers. Do not put more than one bushel in each crate.
4. Place crates in cool, dry place for storage. Storm cellars, crib, or under the house are good places for storing.
5. Store only good size, sound potatoes. Cull bruised and small potatoes for immediate home use or for all planting.

SYNTHETIC MAY HAVE PLACE IN RUBBER PROGRAM

As an important contribution toward fortifying the nation's needs, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company has made increases in its facilities for manufacturing its synthetic rubber, Shemigum, according to G. A. Mosley, Goodyear Service Store Manager. For three and a half years the company developed and produced its own type of chemical rubber in its laboratories, and production began last fall.

First new plant for production of synthetic rubber by any rubber company was completed in May, near Goodyear's tire plants in Akron. This company was one of four named by the Federal Defense Plant Corp. to build factories costing $12,500,000 each which will have initial production of 2,500 tons yearly, later capable of being stepped up to 10,000 tons output.

Chemgum resulted from the exploration of more than 300 different compounds involving thousands of tests. Cooperating in these experiments which now have produced a highly satisfactory synthetic rubber were a score of skilled chemists, engineers and rubber compounders.

Important among its advantages are its increased tensile strength, resistance to ageing, abrasion and oils, and utilization of the same production methods and equipment currently in use with natural rubber. The synthetic rubber is much more resistant to oxidation than natural rubber.

By mowing as each crop of flowers begin to appear, bitterweeds can be controlled in pastures. Raise cut-blade and mow just under flowers, says F. W. Burns, extension dairyman at Auburn. Keep destroying in fence rows, adjacent fields and do not overgraze (this stimulates bitterweed growth) it is advised.

More roads for more communities when CONCRETE is used

Here's why, and it's very simple. When concrete is the standard pavement for a state's main traveled roads:

- each year's new roads stay built longer.
- less funds must be used to go back and repair or reconstruct roads built in previous years.
- more of available funds can be used for going steadily on with new construction.
- in the end, more different localities get more miles of new roads... at lowest cost to the public.
- and the whole state benefits from the superior safety and all-weather serviceability that only a system of concrete roads can provide.

Building with cheaper surfaces spreads the funds over more miles at first. But not for long. Other states have tried that—and changed to durable, maintenance-saving concrete. Ask your highway officials to pave main roads with concrete.

Chilton Youth Progressing In National Call for Skilled Labor

350 STUDENTS IN COUNTY TAKING ADVANTAGE OF FREE COURSES OFFERED BY GOVERNMENT

(By CLARK HEADLEY)

With an ever increasing demand for skilled workers by industry spreading throughout the nation, the government demanding "mass production" and declaring that a "national emergency exists", Chilton County is by no means sitting idly by and "watching the world go by".

We were called upon this week to review the splendid work being carried on by Mr. B. E. Evans, Coordinator of Trade and Industrial Education at the Chilton County High School and J. Hollis Jackson, and found what we think to be one of the greatest weaknesses of the nation today, being remedied right here in Chilton County, as it contributes its bit to the existing emergency.

Mr. Evans has under his thumb some 240 students who are preparing themselves to fit into various occupational capacities wherever and whenever they may be called upon. Those students taking advantage of this opportunity are "earning by doing" at the expense of the Federal Government, through the State Department of Education. The training and courses are free to the student and are open to anyone so desiring between the ages of 17 and 25 years of age. Mr. Evans stated that the government had placed nearly seven thousand dollars worth of equipment for these students' disposal.

At present, there are eight classes. Two classes daily studying Electric Welding at Robinson's Machine Shop under the supervision of Messrs. A. H. and R. M. Robinson. Mr. A. L. (Lono) gives the practical training while R. M. Robinson gives the related instructions. The classes operate six three-shifts—'til 1 and 3 until 9:00 o'clock. Mr. Evans is particularly proud of this class, although it is the most expensive of all. He states there has been placed about $2,500,000 worth of equipment in the department alone. Some of the students have already secured employment, although they had only four months' training of about 420 hours. The classes began February 17th and will end August 9th; each student having about 720 hours of work to their credit. When these students have completed their training they will apply to the State Employment Service, whereupon, the State Department will endeavor to find employment for each of them. It was stated also, word has been received from the Mobile shipyard that they could use everyone of the electric welding students during the next 60 days. A number of students are going to Mobile July 21st for special examinations.

Another class, which is of vital importance to national defense, is the automobile mechanics class. There are 25 boys in this class. One class is at Calloway Garage under the supervision of Messrs. Surgeon Calloway and Cecil Finkow. The other class is at Clanton Motors under the supervision of Messrs. Miller and Hayes. These boys are being given what Mr. Evans termed as "specific training". By this, it is understood, each student is specializing in a particular phase of the automobile mechanism. As an example, when this class is completed, it is to have the following: "When this class in automobile mechanics finish this course of work, they will be competent to follow up the general training of most of the large manufacturers, or in the army, they will be less likely to see actual combat service, as they will be treated as workmen in this particular line and will be of vital importance behind the lines. One will specialize in radiator—another in body repair—another in ignition, etc., who combining their talents, could build an automobile with adequate materials and machinery. They have completely overhauled about 40 automobiles and worked on over a hundred.

Another class which will play a very important role in National Defense, is the Civil Private Training class which has just completed ground school work. Mr. Evans was Ground School Contractor. This class began their flight training last Monday under the supervision of Mr. Charles Wade. The ten students, who were selected according to examination gradings, will have a Private License after about two months' of flight training, at no cost whatsoever to them, except just a few minor expenses, which amounts to about $16.00. Uncle Sam footed the bill all the way. If they had paid for the same course themselves, it would have cost each student approximately $480.00 to receive pilot's license.

Commercial and Home-Economic classes are also being offered NYA students here. Mr. Evans reported that approximately 180 of these students were now taking advantage of his courses offered free through the State and Federal Government.

There are four classes in homemaking, two in Food Preparation and two in Sewing or clothing, both of which are of extreme importance to the defense program—especially food. The cooking school is taught by Mrs. J. M. Hiten and the Clothing department is conducted by Mrs. Edna Kenney. Facilities of the Chilton County High School are being used.

Commercial work is also being offered NYA and Out-of-School-Youth at the expense of Uncle Sam. These classes are conducted Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in the Chilton County High School classrooms from 3 o'clock until seven at night and beginners' work are offered, expense to the student. Both advanced and anyone so wishing may take advantage of this course. The Commercial Work is being taught by Mrs. R. M. Madhoo, Mrs. R. J. Alexander, Mrs. Ruth G. Sutlive and Miss Mary Sue Saddler.

General Training

J. Hollis Jackson, Agriculture teacher at the Chilton County High School, has under his supervision some 107 students in different sections of the county doing their part in girding for national defense.

Mr. Jackson's classes are slightly different from those of Mr. Evans'. "General Training" is the term applied to his department; which, means that the students are receiving training in a varied field and not specializing in any particular trade, although, they are along the same line.

Classes are held at the local CCC camp, Isabella, Jemison and the County Training School under Mr. Jackson's supervision, with a total enrollment of 107 students. In this "general training", the students are studying Woodwork, Operation and care of motor vehicles, Metal work and Elementary Electricity.

Four classes are held at the CCC camp in Clanton, covering the above mentioned subjects. The faculty include Wayne Hiten, woodwork; Dan Bates, metal work; W. L. Maddox, operation, care and repair of motor vehicles; Grady Carter, elementary electricity. The faculty of the other three schools are: Isabella, W. T. Tucker, Jemison, B. O. Chandler; and County Training School, C. A. Davenport.

Competent Faculty

Both Mr. Evans and Mr. Jackson expressed in all sincerity that a great job was being done and worthwhile results were being visualized throughout the county as it did its bit for Uncle Sam. They also stated that to their belief, they couldn't have selected a more competent and better qualified group of teachers than they have. As Mr. Evans put it, "we're really getting things done" and a glance at their books and their classes will readily back this statement.

ARMY GREATLY INCREASES HOSPITAL FACILITIES

The Army will have nine general hospitals, bringing the total to 13 by the end of 1941, according to the War Department. In addition, there are 133 post hospitals. Of the general hospitals, 4 are established, 6 were recently completed and 3 are under construction.

DEFENSE HIGHWAYS

ARMY NURSES ADOPT BLUE

The latest military fashion note is the adoption of two-tone blue covert cloth uniform for Army nurses, the War Department announced June 3.

24 MILLION MORE GIVEN CHILDERSBURG PROJECT

Important developments on the defense front in Alabama were announced yesterday in dispatches from Washington and Birmingham.

The War Department tossed another $24,675,000 into its tremendous investment at Childersburg, authorizing expenditures of that amount for an addition to the ordnance works now under construction there. This will bring the total expenditure at Childersburg to approximately $90,000,000.

ATTACK ON RUSSIA BY NAZI RUMORED

On the battlefronts of land and sky the British clearly continued to hold the military initiative, but for all the bitter fighting in North Africa and the Middle East there was a sense of waiting in a time of twilight.

Apprehension and speculation were strong and everywhere present — reports in London that German troops were being massed on the west coast of occupied Norway, a possible base for attempted invasion of Scotland; rumors Finland of troop movements on both the German and Russian sides of the Soviet frontiers.

HOSPITAL TRAINING

National Youth Administration is training approximately 11,000 Alabama boys and girls to take their places in the defense program by providing work experience on a variety of projects. Many of these projects will hold "open house" on Youth Defense Day, Thursday, June 26th, and the public is invited to see the work they are doing. Some of the typical projects are shown above.

M. I. Kane, assistant chief of field operations, Labor Division, Office of Production Management, told the International Association of Public Employment Services, June 4, at Denver, that a minimum of 1,300,000 additional men and women would have to be employed in major defense industries between now and the end of 1941. Contributions Asked In U. S. O. Drive Stressing the appeal of the United Service Organization, in Clanton and Chilton County for $640.00 to be used for soldier recreation, Mayor C. E. Stapp, county chairman, says: "No defense preparation can be more important than the building of morale." Casting a vote of confidence in the armed forces and the defense workers of the United States, many public spirited citizens have wholeheartedly and generously contributed to the U. S. O. fund.
"Now, it must be brought home to every individual in Clanton and Chilton County, and in the state, that a gift to the U. S. O. fund is a gift of faith, self-confidence and hope to the men who make up our army and navy, and those who are employed in national defense industries.
It is the hope of the committee here that before the campaign is triumphantly closed, every resident will have added his bit to the fund, for it is a real chance for every person to support the democratic way of life."
The following statement from Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the U. S. Army:
"No matter how fine your equipment no matter how abundant, if you don't have morale you had better save your money. That is the most important, that is the vital factor of any army anywhere."
"We can manage this thing on the military reservations, but we urgently need your assistance, and quickly, and financially, to help matters off the reservation. I think of no better Christian work than that, or incidentally, none more helpful to us in the development of a strong, virile, clean army."

REVIEWS and PREVIEWS

By IRVIN LANDE

Since the outbreak of the war, the President, his representatives, and American columnists and observers, have been asking the American people to face facts squarely, clearly, truthfully. They have been begging us to be willing to face the consequences of events, and to take the action, though dangerous, which a nation that is a power in the world, must take.

Yet the President, his representatives, and the columnists and the observers through asking us to think clearly, have been afraid to show us exactly what has been happening—either because they were afraid to show us, or because they did not think we were ready to be told. In other words, they did not think that we were intelligent enough to face hard reality, because we have shown so many times in the past that we were given to wild emotion instead of to careful logic and straight thinking.

Now I submit, we are ready to face the facts, because we have come to realize two very important factors in our future destiny.

The first of these is that we recognize that we will soon be engaged actively in a struggle to the death with a power which believes in the very opposite way of life that we hold dear. We realize that our future, our destiny depends on the outcome of this battle. If we, as Americans, are to endure, then we shall endure only by winning this battle which is being fought on us. Furthermore, we recognize that our opponent in this battle is more formidable than any opponent that we have ever faced before. And our defenses, though being rushed to completion, are not nearly so complete that we can rest assured on our victorious outcome. We are vulnerable. We know it. And we recognize that to win our battle we must prepare our defenses so that no power can dare to attack them. To prepare our defenses like that, requires money from taxation and from defense bonds. In order to get that money—in order that the American people will be willing to give that money—we must be ready to face the facts that we do need to defend ourselves. Furthermore, Americans have come to realize that the best military strategy is the offensive rather than the defensive. Once we have convinced ourselves that we will be willing to fight on, the American navy and army will have to be used for offensive attack rather than for mere defensive warfare. Such action as this will mean that our armed forces will take over strategic islands and territories near the United States. Some of these will probably be Dakar in Africa, Martinique, Iceland, and other places now belonging to foreign countries. We must recognize that it will be easier to take them over now than to wait until it would take major military expeditions to gain a foothold. Therefore, to realize that we have a battle on our hands that we must make sacrifices to win, that we will have to have the sacrifice to attack before we can attack, will require that we face the facts of the past, the present and the future, and that we face them as facts and not as possible consequences.

That is the first factor that I believe, will convince us that we must face the truth. The second factor, I submit, is that we realize that we have not yet faced the facts and, because we have not faced them in the past, will cause us to have to face many more difficult problems in the future. The major example in recent weeks of this problem was the strike in the North American Aviation Corporation. The President appealed to the workers to return to work over the week end. He said that troops would be used if the plant did not resume work on the following Monday. The President said that he would allow the workers to hold a mass meeting on Sunday, but if they did not vote to go back to work and turn out airplanes, the government would take over. They did not go back to work. The Army took over and policemen were even forced to use tear gas to clear the place of pickets and other obnoxious elements.

Bedspreads Compete for Crocheting Honors

THERE'S a frosty freshness to this hand-crocheted bedspread, appropriately named "Jenny Lind." Its design is based on a single motif, which is simple to do, and costs just 2¢ to make. Working from the center outward, a combination of single and double crochet is used to form the spike and petal design. To bring out the beauty of the design and for long wearing qualities, use mercerized cotton with a high lustre, in white or colors. You can also enter the finished spread in the Fifth National-Wide Crochet Contest this Fall, where bedspreads will occupy an important place in the final judging. Directions for crocheting this spread and details of the Contest may be obtained by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Needlework Department of this paper, specifying design No. 681.

Thus, at Inglewood, California, was enacted the fact that there are some workers on the American scene who have not yet realized the fact that we are engaged in a battle and that we shall have to be a united people to win the struggle. Though there is a basis for the demands of the employees there is certainly no basis for a strike at this critical time in such an important industry. If the workers had faced the facts and realized the importance of their industry in the defense organization, they would not have called the strike. If they had been patriotic Americans, they would not have called the strike. But this strike is only an example. There are many more throughout the country. And one of the most important to the future of this nation. When once we settle all the strikes and the differences and become a united people, then shall we have faced the facts and will have taken definite action toward solving the existing evils.

Therefore, I submit, we are coming to realize two factors—that we have a battle to endure, and that we have not yet done what we should to prepare to solving the bigger problems awaiting us, and we shall have taken the first steps toward facing the facts, that we shall have to face.

FARM AND HOME WEEK SUSPENDED FOR YEAR

Farm and Home Week, scheduled to be held in Auburn, August 4-8, has been suspended due to the National emergency proclaimed by President Roosevelt and the need for farmers and agricultural workers to remain at their "posts." The suspension is for only this year, stated P. O. Davis, extension service director, and plans are for the program to be resumed next year.

The Farm and Home Week is held annually at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute with farm men and women and their county and home demonstration agents coming in from all counties in the State for a program built around better farming and home-making.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

One day a beautiful young woman walked into the presence of King Charles of France. This young woman was none other than Joan of Arc and she informed the king that she heard voices calling to her. The king rebuked her in a tone of irritation as he said, "If there are voices calling to you, I am the one who should hear these voices." With a smile, Joan of Arc replied, "They do come to you O king, but you do not hear them. If you would only pray from your heart and then listen, you would hear the voices as well as I do." There are voices that we never hear, except when other things are hushed. God speaks in a still, small voice, and we must be silent in order to hear Him. The modern life we are living in is stream-lined. Our hearts are empty while our hands are full. God is still speaking and calling to us, but we do not hear Him. To be sure we are never going to hear Him until we pray out of our hearts and listen.

I was passing the Drug store of a good friend and stopped to speak to him. As I reached out my hand to shake his, it opened of its own accord. I had stepped on some electrical device that gave to me an open door without an effort on my part. My heart has often gone out to certain people with a strong desire to speak to them about their salvation and often have I wondered how I could make the approach. I have always found that when the Spirit drew me toward any one that the door would open without any effort on my part. God has a way of touching human hearts and opening the door for His servants to enter. Paul often spoke of doors opening to him. When I have gone to talk to individuals about their souls, I have been often greeted with this expression of welcome. "I am so glad to see you for I wanted to talk to you." When God opens a door for you, never fail to enter. There is something on the inside that you can do.

Suppose that a messenger knocked upon your door. On answering the call you found a man at the door with a large bundle from the president of the United States. It was of untold value and you were informed that it was yours on one condition. This condition was that you take it and keep it with care. In your keeping it would make you happy and it would make you a great blessing to your neighbors. Would you refuse to accept it? I am saying just this to you, God has sent His only Son to knock on your door and he has brought to you salvation from sin. This salvation means your happiness and the making of your life a blessing to the world. The only thing required is that you keep it with care and use it for your own happiness and then it will be a blessing to all about you. How foolish it is that men and women will refuse to accept it.

A legend tell us that in the midst of a Pagan village there was kept a burning flame of liquid fire. To this center came all of the tribesmen and before this flame they would present their sacrifices and worship. One cold wintry day they found the liquid fire were charmed with this long flame frozen into a beautiful crystal, crystal and decided to carve it into trinkets for their bodies. All the tribesmen came and each one made for himself something that he could wear with pride upon his body. After walking away with these ornaments upon their bodies, sickness, suffering, want and death came to all alike. All of these calamities came upon them after they had ceased to worship and had appropriated the object worshiped to their selfish pride. Today, if we to their selfish pride, we will only observe as we have taken the things of God and appropriated them to our own selfishness. Our worship has been torn to pieces and the very God whom we should worship, has been torn from His central place. That nation, that individual is doomed when God is taken down from His central place.

VACATION VIGILANCE

Summer means fishing, picnics, golf, and travel to the coast. It also means increased patronage at retail beer outlets because beer is a refreshing beverage of moderation. This carries increased responsibility to retail dealers for "Vacation Vigilance."

To make your enjoyment of beer complete, the overwhelming majority of retail dealers operate clean, inviting places where you may meet your friends for a glass of beer and swap stories about the big ones that got away and the puts that didn't drop.

If you drink beer, help the industry by patronizing only those outlets whose operation is as wholesome as beer itself.

He said that to be avoided under all circumstances and it will be necessary to educate the public to the absolute necessity of obeying instructions.

Mr. LaGuardia said firemen and policemen from 40 Eastern cities were trained in combating poison gas and incendiary and high explosive bombs in 17, two-week courses at Edgewood Arsenal, Md., under the direction of the Army Chemical Warfare Service. cooperatives in Kansas, Arkansas, Missouri, and Oklahoma to provide for development of zinc deposits for defense.

Coal
The Office of the Bituminous Coal Consumers' Counsel announced a campaign—endorsed by defense consumer, price and transportation officials—to promote buying and storing of next winter's coal this summer to lighten the load that movement of crops and defense materials will place upon the transport system beginning next fall. The Office warned consumers against "panic" buying at high prices and said the supply of bituminous coal is ample for all needs.

Prices
Administrator Henderson, of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, arranged with the industry concerned to prevent unjustified price increases in coffee, plywood, paperboard, crude oil, gasoline and automobiles. Mr. Henderson told certain auto firms to withdraw recently announced price rises because they "are inconsistent with the favorable earning position of the industry."

Priorities
OPM placed borax and boric acid, aluminum scrap, zinc, copper, and synthetic rubber under full priority control. OPAC announced programs to allocate sufficient quantities of these materials for essential civilian needs.

Defense Housing
Defense Housing Coordinator Palmer announced there have been completed 14,293 defense dwelling units in 55 localities of 26 States and territories. Speaking to the Conference for National Housing Inventory, Mr. Palmer said it may be necessary to ask Congress for an additional $500,000,000 to construct 125,000 homes in defense areas in addition to the 97,000 already contracted for.

Steel Companies Train Workers

To meet pressing defense requirements 15,000 employees of United States Steel subsidiaries are now undergoing intensive training for skilled jobs. The employee training program throughout the country which is by no means one of the largest in the history of American industry.

The fact that a training program has long been in effect made it possible for the steel manufacturing subsidiaries of the corporation to increase their output on a little more than six months time from two-thirds of capacity to full capacity, which over a 12-month period would produce steel in excess of the entire annual steel output of Germany based on the latest available figures.

The need for skilled men, not only for the production of steel but also for the manufacture of defense items such as cruisers, destroyers, merchant vessels, armor plate, shell gorgings and bomb casings, now being made by United States Steel, is growing each day and many of the trainees are receiving their instruction on the job. Others are given preliminary training before being put on production work.

In this way the need for increasing the army of skilled men is being met as the tempo of defense production increases and thus the training of men to operate the machines of industry is keeping pace with the training of men to handle the mechanized equipment of land, sea and air forces.

Employee training is of two kinds—that involved in fitting a man for the next higher job in regular mill operations and that required to equip a man to handle a special defense operation.

In regular operations there is commonly a natural progression upward from one job to another, depending, of course, on the aptitude acquired skill and general qualifications of each individual employee.

Through this method, known as "upgrading" it is possible to expend from one shift to three or more shifts using the original personnel as a nucleus. In training men for special defense work, such as the manufacture of armor plate, bombs and shells, it has been necessary to give large numbers of men intensive instructions in the operation of single-purpose machines.

As a preliminary to learning these operations, many of the men are given training in machine operations in the public schools or in the company machine shops, this kind of training as well as the upgrading of men in regular mill operations, is separate from the subsidiaries long-range apprenticeship program where more than 1,300 apprentices are now taking four-year courses in steelmaking in steel-fabricating units of United States Steel Corporation.

Heading the list of these subsidiaries in number of employees undergoing job training of all types are the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation and the National Tube Company, with approximately 4,000 trainees each. The American Bridge Company is next with 2,400 followed by the American Steel and Wire Company with 1,500 and the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company with 1,500.

Many employees are supplementing their training by taking academic work. More than 5,000 are receiving classroom instruction directly related to their jobs on company time.

Nearly 10,000 are pursuing studies on their own time. More than 2,500 of

This Week In National Defense

President Roosevelt, in a special message to Congress, said that Germany had tried to drive the U. S. off the high seas by the "ruthless" sinking of the U. S. merchantman, the Robin Moor in the South Atlantic and proclaimed this country will not yield to such "outrageous and indefensible" acts of "an international outlaw".

The President said if the U. S. yielded on the issue, "we would inevitably submit to world domination . . ."

The President said he founds and other assets in the U. S. of Germany Italy and all invaded or occupied European countries and the State Department directed the German Government to close all its consular establishments here not later than July 10.

The President said he froze German financial facilities here to prevent their use in ways harmful to national defense. The State Department said German consulates were ordered closed because their activities had become contrary to the welfare of this country.

Loses His "Sole" On "Washboard" Road

Chilton County probably has more and better roads than any county of its rank in the state. But, according to Cecil Mims, we have one of the roughest in the state too. Cecil relates the story that one day recently he had started to town on a pick-up and the road was so rough it shook the heel of his shoe off—and it fastened with eight large tacks too.

Chilton To Participate In Statewide Observance Of Youth Defense Day

(By CLARK HEADLEY) Emphasizing the spirit of year-free American youth—hundreds of Chilton County boys and girls will join the thousands of the State Thursday in the celebration of Alabama Defense Day.

The day is being celebrated to mark the sixth anniversary of President Roosevelt's creation of the purely American organization—the National Youth Administration—which is doing a great job in providing work experience to train young men and women to take their places in industry as it girls for National Defense and Unity among the American people during the pressing emergency.

Cohen E. Stapp, Clanton's popular Mayor who usually has a big hand in all City and County "goings-on" will address the delegation which they will assemble in the courtroom from 2:30 to 3 this afternoon. Mayor Stapp will stress the importance of today's youth of our America to tomorrow.

Following Mayor Stapp's address, the group will hear Chief Justice Lucian D. Gardner of the Alabama Supreme Court, who ever a network broadcast, will pay tribute to the growing importance of youth in the unprecedented national defense program. Justice Gardner's speech will be broadcast at 3:30 p.m.

All youth organizations in Clanton and Chilton County will take part in Alabama pays tribute to its young men and women throughout the state.

The Flag presentation by the Scouts of the County will be the sounding gun as the huge celebration gets underway at 10:00 a.m. in front of the N. Y. A. work project in Clanton. The work projects of the local CCC and the NYA will be open until 1:00 p.m. for the public's inspection. Following the inspection, a parade, supposedly to be the largest witnessed in Clanton in some time, will assemble at the Clanton Methodist church. Led by some 17 members of the Montgomery Scout Bugle Corps, under the leadership of Mr. John W. Sewell, the delegation will parade the downtown district of Clanton. Taking part will be members of the N. Y. A., the C. C. C., Future Farmers of America, Future Homemakers of America, the Boy Scouts and the County's 4-H club membership. The parade will disband at the courthouse where they will be addressed by Mayor Stapp.

Every boy and girl in the county is urged to be present and take part in the celebration that is paying tribute to YOU.

FINAL FINANCIAL ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR COMPLETION OF ALL UNPAVED PARTS OF UNIVERSITY ROAD

MONTGOMERY — Financial arrangements for the paving of all unpaved sections of the University Highway connecting the cities of Montgomery and Tuscaloosa, for its entire distance of approximately 99 miles have been completed with the reaching of an agreement between the State Highway Department and the County Commissioners of Chilton County under the agreement the county will contribute $50,000 to the cost of paving the 17-mile section of the route located within its boundaries.

Announcement of the agreement was made Saturday by State Highway Director Chris J. Sherlock, who said that every mile of this important road now unpaved, will either be paved or under construction by early spring. The entire undertaking is expected to cost between $1,800,000 and $2,000,000.

Agreements have been signed in recent months between the Highway Department and counties of Autauga, Tuscaloosa and Bibb, for participation in the cost of the paving of the University Highway in those respective counties. The agreement with Chilton now winds up and assures all needed financing. This road being on the Federal Aid System, is eligible for Federal Aid money to supplement State and County funds. The Federal Government will, therefore, participate in the cost of the work on a 50-50 basis.

Of the total 99 miles of this highway it is announced that 81 are to be paved. Present plans call for laying of this paving in separate projects, in the following order, exclusive of the 10-mile section now under construction in Tuscaloosa county extending from Centerville toward Tuscaloosa.

Between Centerville and the intersection of the Clanton-Selma highway near Maplesville—17 miles. Construction of a bridge with approaches over Autauga Creek in the town of Prattville.

Between Prattville city limits and the intersection of the Selma-Clanton highway near Maplesville—34 miles. Between Duncanville and Centerville—20 miles.

Contracts will be let within the next few weeks for the bridge and approaches in Prattville.

Twenty-two miles of needed grading and draining preparatory to paving have been finished in Autauga County, also 6 miles in Bibb County, South of Centerville.

Chilton County Matches State Monies To Complete Four Local Highway Projects

In a contract drawn between Chilton County and the State of Alabama, Chilton County Judge of Probate, J. Lee Smith announced Monday that the County would pay $50,000 into the building of four new highways.

The first, longest stretch, and most important is the 17.1 miles of the new University Highway running through the county from the Autauga line to the Bibb county line. This is Alabama No. 6.

Alabama Road 22, beginning near Verbena and extending to the Chilton-Coss county line near Mitchell Dam and being 6.17 miles in length will also get a coating of bituminous under terms of the contract.

Beginning at the intersection of Alabama Road 22 four miles east of Verbena and extending to Mitchell Dam, a distance of 2 miles will also be hardsurfaced.

Alabama Road 45, beginning where it intersects U. S. 31 at Marlbury and extending to the Chilton-Autauga line will be surfaced. This stretch of road is 8.1 mile. These four projects in Chilton County make a total of 26.7 miles of hard surface to be put down by the State.

Terms of the contract also specify that the State will provide for the maintenance of the old section of road U. S. 31 that is to be abandoned due to the relocation of approximately 8 miles in the north end of the county.

Text of Roosevelt's Message to Congress Concerning 'Robin Moor' Sinking

WASHINGTON, June 20—The text of President Roosevelt's message to Congress on the sinking of the Robin Moor follows:

To the Congress of the United States of America:

I am under the necessity of bringing to the attention of the Congress the ruthless sinking by a German submarine on May 21 of an American ship, the Robin Moor, in the South Atlantic Ocean (25 degrees and 10 minutes north) while the vessel was on the high seas enroute to South Africa.

According to the formal depositions of survivors the vessel was sunk within 30 minutes from the time of the first warning given by the commander of the submarine to an officer of the Robin Moor.

The submarine did not display its flag, and the commander did not announce its nationality.

The Robin Moor was sunk without provision for the safety of the passengers and crew.

It was sunk despite the fact that its American nationality was admittedly known to the commander of the submarine and that its nationality was likewise clearly indicated by the flag and other markings.

The sinking of this American ship by a German submarine in flagrant violation of the right of United States vessels freely to navigate the seas subject only to a belligerent right accepted under international law. This belligerent right as is known to the German government does not include the right deliberately to sink a merchant vessel, leaving the passengers and crew to the mercy of the elements. On the contrary the belligerent is required to place the passengers and crew in places of safety.

The passengers and crew of the Robin Moor were left afloat in small lifeboats from approximately two to three weeks when they were accidentally discovered and rescued by friendly vessels. This chance rescue does not lessen the brutality of casting the boats adrift in mid-ocean.

The government of the United States holds Germany responsible for the outrageous and indefensible sinking of the Robin Moor. Full reparation for the losses and damages suffered by American nationals will be expected from the German government.

Our government believes that freedom from cruelty and inhuman treatment is a natural right. It is not a grace to be given or withheld at the will of those temporarily in a position to exert force over defenseless people.

Were this incident capable of being regarded apart from a more general background, its implications might be doubtful, but it must be interpreted in the light of a declared and actively pursued policy of frightfulness and intimidation which has been used by the German Reich as an instrument of international policy.

The present leaders of the German government have not hesitated to engage in acts of cruelty and many other forms of terror against the innocent and the helpless in other countries, apparently in the belief that methods of terrorism will lead to a state of affairs permitting the German Reich to exact acquiescence from the nations victimized.

The government can only assume that the government of the German Reich hopes through the commission of such infamous acts of cruelty to helpless and innocent men, women and children to intimidate the United States and other nations into a course of non-resistance to German plans for universal conquest—a conquest based upon lawlessness and terror on land and piracy on the sea.

Such methods are fully keeping with the methods of terrorism hitherto employed by the present leaders of the German Reich in the policy which they have pursued towards many other nations, subsequently victimized.

The government of the German Reich may however be assured that the United States will neither be intimidated nor will it acquiesce in the plans for world domination which the present leaders of Germany may have.

We are warranted in considering whether the case of the Robin Moor is not a step in a campaign against the United States analogous to campaigns against other nations. We cannot place reliance on official declarations to the contrary.

Like statements, declarations, and even solemn pledges have been forthcoming in respect of many nations, commencing with the statement that the government of the German Reich considered its territorial aspirations satisfied when it seized Austria by force. Evidence that the government of the German Reich continues to plan further conquest and domination is convincing, and indeed, scarcely disputed.

Viewed in the light of the circumstances the sinking of the Robin Moor becomes a disclosure of policy as well as an example of method. Heretofore, lawless acts of violence have been pretexts to schemes of land conquest. This one appears to be a first step in assertion of the supreme purpose of the German Reich to seize control of the high seas, the conquest of Great Britain being an indispensable part of that seizure.

Its general purpose would appear to

REVIEWS and PREVIEWS

By IRVIN LANDE

For the last several weeks, we have paid a great deal of attention to facing the facts. We have said that we have not been facing the facts of the war, and that, consequently, we have been left confused, bewildered, perplexed. We have given many reasons why we are doubtful about the future. We have presented a hypothetical argument that when done and when faced, will enable us to look to our future in this war with a new hope, an invincible spirit, and an indomitable courage. Now, perhaps, what are these facts?

Perhaps the most obvious of these facts, and the most important and the most dominating, is the one that we have not yet faced the facts that we are losing the war. We are, as a matter of fact, taking for granted that we will win this war. Only the other day, I heard a person say, "Hitler can conquer all of Europe except Britain. But he can't conquer Britain, because the United States is backing her too strongly." What could possibly lead anyone to say that, when we realize that we haven't armaments, and equipment for our own forces. We have given great aid to Britain, but not such aid that it would make it impossible for Britain to fall. We are backing Britain, but if we were backing Britain "so strongly" that Hitler couldn't possibly conquer her, after conquering all the rest of Europe, we would not need to prepare our own defenses, for there would be no possible enemy, that we would need to prepare against, if Britain could keep Hitler back, and could, ultimately, defeat the Nazi menace. The administration in Washington knows this fact, and it would be the last to say that Britain is holding up merely on the strength of American aid. Ultimately, Britain might. But not now. Britain is holding up on a combination of American aid and British industry and British morale.

I do not doubt that we will win this war. But I doubt seriously, I question gravely, that we could win the war without making sacrifices and without giving up some of the things we know today. By way of example, we will take the present electric power shortage. For a long time, in fact as long as America has been a nation we have said that our resources were unlimited, that our ability was exhausted, that our industry was endless. We have, for a great length of time, felt that we could live normal lives, and at the same time, go out and fight the world, and conquer it. Now we are engaged in a period of world history in which we may be forced to do that very thing. It may be necessary for us to defend ourselves, against the most powerful armed war machine that the world has ever seen. But we know now, as we should have known before, that we can not defend ourselves successfully and lead normal lives—lives without sacrifices for the defense of this country and this hemisphere. We have been putting only a half-way effort into our national defense industry, and still, there has been a power shortage. Of course, it is true that part of the shortage is caused by the lack of rainfall, but the real reason is, undoubtedly, the demands made by the national defense program. If all our industry, and that of none, will be necessary to defend this country. Then for the first time, we really will have to cut down on our use of electricity for pleasure in order that we shall have electricity to use for the most essential of all industries—the defense industries.

That is one sacrifice. But it is only one of many that we shall probably be called upon to make. Labor will probably be called upon to work longer and for less pay. Capital will probably be called upon to pay greater taxes. The profession will probably be called in to give their services. There will be no escaping the sacrifices that we shall have to make. To realize that we must make them, and to make them willingly, will be one of the greatest facts that we can face at this stage of the battle.

Every other fact that we face—such facts that our defenses are not impregnable, that South America is closer to Europe than we are, that Europe is closer to South America than is the United States, that to make sacrifices will be in order to insure our future safety and our chances to get the apex of human happiness from life—will only be part of the fact that we must make sacrifices. These facts will be the reason and the causes of making sacrifices.

If we look clearly, think honestly and act decisively, then there is no reason why we should not be willing to make these sacrifices. If we are willing to make these sacrifices, and make them carefully, then there is no reason why we should not win with any battle and any struggle we should undertake.

THANKS!
Say Southern Motorists for 2,000 miles of New Concrete Roads that save money and serve better
Yes, concrete was chosen for 2,000 miles of new roads throughout the South in 1939 and 1940.
Thanks! says the Southern motorist for concrete's highly visible, skid-resistant surface. For its comfort and year-around convenience. And for the saving. Concrete costs much less to keep in repair than other surfaces on main traveled highways. It serves at lowest annual cost.
Alabama motorists, too, can have this added safety and saving if more of its roads are built of concrete.

Organization of County Defense Councils Completed

County Defense Councils in every county in Alabama was completed last week by Maj. Joseph M. Dickerson, Executive Secretary of the State Defense Council, who conferred with the members of County Councils at 9 separate meetings attended by two or more County units.

The meetings were held, respectively, at Fort Payne, Asheville, Centreville, Tuscaloosa, Jasper, Russellville, Livingston and Grove Hill. Counties whose Defense organizations were perfected at these meetings are DeKalb, Jackson, Cherokee, Marshall, St. Clair, Blount, Bibb, Shelby, Perry, Tuscaloosa, Pickens, Greene, Hale, Walker, Winston, Fayette, Franklin, Lawrence, Marion, Lamar, Sumter, Choctaw, Marengo, Clarke and Washington. Organizations had previously been completed in other counties.

These Councils will serve as advisory agencies, a clearing house and a sounding board for public opinion. They will endeavor, at all times, to bring the best thought to bear on problems before and as they arise, every effort being made to avoid delaying the progress of the defense program. Intelligent speeding up will be their objective.

Educational Funds To Reduce Taxes

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Gov. Frank M. Dixon stated last week an estimated surplus of $750,000 in the special educational trust fund will be applied to reduce property taxes.

Earlier in the week the Governor was blocked by a ruling of the Alabama Supreme Court from using an approximate $2,000,000 income tax surplus for the reduction of property taxes. The Court held in an advisory opinion, no machinery for the transfer of the money had been provided and that an act of the Legislature would be required.

OPM DISTRIBUTES LIST OF 550 ESSENTIAL DEFENSE SKILLS

The Labor Division of the Office of Production Management last week began distribution, through State Employment Services, the vocational schools and other labor training agencies in the U. S. a list of 550 industrial occupations and skills essential to the defense production program, for the training of defense workers.

This list, based upon a survey of thousands of individual establishments in defense industries, is to serve as the official guide for educational authorities and management and labor groups, in setting up vocational training courses for defense workers. The list, ranging from absorbent to woodworker, was prepared by the United States Employment Service in cooperation with the United States Office of Education and the Labor Division of the OPM. Title of the document is "List of Occupations: Approved by the Office of Production Management for Vocational Training Courses for Defense Workers."

9,000,000 CANS OF RESERVE FIELD RATIONS BOUGHT

Purchase of 9,000,000 cans of cooked Army reserve field rations, one of the largest food procurements of this kind by the Quartermaster Corps, was announced June 13 by the War Department.

Known as "Type C Field Ration," the food is for emergency use when soldiers are separated from their field kitchen or mess hall. It consists of previously cooked or prepared food, packed in hermetically sealed cans. It can be eaten either hot or cold.
One day's ration for each soldier is contained in six cans and provides a different menu for each meal. The cans contain a main course of meat with choice of beans, vegetable hash or vegetable stew; biscuits, sugar, soluble coffee, and chocolate.

Now is the best time for farmers to check up and order their lime, phosphate, and potash needs for the fall planting of legumes, oats and permanent pastures, advises A. W. Jones, Alabama AAA administrator.

Power Company To Install Additional Generators Soon

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—Alabama Power Company has made application to Alabama Public Service Commission for certificate of convenience and necessity to construct a second 60,000 kw unit in the Gorgas No. 2 steam plant of the Company in Walker County, Ala., to be ready for operation May 1, 1943.

Thomas W. Martin, President of the Company, announced recently.
The new unit will be built to operate at 3,600 revolutions per minute. This high speed in large units is a comparatively recent development. The Gorgas unit, which will be rated at 60,000 kw, 99 per cent power factor, will operate at a steam pressure of 850 lbs. per square inch. It will require a boiler capacity of 600,000 pounds of steam per hour. The boiler will burn powdered coal. At full load the new units will use 700 tons of coal per day.

"Since its organization," Mr. Martin said, "Alabama Power Company has built and planned for the future. The additional generator which we will install at Gorgas will be the third steam generator which we have bought within the past eighteen months, at a total cost of about $11,000,000. The first 40,000 kw unit, for installation in our new Chickasaw Steam Plant, near Mobile, when in operation several weeks ago, although the plant was not complete in every detail. A second generator of the same size to be installed in that plant was ordered in March of this year, and is expected to be in operation by January 1, 1943.

"The new Gorgas generator will be ordered from General Electric Company. In the case of the Mobile units, it will have embodied in it the latest improvements, so that all three of the recent machines to be installed will be among the most efficient in the nation.

General Electric has promised delivery of the Gorgas unit in the early part of 1943 in time for the completed installation to be ready for operation by May 1 of that year.

"Without the large demand for national defense," said Mr. Martin, "the Company would still be able to carry its load this year, despite the drought; but the current increase in load over a year ago is several times greater than the normal increase, making it necessary to ask for partial curtailment of the use of electricity for non-defense purposes.

"It is of interest to say that additional steam power installation is also being ordered by the power companies in several of the adjoining states, which have had the same problems presented to them during the current season."

Dixon Pleads For Safe and Sane 4th

Calling attention to the fact that last year many thousands of Americans lost their lives through carelessness during the Independence Day holiday period, Gov. Frank M. Dixon issued a proclamation last week calling upon every citizen in Alabama to join with him in a campaign to halt accidents on the Fourth of July and throughout the extra hazardous month of July.

Text of Governor Dixon's safety proclamation follows:
"WHEREAS, the National Safety Council is conducting a nationwide campaign to cut down the heavy accident toll, which last year took the lives of 9,860 Americans; and
"WHEREAS, this terrible sacrifice to carelessness is due largely to the Independence Day holiday, increased summer traffic and recreational activities and
"WHEREAS, every citizen in this State should be willing and eager to help reduce this toll of death, injury and suffering:

"NOW, THEREFORE, I, Frank M. Dixon, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby call upon every citizen to join wholeheartedly in this campaign to halt accidents on the Fourth of July and throughout the extra hazardous month of July. Let each of us use increased care in walking and driving exercise greater caution in swimming and boating, refrain from using explosives or fireworks, and refrain from driving after drinking."

FREE COTTON CLASSING OFFERED STATE FARMERS

J. T. Belue, cotton improvement specialist, Alabama Extension Service, is urging all Alabama farmers living in one-variety communities or who have a cotton improvement project to apply for free cotton classing service immediately.

County agents in each county will be glad to assist farmers in applying for this service, he says in reporting that applications for this service must be filed before August 1.

Alabama's population according to the 1940 census, is 2,832,961. Of this number, 30.8 percent, or 855,941 people reside within the city limits and 69.8 percent or 1,977,020 reside in rural areas. Alabama's population is 20 times greater than when the State was admitted to the Union in 1919.

Marine Corps Given Intensive Training

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 26 — The intensive training program of the First Marine Division, Fleet Marine Force—crack shock troops of the U. S.—is being continued at an even greater pace in preparation for any emergency, it was made known here in an announcement by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

The fleet unit of the United States Marine Corps, which returned to the United States in April after several months of rugged training maneuvers in the Caribbean and at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, has been continuing its fast program at Marine Corps bases at Quantico, Va., and Parris Island, S. C.

The force is developing and improving upon new techniques in landing operations in conjunction with ships of the Atlantic fleet.

The First Marine Division moved in to the Caribbean area in October, 1940 and carried on rigorous joint operations with the fleet throughout the winter.

In February the Marines conducted strenuous maneuvers in the area of Puerto Rico.

It has also been announced that the new training area of the First Marine Division at New River, N. C. is well under way and that temporary facilities for 6,000 soldiers of the sea will be completed by July 1.

Additional training facilities have been added to the Marine Base at Quantico, including motor transport, amphibian tractor, water distillation, demolition, camouflage and signal communication schools.

Overtaking the Undertaker

There is another name for the little game of repeatedly dodging the speed laws. It might be called "overtaking the undertaker." Certainly there is ample statistical evidence that habitual players in this lottery lose everything.

Of the 35,000 persons killed in traffic accidents last year, 24,000 met death through some reckless and illegal action on the part of a driver, according to The Travelers' analysis of 1940's accidents which has just been released. There are a dozen such illegal actions mentioned but standing out boldly at the top of the list and coming close to being equal to all the others added together is the one item: "Exceeding the speed limit." No less than 9,600 speeding drivers caught up with the undertaker in 1940, and almost a quarter of a million others caught up with an ambulance.

As long as the records have been kept, the analysis shows, exceeding the speed limit has led the list as the major cause of traffic accidents in the U. S.

Gibson Refrigerator Eliminates Drudgery

Every woman, knowing that standing by to watch a meal cook takes more time than preparing the food for cooking and serving it, will be glad to hear of the new Gibson Automatic Range that eliminates the standing-by cooking time.

This standing-by time can be eliminated by the new Gibson through the use of the oven, or the deep well cooker, or the convenience outlet—any one of which can be connected to the automatic timer.

This Gibson automatic cooking advantage is easy to use. All the house wife has to do is put her meal in the oven, for example, then set the automatic cooking control and turn the thermostat to the right temperature for cooking the food.

The Gibson Kookall, with 10-quart capacity for deep well cooking and the convenience outlet for plug-in appliances like percolators, or roasters can be automatically used in the same way.

Besides this automatic feature, the new Gibson has temperature control on its Kookall. Now, for the first time deep well cooking can be done just like oven cooking—all the housewife has to do is to set the Kookall thermostat to the proper temperature as she does with an oven.

The new Gibson also has 5 speed heats for surface cooking, an extra size warming oven, a beautiful new-style chrome lamp and five cubic feet of storage space.

FARMERS URGED TO PLANT FALL TOMATOES

Alabama farmers now planting tomato seed, are planting to "double-up" on fall tomato acreages to offset the short spring crop caused by droughts. Since tomatoes constitute an important part of the farm canning program and because the National Defense Council has called for increased tomato production, farm families have a double purpose in greater fall plantings.

Seeds planted in boxes or in garden corners where they can be watered will produce plants ready for setting around July 15 to August 1. Marglobe and Rutgers varieties are recommended by W. A. Ruffin, extension service entomologist, Auburn. Transplant tomatoes to well-prepared land, placing three to four feet apart in deep water furrows. Use 1,000 pounds of complete fertilizer per acre, advises Ruffin.

TIME IS RIGHT TO SET POTATO VINE CUTTINGS

Now is the time for vine cuttings of sweet potatoes to be set if best results are to be obtained. Cuttings made after July 1 will generally be less successful than if made now, advises L. M. Ware, horticulturist, Alabama Experiment Station, Auburn.

Vine cutting is an easy and cheap method of increasing acreage set to sweet potatoes and, with favorable weather, should produce well. Cuttings approximately six inches in length can be set 18 inches in hills in three-foot rows. Fertilization at the rate of 600 pounds of 4-10-7 is advised.

New officers of the Alabama State Nurserymen's and Florists' Association are Henry Homer Duke, President; L. L. Alldredge, Bessemer, vice-president; and Tom Dodd, Jr., Semmes, secretary-treasurer. They were elected at the annual meeting in Auburn, June 16 and 17.

SELECT GOOD FOODS FOR USE IN CANNING

Alabama farm women are finding the canned products are no better than the fruit or vegetables which go into the containers. Good material and correct canning steps are essential for success in any food preserving program.

Step 1 in canning process is given by Lavada Crutch extension service food preservation specialist, Auburn, are as follows:

- (1) Select good material, using only clean, fresh, sound foods in prime condition. Grade for size and the same degree of ripeness, and wash thoroughly to remove soil.
- (2) Wash jars and cans in soapy water and rinse.
- (3) Make sirup for fruits in advance so there will be no delay when it is required.
- (4) Some foods are pre-packed for a short time before they are packed in to containers. Check in Extension Service bulletin on Food Preservation.
- (5) Pack containers quickly so that precooked food remains hot, using a sufficient amount of liquid to solids to prevent too dense a pack. Work out air bubbles with a knife blade or spatula.
- (6) As each glass is packed, carefully wipe off the rubber ring to remove any particles of food. Adjust the cap. Tin cans packed with hot food must be sealed at once.
- (7) Process at the temperature and time indicated in the tables shown in the Food Preservation bulletin.
- (8) Cool glass jars in air but protect them from drafts. Cool tin cans in cold water.

Martin Gratified At Public's Cooperation

BIRMINGHAM—Thomas W. Martin, president of the Alabama Power Co. made this statement concerning the program for power curtailment in the interest of national defense.

"The results of the first day's operation under the voluntary power curtailment program of industrial and commercial customers were most gratifying. Preliminary figures for Alabama indicate that the total load for the period ending at midnight on Monday was 5,534,000 kilowatt-hours, as compared with 6,757,000 kilowatt-hours for the corresponding period the week before."

"It is too early to appraise the full effect of the curtailment effort, as it is not known to what extent industrial users of power have distributed their reduced operation throughout the week. This will become apparent only after there shall have been a week's experience under the program."

GRAIN SORGHUM URGED FOR FEED SUBSTITUTE

Farmers having short feed crops due to an extremely dry spring are busy planting grain sorghum which can be used well as a substitute for corn and other grain feeds. J. C. Frink, assistant extension service agronomist, Auburn, said that sorghum planted now makes more grain and is a surer crop than late planted corn.

Plantings are made at the rate of 6 to 8 pounds of seed per acre in three and one-half foot rows and in hills 8 to 10 inches apart.

Here's Another Way To Go Though College

Selling eggs isn't the usual way to work through a Chicago school. But that is what Peter Tannis does. And that isn't all. He has to drive 250 miles twice a week to get there. He collects eggs from farmers near Plymouth, Indiana, and each Tuesday and Friday delivers them to Chicago customers; then rushes to his evening classes at Moody Bible Institute. And, added to that, he is now saving some of his egg money to enter school in the fall.

CALCIUM ARSENATE DUSTS ADVICE FOR BOLL WEEVIL

South and Central Alabama farmers are busy "spot" dusting their cotton to control boll weevil infestations which are increasing due to favorable weather conditions. Reports of weevil further north have not been received as yet.

Farmers are advised by W. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist, Auburn, to walk over their fields and pick full-grown squares at random. If there are 10 to 15 punctured bolls per 100 picked then three calcium arsenate dustings at the rate of five to six pounds per acre can be made at five day intervals. Dusting can be made on those "spots" where weevils are found, there being no need in treating entire cotton crop unless insects are found generally. No "sweat poisoning" is recommended after cotton reaches knee high and is fruiting heavily. The three dustings should protect the cotton from weevils for three or four weeks, or until migratory boll weevils appear in late July or early August when two more dustings can be used at weekly intervals. Any treatment washed off by rain should be repeated, says Ruffin.

If half-bale yield per acre is expected, dusting will pay. Further incentive to fight the weevil is found in the fact that 85 per cent of parity is assured for cotton this year.

FARMERS ATTEND MONTGOMERY MEETING—CONDENSARIES DISCUSSED

By M. R. GLASSCOCK
Assistant County Agent

A group of local business men and farmers were luncheon guests of the State Chamber of Commerce and the Carnation Milk Manufacturing Co. at the Exchange Hotel, Montgomery on Wednesday, June 18. At this meeting much cooperative interest was shown by the local merchants and farmers.

Mr. F. W. Burns, extension dairy specialist, clearly depicted the feasibility of such a project in this section of Alabama.

Mr. Meluhish and Mr. Hancock, field representatives for the Carnation Company, clearly outlined the importance of cooperation of all people in the county as well as the material necessities before a large scale dairy project can be successful. They also stated that a portion of Chilton County was quite well adapted to milk production.

This meeting was another step toward securing a permanent milk market for this county, but many other sections of Alabama and Georgia are trying to secure the same thing.

If we are to receive the consideration that Chilton County is worthy of, we must show our wares. We will have a chance to do so soon.

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

Looks like these merchants out Second Avenue in West End are going to have a busy day. Two of the leading stores there are running ads in the week's News... offering some mighty good specials too... the advertising-J. H. Broadhead and Wind-smoke House.

Had a street dance last Thursday night in the block in front of the Laundry... a large crowd gathered there and all seemed to have a good time... Lawrence Duffey played the records.

Were driving through town Saturday afternoon when the hard rain came and we couldn't help but get a little out of the way people had to get out and hover under any awning or car cover that they could find... course one of these things aren't any when it happens to you but it reminded us of little chickens trying to scrouge one another from under an old setting hen.

Clanton's Fire Department is at last getting the attention that it deserves. Last week it was called out to fight fire in an out patch on the Selma highway... when the negro man who reported stole a cow and tried to sell it to Broadhead's Market and had trouble with the Sheriff made off to the swamp and couldn't be found, the Fire Department was called out to help in the search... now this is of course in addition to fighting all the fire that have to be fought hereabouts. By-the-way, let's give these fellows a big hand, remember they show some citizenship and do more for their city in five minutes than the most of us do in a month; Loren Smith, Ed. Gore, Eugene Gore, Earl R. R. Driver, Leo Cagle, J. D. Thompson, James (Gaby) Tiffin, Wade, Manuel Littlefield, Luther Scarborough, Red Wagner, Luther (Lipepper), Cecil Ellison, Ted Thompson and O. W. (Sleepy) Miller.

The parking limit on 2nd Avenue and the Birmingham-Montgomery Highway on Saturdays is getting results. You can drive to town now on business and find a place to park, tend to your business or shopping and get out and give some other fellow your place. Beats the old way of the streets always jammed with shoppers trying to get someone of a store long enough for someone else to go in and make a few purchases.

Some so-and-so put a dent in the front of my Buick Sunday. I wasn't the least idea when it happened but the fellow who did it could at least have had the decency to let me be known... that thing will cost me three bucks.

If it's excitement you are looking for in Clanton, something doing every minute... Saturday morning a negro tried to sell a cow to Mr. Broadhead... called the sheriff. When the sheriff arrived the negro ran. Mr. Sheriff pulled his gun, bang, bang... he hit a mule but missed the negro... half the town took out after the said negro and chased him into a swamp east of Clanton where he was

Dr. Baker Asks Public's Cooperation In Round-Up

Parents are urged by Dr. J. N. Baker, State Health Officer, to cooperate with county health departments and their private physicians in order to insure the fullest possible effectiveness of the summer round-ups which are held for the purpose of revealing physical defects among children planning to enter school with the opening of the fall term so that those defects may be corrected before the children start to school.

"It is estimated that about 40 per cent of all the first-grade pupils enrolled in the public schools of this State during the 1938-39 term—the latest for which attendance and enrollment reports are available—were 'repeaters,' or pupils who were taking the work over after failing to pass during one or more previous terms" he said. "Undoubtedly several conditions are responsible for this high scholastic mortality rate, but there is no doubt that it would be drastically reduced if the factor of bad health of one kind or another could be eliminated. It is the purpose of the summer round-ups to eliminate this factor as far as possible."

HOME COMING AT ARCHER'S CHAPEL

MILSTEAD B. SNIDER MOVED TO CAMP WHEELER

Milstead B. Snider who was stationed at Ft. McPherson, Ga., has been transferred to Infantry Replacement Training Center, Camp Wheeler, Ga., captured several hours later, placed in jail by the Sheriff, trial later.

We saw a cute sight last Tuesday afternoon, an unusual sight anyway. Not that Highway Patrolmen are not like any of the rest of us but it just looked a bit out of the ordinary. Ed Lobst and Jimmie Glass both in uniforms and in a State Patrol car with their young son and daughter, we can't remember just which is which—driving up the highway—and all this time we had the idea that Highway Patrolmen were hard boiled.

BE ALIVE ON THE FIFTH

Following is a resolution adopted by The Executive Committee of the National Safety Council:

Each year America chooses the Fourth of July to stage a jamboree of carelessness. Thousands are killed or injured in accidents. Children are maimed for life.

Why? Because, ironically, America is celebrating the birth of its Independence—On the highways... in the homes... on the beach and picnic grounds—everywhere men, women and children are killed off by the score, even as they celebrate.

There is no rhyme or reason to this wholesale slaughter. It must be stopped! It can be stopped if every one of us uses caution and common sense. The things that cause these tragedies are things we can control—haste, selfishness, thoughtlessness, the desire to show off.

We cut the accident death toll last July. We can do it again. Last July was the only month in the last 19 to show a decrease!

The National Safety Council therefore calls on America to stop this mid-summer massacre by signing a new Declaration of Independence—Independence from annual tribute of thousands of American lives needlessly sacrificed... independence from the kind of celebration that leaves us the dead and sightless and the suffering.

It calls on every citizen of the United States to do his or her part in this new independence from death and disaster by being careful and considerate of others on the streets and highways, being careful while boating or swimming, and by taking no chances with explosives or fireworks.

It calls on all churches, schools, safety councils, and fraternal and civic organizations to join in this new Declaration of Independence.

It calls on every public official—governors, mayors, police chiefs, highway safety authorities and all others charged with public welfare—to remember that it is not only ironic but cruel to celebrate the right to life and the pursuit of happiness by bringing about death disability and tragedy.

In this time of great national emergency, when the nation in mustering its vast resources of wealth and manpower, accidents are more than ever needless and dangerous waste.

Don't join the Fourth column! Stay out of that long column of casualties that will be left in the wake of the Independence Day celebration.

Be alive on the Fifth!

President To Lead Nation In Program Of Rededication

Services To Be Broadcast Over Radio Networks Tomorrow Afternoon

The following was received by C. E. Stapp as Chairman of the County Defense Council from Mayor F. H. Lawrence, U. S. Director of Civilian Defense:

Statement by The President The approach of Independence Day this year will kindle in all American hearts an appreciation of the dark days that preceded and followed July 4, 1776. Those were the times that freed men's souls even as these are times in another crisis in American life.

But these days are also days of hope and as the birthday of American Independence draws near it is altogether fitting that we should rededicate ourselves to defend and perpetuate those inalienable rights which found true expression in the immortal Declaration. Those words never had a deeper or more solemn meaning for America than they have in this hour of anxiety and peril.

The Fourth of July has always been a happy festival, a day of joy and gladness in which all Americans have caught something of the spirit of (Continued to Page 8)

County Agent Smith and Others Are Getting Facts On Milk Production

Chilton County Agent, Pat Smith and others, interested in securing a milk condensary plant for this locality are working this week securing information needed by the Carnation Milk Company to determine the advisability of locating here.

Chilton County farmers and Clanton business men are vitally interested in this undertaking and are combining their efforts in tabulating this information. It would mean added income to the farmers of Chilton County and for many be the means of disposing of the surplus raw milk for which now they have no market.

This survey must be completed by the last of this week and a reproduction of the questionnaire will be found elsewhere in this issue of the Chilton County News. Study it and be ready to give this needed information when the representatives call upon you thus speeding up the work on this survey. Mr. Wiley Bean and other prominent men have long seen the advantage of having a milk condensary in Chilton County and the citizens should get behind this undertaking and see it through.

TERRELL WHITE COMPLETES COURSE IN PHARMACY

Private, First Class, Lester E. (Terrell) White, formerly a Chilton Countyman, has completed a course in Pharmacy at the Army Medical school in San Antonio, Texas. He will return to his original station at Fort Benning, Ga., on the 28th of June. There he will practice pharmacy while a non-commissioned officer.

Electrical Class Show Proof of Training; Wire Bus Barn

The National Defense electricity class of Company 3481, Clanton, has recently finished installing the electrical wiring in the new bus storage building at the local High School.

The class, working under the direction of Grady Carter, instructor, installed approximately 25 electrical outlets in the building. School officials have expressed their satisfaction with the quality of the job.

Sixty CCC snappers are participating in four Defense classes in operation at the Clanton camp. In addition to the electricity class, woodworking and auto mechanics are being taught.

This Week In National Defense

Defense Director LaGuardia plans for a nationwide July celebration with a "No War" address by President Roosevelt at 10 a.m. EST) to be followed by the signing of the national anthem simultaneously throughout the nation. Commenting on the arrangements, the President said, "... it is also fitting that we should rededicate ourselves to defend and perpetuate those inalienable rights which found true expression in the immortal Declaration. Those words never had a deeper or more solemn meaning for America than they have in this hour of anxiety and peril..."

Foreign Affairs

President Roosevelt told his press conference that the U. S. would give all possible aid to Russia in its war with Germany but that no list of Soviet needs had been submitted yet. The Treasury Department announced it had agreed Russia to use its forty million dollars in frozen funds here. Acting Secretary of State Welles announced the Neutrality Act which prohibits American vessels from combat areas, would not be invoked in connection with the Russian conflict.

Mr. Welles said that while the Communist dictatorship is as intolerable as Nazi dictatorship, the immediate issue is defense against Hitlerism and the German threat for universal conquest.

Aid To Democracies

The President endorsed the British recruiting drive for 15,000 to 30,000 American technicians to aid in air raid detection in England. He also pointed out that American youth can join British or Chinese armed forces if they do not take an oath of allegiance to any country other than the U. S.

Production Progress

The President said the over-all defense production program is making good progress. (Continued on Page 7)

Mark Remarks:

There is going to be the dire distressment and trouble in the land when senators and congressmen get back home and start explaining to their constituents their position on U. S. aid for the Bolsheviks and Communists.

"The American Way of Life" slogan paraded so freely just now, springs from the inspiration "send your boys, but don't touch my property."

The President says Germany is more a threat to the U. S. than Russia. Sure, for the same reason that a bull is a greater threat than a Billy goat.

The fellow who chooses the lesser of two evils would have taken the other if it had thought it to be HIS advantage.

President Roosevelt has said that any citizen of the United States has the right to volunteer and fight for Britain who wants to. To date we haven't seen or heard of any stampede by the editorial writers of Wheeler, Lindbergh, etc. Wonder what they are waiting for?

Can Stalin win as the headline: Not if he keeps on stallin!

I was pleased to receive last week from my life-long friend, John W. Mahan, 208, Second Ave. North, Birmingham, an interesting little volume entitled "Fundamental Facts and Fancies." I believe John has crowded more sound, basic material, helpful to the human race in this little book than I have ever seen in any other volume. The price is one dollar, and is well worth reading by anyone interested in human welfare--both spiritual and material.

ALABAMA BANKS MAKE 132,000 LOANS

(From the American Bankers Association News Bureau)

Nineteen per cent of the banks in Alabama made more than 132,000 loans totaling $132,000,000 to business firms and individuals throughout the state during the second half of 1940, according to the semi-annual survey of banking activity made by the Research Council of the American Bankers Association.

The A. B. A. loan survey was participated in by 42 Alabama banks, or 19.4 per cent of the 217 banks in the state.

These 42 banks reported that they made between July 1 and December 31, 1940:

76,227 new loans totaling $60,492,939
$4,629 renewals of loans totaling $69,685,981

1,383 new mortgage loans totaling $2,631,901

The survey showed that business firms in the state used only a third of the "open lines of credit" maintained for their use on the books of banks. A total of nine banks in the larger centers of the state reported that they carried on their books $10,521,500 in "open lines of credit" offered to and kept available for regular borrowers for use as needed by them. Of this amount $3,302,276 or 31.7 per cent was used.

The average number of new loans made per bank during the six month period under review was 1,815 and the average size of loan was $794.

The average number of loans renewed per bank was 1,301 and the average renewal was for $12,765.

The average number of new mortgage loans made per bank was 33 and the average new mortgage made was $19,093.

Candidates Asked To State Position On Real Estate Taxes

Candidates for governor of Alabama at the primary and general elections next year will be asked to commit themselves in writing to a policy of reduced taxes on real estate. Pursuant to a resolution adopted by the Alabama Real Estate Association at its final session of the 1941 convention in the Tutwiler Hotel Thursday afternoon, Chairman John D. Chichester of the committee, in reporting the resolution, said a large surplus has been created out of income tax collections levied under a constitutional amendment ratified during the Miller administration.

This money is earmarked for bond interest and principal amortization and can be used for no other purpose except by legislative action, he said, although the constitutional amendment provides that any surplus may be applied to tax relief for real estate.

Mr. Chichester said former Gov. Graves had assured him that he was for a reduction in real estate taxes and if possible could eliminate real estate taxes entirely.

Under the resolution all candidates will be contacted and requested to state their position on the real estate tax question in writing.

Speaking at the convention Lester E. Frailley, sales consultant of the National Association of Real Estate Boards on the subject "How to Make More Money in the Real Estate Business," said self-confidence was an essential to success in real estate as well as any other business and that every real estate salesman should look himself in a room, analyze himself, and then put his matter with him, self and determine by such an analysis the type of property he is best qualified to handle, and the method of approach and how to present his proposition.

In interviews with many high business executives he learned, he said, that they are no different from other people only in that they found out about themselves and applied themselves diligently to the work in hand.

John D. Chichester, Birmingham, was elected president to succeed H. H. Maschwey, of Mobile, who had served two years; Max Baum, Montgomery; C. C. Keeney, Fairhope, and A. Walton, Mobile, were elected second and third vice-presidents, respectively, and Morey Hart, Secretary.

Mr. Chichester is chairman of the Alabama Real Estate Commission, and Mr. Hart, executive vice-president of the Birmingham Real Estate Board--Birmingham News.

Straws Indicating Direction Political Wind Is Blowing

SPARKS SAYS "ME TOO" ON SALES TAX

Says Atticus Mullin, Montgomery Advertiser Staff Writer:

... The wise ones in politics continue to say that if Col. Graves has opposition for the governorship it will come from Judge Sparks, of Etowah. The other day the writer heard that two of the leaders against the imposition of the sales tax in the Graves Legislature had joined forces with Col. Graves. Some others of the merchants association who opposed the sales tax are also said to have written Col. Graves they would support him this time for the governorship. The main plank in the platform of Judge Sparks when he was defeated by Frank Dixon was opposition to a sales tax. In that fight he had the support of thousands of merchants who opposed the tax. Hence he will replace anti-sales tax support which Col. Graves has gotten from some of the old anti-sales tax leaders, is a problem which Judge Sparks will no doubt have to solve himself.

THE MERCHANTS SPEAK OUT

Says Fred Taylor, Birmingham News Age-Herald Staff writer:

Every few weeks seems to bring out new candidates for both governor and lieutenant governor, but the governor's race looks more and more like a two-man affair between Bibb Graves and Chancery Sparks. . . . Judge Sparks paid Birmingham another visit last week, hobnobbing with merchant leaders who gathered in the Magic City for the Alabama Retail Merchants' Association convention. . . . It will be remembered some of these merchants banded themselves into a Consumers Anti-Sales Tax Association and they and Sparks, bitter sales tax opponents, had a common cause in fighting this levy, which, incidentally, now has come to be accepted state revenue producer. . . . In fact, Sparks looks on the sales tax, which Gov. Dixon broadened to remove exemptions and bring in increased revenue, as a disposed-of issue and one not to be raised again in 1942. . . .

Incidentally, the merchants, who fought the levies so vigorously, adopted resolutions in Birmingham calling on legislative candidates to pledge themselves for more pay for teachers, free textbooks, through the seventh grade and nine-month school term throughout Alabama. The association asserted teachers were deserved and should have a more equitable share of increased state revenues. . . .

"WHO WILL BE THE NEXT GOVERNOR?"

Says Frank Nunnelee's Montgomery Weekly:

A Montgomeryan, speaking to the editor the other day, said that he had been through several counties in South Alabama and just for fun, he asked the following question of about a hundred and twenty-five people: "Who will be the next governor?"

He said that without hesitation every one of the questions was answered with the one name, Bibb Graves.

You will note that he was diplomatic, not asking how they would vote, but asking who would be the next governor. That was an easy manner of getting from total strangers the information he desired.

This paper believes that Graves will be the next governor. If there is any opposition to him, it is so scattered that it would take a huge magnifying glass to locate it.

The editor has been writing political articles and forecasting election results for many years, but in all those years he has never seen anything so unanimous as does the outlook for Graves. In fact, the man who is foolhardy enough to run against him will rue the day, for he will be snowed under so deep that a snow plow couldn't dig him out in a year.

BIBB BRINGS HOME THE PLUMS

Paul Corwin's Northwest Alabamian says:

Every day someone mentions the possibilities of Bibb Graves returning to the governor's seat at Montgomery. We do not claim to be a political prognosticator but things are looking mighty favorable at the present time for the Little Colonel.

Graves has always been one of the most popular men in the State of Alabama and will continue as one of our most popular men. It is evident that a majority of the people in the state already want him to come back as governor.

Everyone knows that Graves will be a candidate. In fact some say that he has never stopped running. But in the time he has been out of office he has done much for the state through his connections in Washington. He is the ideal man to have in Montgomery at this time when defense contracts are being given certain sections.

The Little Colonel is and has been a good friend of President Roosevelt for more than 25 years. He has helped Alabama get many contracts, and favors from the government we would have not gotten except for his influence. You can't help but like a man of Graves's caliber. The people of Alabama will again send him to Capital Hill.

SAM SAYS IT'S A "SNAP"

Says Sam Sloan's Sumter County Journal:

We hear more politics every day. As to the Governor's race, it is, as heretofore, conceded to Graves, in fact, conceded to a 'snap' for the 'little Colonel'. . . .

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

I have a prominent lawyer friend and in conversation with him he said this to say about himself, "I tell you Doctor, I am contacting men all the week who care nothing for the church and her ideals. They drink and swear give false testimony, they are ready to the brim with the low ways of lying, and when Sunday morning comes, I am in need of worship. If I go to church and fail to be lifted and inspired by my pastor, I am greatly impoverished in my spiritual life for the coming week. No man needs to hear the inspiring message on Sunday more than I do." Deep in my heart I gave utterance to an "Amen" for that man.

It is a fact that any man, to say nothing of a lawyer, who deals with the world during the week, should hear a great message on the Sabbath day. I sometimes wonder if the present ministry realizes its opportunity in lifting and inspiring men on the Sabbath. God give us great preachers.

In the "Little Minister" I read of a character who said that he was going to cut down a tree that was very much in his way. Just as soon as he could locate an ax, the tree was coming down. This man never found the ax and all the time the tree was growing larger. Finally the man was old and gray and the tree grew to be huge of body and limb. "I grew old looking for an ax," said this man to himself, "and that tree is still standing." We all know people who announce that they are going to do certain things, but they never get at it. They are always waiting for an ax. No man is born into the world whose work is not born with him. There is always work and duty to work with. People who do things do not wait for the ax to be at the root of the tree, they put them there.

Things may be rather tough with you and sometimes you may feel that you are facing more than you can handle of the tasks of life. Remember that things can be much worse than they are with you. You may have inflammatory Rheumatism, but you can be thankful if you do not have St. Vitus dance at the same time. You may be as ugly as Hecate, but you can be thankful if you have beauty of character. You may be as poor as Job's turkey, but you can be thankful if you can digest your food. You may lose all your teeth but two, but be thankful if you have health and strength to work with. Your blessing will outnumber your misfortunes. Things may be tough with you, but they could be worse.

In an Ariz. home a young man grew to be a man of his own. He was going away to the city for a job. His father followed him to the gate after he had kissed his mother good by. As father to son clasped hands, the old man said in simple language, "Son you are going away now to live your own life and let me ask that you do nothing that will hurt your mother." Years passed and one Mother's Day this fine man told me that this advice of his father had done him more good than anything else that he had heard. This man was certain that if a young man would make it the rule of his life to never do anything that would hurt mother, that he would live well. Young man, let me ask you, young woman let me ask you, have you ever done anything that would hurt your own dear mother. Listen to this advice, "Never do anything that will hurt your mother." You make her happy when you live right.

My duties around the house called for me to hang a large picture. On entering the living room I discovered that I was too low of stature to hang the picture where it should be. A table was rolled against the wall and still I was not high enough. My wife placed a flimsy box on top of the table and ordered me to climb thereon. Always being an obedient husband I climbed to the position and balanced myself for the task. Being uncertain of my safety I gave the nail a few light uncertain taps. My wife said to me, "Why don't you give that nail a brave blow or two and settle the matter."

MT. NEBO

Mr. Nebo church plans to have a homecoming on Sunday, July 20 to be followed by a revival. There will be preaching in the morning, a big table spread at noon and lots of good singing in the afternoon. All those who have ever attended this church or who have interests here are invited. All singers of the county are invited and quartets are urged to be present.

Church attendance was good on Sunday in spite of the rain. Rev. J. R. Bearden of Maplesville preached a good sermon Sunday night. We invite him and his family to come again. The following people have contributed Octagon coupons to the collection for the orphans: Mrs. Jodie Wilson, Mrs. Delos Culp, Misses Naomi Culp, Martha Evelyn McKee, Aalei Culp, Olivia Gilliland, Gertie Mae Culp, Elizabeth Williams and Marvarene Henley.

The young people of the community gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Culp on Saturday night for fun and music.

Miss Margaret Williams has returned from a visit to relatives in Pensacola.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rain and family of Prattville were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Williams Sunday.

Mr. Alton Culp, of Birmingham, who visited his parents this week end, escaped injury when his motorcycle upset in a gravel bed in the road.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Culp had as guests Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. W. E.

looked down upon her with surprise and said, "How can a fellow give a brave blow or two standing on a foundation that is beneath me?" When I listen to some preachers I want to say to them, "Why don't you hit that sin a brave blow or two and settle the matter?" It must be the foundation that is beneath, some preachers that causes them to hit just a feeble tap here and there.

Owen, Miss Evelyn Owen, Mr. Mrs. J. O. Bice and family, Mr. Mrs. L. L. Traywick and family, Miss Ann Haggard, Miss W. Owen and Rev. Charlie Haggard in Montevallo Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Burnice Culp was the dinner guest of Mr. Lomer W. Mrs. and Mrs. Pearl Culp spent Sunday with Miss Gertie Mae Culp.

Miss Agnes Mims was the guest of Miss Leedie Coggins Sunday.

Jink, and Pete Coggins, Agnes Alton Mims, Lois and Raymond Culp. They regret that Mrs. T. J. Culp and Gerald are moving back to Birmingham.

Mrs. D. P. Culp visited Mrs. T. Culp, Mrs. S. S. Broadhead, Sr. and Mrs. Zelen Broadhead Friday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Parnell Ratliff visited relatives here this week end.

MORE EVAPORATED MILK AND CHEESE ARE NEEDED

Secretary of Agriculture, Claude Wickard has appealed to the people of the U. S. to reduce their consumption of cheese in order that more food may be available to Great Britain and other nations resisting aggression. At the same time he suggested an increase in cheese production by about one-third, and evaporation by about one-fourth.

"It is this condition," Secretary Wickard said, "Producers should increase the feeding of grain to dairy cattle. Ample supplies of grain are available because of the reserves in the National Granary and the feeding of normal weather has damaged pasture grain will help compensate for the loss of some sections of the country. The feeding of grain will help keep production at higher levels in the month of July and August when production ordinarily declines."

Below is a reproduction of the questionnaire which will be submitted to the milk producers of Chilton County by the County Farm Agent regarding the proposed milk condensary for the county.

DAIRY QUESTIONNAIRE

We believe that we have conditions suitable for profitable milk production, and are interested in obtaining for the farmers of this section a market for whole milk. Representatives of the Carnation Company have indicated their interest in this area providing a sufficient number of farmers indicate that they are willing to give the sale of whole milk at least a 60-day trial.

CURB MARKETS SALES ARE HIGH IN STATE

Dry weather hasn't kept the 18 home demonstrated crop markets from operating, even though the amount of fresh vegetables for sale has been short.

Even with adverse conditions $52,916.03 worth of food products were sold from the 18 curb markets during the past month making a total of $217,345.95 worth of products sold since January 1, 1941, announces Etta McGaugh, state home agent of the Alabama Extension Service. Since rains have been fairly general over the state curb market-sellers are planting gardens and truck patches so that they can supply the demand for vegetables at the markets.

The Gadsden market leads the State in sales, with Montgomery and Tuscaloosa being close behind. Each of these markets average between $12,000 and $15,000 a month in sales throughout the year. This year markets are making a big drive to improve the standard of the products and to sell the idea of using Alabama grown products.

Synthetic Rubber Is Under Restriction

The Priorities Division of the Office of Production Management issued two orders June 9 providing mandatory priority control over all synthetic rubber and also over certain types of polyvinyl chloride, a plasticized resin material used in the manufacture of sheathing for ship's cables.

Neoprene, one of the synthetic rubbers, has been under mandatory priority control since March 28. This control expired June 30. The new synthetic rubber order, which takes effect July 1, includes Neoprene and also takes in the other synthetic rubbers such as buna types like Hycar, Perbunan, Chemigum, and organic polysulphides such as the material known by the trade name of "Thiokol."

The basic facts covered by each order are as follows:

Synthetic Rubber

Synthetic rubber is widely used for the manufacture of numerous materials for the Navy, the army and for Great Britain. Typical uses include the manufacture of aircraft tank linings, hose and tubing, packing and gaskets, and wire and cable sheathing. Because of its heat-resistant, oil resistant and atmospheric-resistant qualities, it is often superior to crude rubber, and there is no satisfactory substitute. Estimated current production of synthetic rubber is at the rate of approximately 19,600 pounds per year and the minimum defense use is estimated at approximately 14 million pounds per year, thus producing an over-all shortage which can be expected to increase.

In order it is provided that all regulatory provisions will go into effect July 1, and that after this date no producer shall make deliveries to any customer or make any further use of

STRAWBERRY PLANTS NEED CHOPPING AND FERTILIZER

To insure having a good supply of healthy new strawberry plants for next year's crop, farmers are now giving attention to plowing, chopping, and fertilizing plants which have finished bearing this season.

The best procedure after harvest is to bar off the rows, running one furrow just past the middle so as to remove the oldest plants and leaving a strip six or eight inches wide on each side of the rows. The plants left, says Lyle Brown, extension service horticulturist, Auburn are then chopped out, leaving one plant every foot. Application of 200-400 pounds of 6-8-4 is made along each side of the berries and the process of getting the soil back to the plants is started.

"To have good strawberries, growers must avoid using plants for producing more than one crop. Crowns become long and woody and the roots, instead of being white and vigorous, turn black and are poor feeders after the first year. A new mat of plants must be grown after harvest and before fall for best results," says Brown.

Manufactured synthetic rubber in his own plant or organization without specific direction from the Director of Priorities.

During each calendar month, beginning in July, the Director will issue special directions governing the allocation and uses of the synthetics.

Polyvinyl Chloride

The term polyvinyl chloride is defined in the order covering this material as "polymerized vinyl chloride and its copolymer with vinyl acetate, containing 92 per cent or more of vinyl chloride whether plasticized or unplasticized, which includes the materials known by the trade names of Koroal and Vinylite."

The present total production of this type of polyvinyl chloride is about 8 million pounds per year. There are only two producers and their total production is insufficient to meet the requirements of military needs. The order provides that after June 16 no producer shall make any deliveries of polyvinyl chloride to any customer or otherwise process or use manufactured polyvinyl chloride in his own organization except under specific direction by the Director of Priorities.

Beginning June 16, and thereafter at the beginning of each calendar month, the Director of Priorities will issue to all producers specific directions governing deliveries and uses which may be made by the producers during each month.

Electric screens to fit doors and windows of the milk house and dairy barn are on the market. Files are electrocuted when they try to go between the rods.

New Lease On Life For Small Farmer Offered Under New Cooperative Plan

FSA Plan Gives Thousands Chance To Pool Resources To Pay Rural Operations And Family Expenses

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—Thousands of low-income farmers in the Southeast will be able to pool their resources to pay for farm operations and family expenses under a plan announced Saturday by the Farm Security Administration.

The FSA calls it the division of co-operatives. Through this agency, some 80,000 families will be enabled to obtain adequate medical care, build that new fence so long needed, or pep up the farm stock with new effort.

Aim of the new division, headed by Hubert R. Bailey, formerly of Wadley, Ala., will be to organize cooperative activities among FSA clients in every county touched by the Department of Agriculture's rehabilitation program.

Farm Security officials described the plan as the most widespread venture in cooperative planning ever undertaken.

For the time being, these projects will be used as mediums of experimentation out of which other cooperative developments are expected, said E. S. Morgan, Southeastern FSA director.

"The first object of the new effort," Morgan said, "is to help low-income farm families to work together in winning their rehabilitation. Actually, it seeks to place in their hands the means of rehabilitating themselves."

"The plan was undertaken on the theory that cooperation is good business and good democracy. It is the American way."

An estimated 500,000 individuals could be affected.

Group ventures, to be controlled by the farmers themselves, will be fostered in purchasing, marketing, leasing, planning, joint ownership and use of machinery and breeding stock, medical and dental services, veterinary services and storage.

"It is expected to offer the small farmer these advantages:

- "1. To obtain facilities and services which they as individuals could not afford.
- "2. To enable them to compete with larger operators.
- "3. To enable them to enjoy the benefits of technological improvements.
- "4. To help maintain the family size farm and make it a going concern.
- "5. To facilitate change from a one-cash-crop economy to a diversified crop program.
- "6. To provide types of organization and plans of operation which will serve as patterns to guide these same groups in meeting other needs, and other groups in obtaining needed services.

"But first and last, the undertaking seeks to give to the little farmer an opportunity to work for himself, and for and with his neighbors to which his limited individual resources hitherto has been a bar."

PROVISIONS RECOMMENDED FOR 1942 FARM PROGRAM

Measures which will assure full farm support of the Nation's defense program, encourage greater conservation, and give greater assistance to the small farmer have been recommended for the 1942 AAA Farm Program by a conference of AAA State committeemen and other officials in Washington.

The recommendations will form the basis of specific provisions of the 1942 program to be announced later. The national conference, which brought together the recommendations of State, county, and community groups of farmers, was attended by approximately 200 State and county AAA committeemen and representatives of State Agricultural Extension Services and Vocational Agriculture.

FARMERS SAVING DROPPINGS TO MAKE 6-8-4 FERTILIZER

Farmers properly taking care of poultry droppings are saving complete fertilizer and are putting money into their pockets by the practice. This statement is from D. F. King, associate poultry husbandman, Alabama Experiment Station, Auburn, who says that 100 hens can furnish the equivalent of 1,800 pounds of 6-8-4 during one year. One hundred hens will produce better than two tons of manure per year. By adding 14 pounds of superphosphate weekly to the droppings, almost one ton of 6-8-4 fertilizer can be saved. King points out that superphosphate not only increases the phosphorus content of the manure but aids in fly control.

Wire nettings used beneath the roosting poles make it possible to leave droppings in the chicken house for several months.

FOR DESTROYERS, TOO!

And For Dozens of Other Defense Materials

THE need for aluminum in defense equipment has resulted in such high demands for it that it will soon be unavailable for non-defense uses. Its production requires great quantities of electrical energy. Power sources in the Southeast have been heavily devoted to this purpose. But other defense materials and equipment made in the South must also have their share of electrical energy so that they may be delivered in time to insure our armed forces on land and at sea.

The demands for electric power for defense production continue to increase. Sustained operation of industries producing defense materials requires that every patriotic citizen continue to limit his use of electric power in his factory, his store or office, and at home.

Among the materials and equipment being made in Alabama and other Southern states for clothing and equipping the Army and Navy, and for use in actual fighting, should it come to that, are aircraft, destroyers, large ships, boat motors, aluminum, gold, tin, motor boats, shells, ammunition components, fuses, boosters, military clothing, tent materials, pig iron, canvas, water and soil pipe, khaki cloth, soldiers' lockers, pumps, air compressors, power plant equipment, coal, rubber tires, abrasives, alloys, gasoline, blankets, chemicals, cement, ceramics, steel, naval stores, various minerals, castings, lumber and housing.

The manufacture of these and other materials in Southern plants has resulted in increased demands for electric power greater than any heretofore experienced. These extraordinary demands for power for defense production resulted in the appeal of the Federal Power Commission, the Office of Production Management, the War Department, the TVA and private power companies in the Southeast, that you limit your use of electricity in every possible way so that Southern industries engaged in defense work can operate without pause.

The spirit of the response to the appeal has been cheering; however, the need for national defense production becomes greater daily, so the fulfillment of the use of power for non-defense purposes must continue.

Will you continue to help keep national defense industries running at full speed by limiting your use of electricity to whatever extent you can?

We and other power producing agencies in the Southeast are doing all we can to make it possible for you to resume your normal use of electric service at the earliest possible date.

Instructions Given Merchants

Cotton retail merchants wishing to accept cotton order stamps for cotton goods register their names and addresses at the county agent's office if they have not already done so. After this is done they will receive the necessary instructions and forms for cooperating in the program.

"All three copies of S. M. A. No. 510 cards, completed and signed on both sides by the merchant, must be returned to the county agent's office to be executed, since the audit division of the Surplus Marketing Administration will not honor stamps received from stores which fail to do this," report S.M.A. representatives.
"After the cards are approved by the Surplus Marketing Administration, the card will be returned to the merchant with instructions for securing payment along with a supply of voucher forms and stamp cards," they report.

Visitor Turns Out To Be Half-Sister

What supposedly was just some tourists who had lost their route, turned out to be a half-sister of Jim Littleton of Route Five last week. Of course, not knowing he had a half-sister, he was utterly surprised. It was Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Camp, their daughter, Louise, Dorothy and Evelyn from Greggton, Texas, who had come east for Mrs. Camp (nee Rosa Littleton) to see her unseen brother.

How this all came about is quite a story within itself. Mr. John Littleton, father of Jim Littleton, left Chilton County when Jim was only a small child (he's 30 odd now) and went to north Alabama. He was never heard of again by his children in Chilton County. About two years ago, Mr. Littleton was surprised to have two half-brothers, pay him a visit; now his half-sister comes along. It is reported that the late John Littleton went to the rich oil fields of Texas and married again and raised a family. The date of his death and the whereabouts was unknown until recently.

Mr. Littleton is pondering on what will turn up next. He says though, he was very happy as well as surprised to have his brothers and sisters visit him and he hopes to return the favor by going west himself sometime.

Legislature Rules On Tax Reduction

MONTGOMERY — The Alabama Supreme Court, Tuesday held in an advisory opinion, that it will take an act of the Legislature to apply the income tax surplus, which is expected to reach $2,000,000 within a few months, to reduction of property taxes.

The advisory opinion had been requested by Gov. Frank M. Dixon in an attempt to reduce property taxes under the provision of section 408 of the State Tax Law, which provided that any surplus from proceeds of the income tax, after care of interest and installment payments on current debts as of September, 1932, "shall be applied to the reduction of the ad valorem tax on real and personal property."

The Supreme Court pointed out, however, that no machinery had been provided for application of income tax surplus to reduction of ad valorem taxes. It was held that section 408 of the income law is not self-executing, and a constitutional provision was cited to the effect that "no power of suspending laws shall be exercised except by the Legislature."

THE RUSSO-GERMAN WAR

The second week of the most unexpected war of history is now under way, and Americans are first beginning to realize the significance of the struggle between the two dictators, Joseph Stalin and Adolph Hitler.

Almost like a military blitzkrieg itself, the proclamation of Adolph Hitler on the Sunday morning of June 22, 1941, struck the people of the world. With only slight delay, even less belief, the Germans massed forces on the Russo-German border all the way from the Arctic to the Black Sea. Then denouncing Russia for all she was worth, with telling the world everything it knew was not true, Hitler sent his army once again on a mission—a mission that made it clear that no nation on earth can trust the policies of Hitler, and that no nation can doubt that Hitler has but one aim—the conquest of the world.

Thus with a numerically smaller army, with a slightly lighter mechanized force, but with an experienced and tested veteran army, and a superior air force, the German people were once again fighting a war which was a build-up and a preparedness for an even greater war.

For every battle Hitler has fought has been a battle to gain position and supply for an even more dangerous struggle. With every victory, Hitler has been put in a position that has enabled him to continue to conquer and to continue to cause hate and tyranny to reign on the world.

So, while we are unable to see clearly the trend of the titanic battle of tanks and guns and men—while we are unable in the face of the many and conflicting opinions and official reports to see which side is getting the best of the struggle—we are able to understand and to reason out the consequences of a German victory, a Russian victory or a stalemate.

There are very few military observers who would dare to grant that the Russians could win the war. American experts hope that the Russians will be wise enough to fall back slowly and not come to grips with the German war machine. By falling back, by burning grain and machinery as they go—the "scorched earth" policy Russia would stall off Germany and America and Britain would have time to prepare. But there is only slight possibility that the Russians will do this, for, by drawing back, Russia will be sacrificing her entire land and her men. The Russian morale is not prepared for that. Only if the Russian leaders decide that a British victory will also be a victory for them, will they make such great sacrifices. And there exists only animosity between the British and Russians, in spite of the British announcement that she will aid Russia. And it is even more unlikely that in direct contact with the Germans and in a one-battlefield struggle, will the Russians be able to defeat the Germans. Thus, it seems unlikely that the Russians will overcome the Germans, but even if they do, very few American and British leaders feel that a Russian victory will settle the issue for them. One militarist dictatorship on the continent is as bad as another.

But those who hope that the Russians will be able to hold off the Germans, successfully for at least one winter—those who hope for the stalemate—have another innate fear that is, perhaps, as bad as the fear of either a Russian or a German victory. Already in Britain, cries are going up for a British invasion of the continent on the French-Dutch-Belgium side. With Hitler occupied in Russia, there are limitless possibilities for the British in the West. These people feel that with American aid and possibly American men, Britain would be able to gain a foot-hold on the continent. They point out that the loyal Frenchmen will come to the aid of the British. And by this foot-hold they expect to regain all the territory that has been conquered by Hitler. If such a counter-invasion was launched by Britain, the world would see bloodshed and persecution as never before imagined. The British are not likely to rush such an invasion of the continent until they see that Hitler is really having trouble with the Russians. But if such an invasion was really begun, then for the first time would the demands upon America be really great. All our energy would be needed to turn out munitions to enable the British to win, for, on the one hand, if Britain conquers the continent, the world would be at peace once more, if Britain failed, Hitler, or Stalin, would turn upon America with freedom of action and with the knowledge that the British navy was no longer in the way of a war with America. Thus, therefore, the invasion of the continent seems so terrible and momentous that the British and the Americans can hardly speak of it in terms of warfare that are already known.

Therefore, the other consequence of the three is that Hitler will win, and win in the space of time that he hopes he will. And, of course, if he wins in the space of time that he intends to, he will not be seriously hurt in supplies and men. Moreover, he will have gained the grain of the Ukraine and he will have gained the oil of Russia. With that oil and food, Hitler could at least do what he had delayed doing—invasion of Britain.

With a conquest of Russia, Hitler will have surrounded, if you will look at a map, all the rest of Europe and Asia. He would be able to seize Turkey. He would be at the Middle East and India. Suez would be vulnerable. Africa would be flanked. China would be open to conquest. And, what is more menacing to the U. S., Hitler would have Siberian bases which would enable him to gain a foothold in Alaska, and which would ultimately allow him to have a formidable force based so near the United States that it would be a constant threat to our security and to our peace of mind. Moreover, the German leader would be in a position to command resources that America could never equal. And, so, the main and most pernicious consequence of all three possibilities would be a quick Hitler victory, that would inevitably result in an assault on the British Isles and an increasingly dangerous American position in the theatre of war.

So, in truth, if we look closely and think clearly, the German-Russian war has no real advantages for America. But there will be some people who will say that the war will tire out both sides and will make a democratic victory an assured result.

There will be those who will say that we need not extend our defense program, for Hitler will meet defeat just as Napoleon met defeat years before. And there will be those who will urge that America return to normal life and abandon the whole defense program, for now we have no need of it—Hitler is finished. These are minds which are still running in a stream of thought which is hopeful but not reasonable. It is indeed to be hoped that Hitler has met defeat. But we are not certain. And, as long as there is one slight doubt about the outcome of the conflict, we Americans must prepare must aid Britain, and must continue to promulgate the dogma of the democratic way of life and must still train to defend it.

Only by acting with a belief that we still have the greatest role in the defeat of Hitler, and only by manifesting that role, will we as Americans, be able to take our rightful place among the nations of the world. By showing our power now, instead of letting it slide away in the cloak of false hopefulness, we can prove ourselves to the world, and we can be taking the first steps in the ladder which reaches to the fulfillment of the American destiny.

THANKS TO SARDIS

On last Sunday, June 29, Sardis Harp and Harmony Singing convention and the splendid manner in which they did it, caused the Clerk of the convention to feel that it is a case where the singers did not give according to the manner in which they received because the good people of Sardis church and community really are a people of hospitality; supplying the friendship and brotherly love sufficient to make anyone feel at home and feeding all as festive as a King.

The singing was good, but should they ever invite us again let's be sure we make it better.

Many of our fathers, mothers and grand parents were present and we believe they enjoyed the entire day.

We especially thank the young people for their kindness and respect towards us while visiting in their community.

We sincerely thank each member and visitor for their loyalty to the convention—as we again thank the good people of Sardis community—Ira S. Crowe, clerk.

CCC Giving Training Related To National Defense Program

MONTGOMERY, ALA. — Approximately 5,000 young men and war veterans enrolled in Alabama CCC camps were, on May 1, receiving training related directly or indirectly to National defense according to information received from the office of James E. McIntire, Civilian Conservation Corps Director. All junior enrollees in Alabama camps have the benefit of job training and basic CCC training which it is stated, is of the greatest value to them whether they are called to duty under the selective law or obtain jobs in national defense industry. The job training includes truck driving, tractor operation, surveying, drafting and related subjects.

Of the 5,000 men enrolled in the 29 Alabama camps in April, it was revealed, 1,346 were taking special national defense vocational training courses in camps or in near-by trade schools in cooperation with State vocational training authorities. Another 88 men were taking full-time vocational courses at the two CCC cooks and bakers' schools and the central motor repair shop located in the State.

All enrollees in the Alabama camps are receiving training of marked value in national defense," Mr. McIntire was quoted as saying. "Those taking the vocational courses also receive training while working on the regular CCC projects. All of them likewise take a required first aid program and junior enrollees take daily setting up exercises to improve their posture and to strengthen muscles that are not developed in the course of ordinary work. They all learned something about living in military camp surroundings, such as first-aid, safety, sanitation, personal hygiene, discipline, regular hours, and daily contact with men of widely varied temperaments.

Two cooks and bakers' schools are operated in Alabama, each with an enrollment of 34 men selected from camps in the area. The school for white enrollees is at Camp TVA-13, Wilson Dam, and the school for negroes at Camp F-10, Munford. Courses run for 8 weeks and cover practical cooking, work, mess management, menu planning, food purchasing and bookkeeping necessary for mess stewardship.

The CCC central motor repair shop at Talladega has 20 enrollees assigned. They work with skilled mechanics and receive practical training in all types of automotive maintenance and repair. This includes automotive assembly and disassembly, motor repair, ignition, fuel systems, body and chassis repair, use and care of tools, operation of lathes and drills, battery work and store-room operation.

Alabama distributed over 200,000 beautifully colored and illustrated State highway maps during the past year. The demand was so heavy from all parts of the U. S. that a greater supply of the new 1941-42 maps will be needed.

Long years ago—after a ship had sailed from England—the crew found an infant sleeping in a hammock. No one knew who had placed it there. The crew adopted the baby and gave him the name of Hammock, because he had been found in a hammock. He went through life by that name, and as a man lived in Northeast Alabama. His great-grand-son through one of his daughters, lives near Ft. Payne as is Jefferson Davis Lankford. The latter was born three months after Jefferson Davis assumed the office of Confederacy, and he was named for this illustrious Southerner. Lankford was born in a log cabin—in a peach orchard—and this farm is now the site of Fort Payne, Ala. Lankford called "Uncle Jeff" and people of light in his reminiscences.

A TRIBUTE To COURAGE

To you—our forefathers—we give our praise—for in this day of well-beaten paths, of broad concrete highways and peaceful fields, of fast transportation and swift communication, we often forget the struggle it took to get them. We forget the hot trackless prairies—the scarcity of water—the marauding Indians—the long slow heartbreaking journey. Today we celebrate Independence Day. And something greater, too—the strength and courage of a freedom loving people.

Prices

Price Administrator Henderson announced he will set ceiling prices for new automobiles and "in all probability" used cars, because certain manufacturers have refused to cooperate in raising inflation by keeping prices at their present level. Mr. Henderson said the price of tires, inner tubes prevent price skyrocketing in connecproximately 25 per cent of rubber consumption.

Priorities

The OPM announced priority according to rubber, zinc and tungsten compounds. Rubber consumption will be reduced from 817,000 to 600, 000 tons a year; 16,000 tons of meta-

EMERGENCY SERVICE PERIOD EXTENDED LEATHERNECKS

Secretary of the Navy Knox has announced revision of the enlistment articles for the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve to provide for retention of U. S. Marine Corps Reserves on active duty for the duration of the existing national emergency.

Henceforth, men enlisting in the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve for a fixed period of years will sign the following agreement:

"I understand that I may be required to perform active duty throughout the war or national emergency arising during my term of enlistment or arising prior thereto and existing at the time this contract is executed."

The Naval Reserve Act of 1938 provides for retention of Marine Corps Reserve personnel as well as Naval Reserve personnel during the emergency but it is not the intention of the War Department to force such retention because the Marine Corps Reserve personnel were not apprised of the provision in the articles of enlistment when signed.

THREE MILLION POUNDS OF SPINACH YEARLY FOR NAVY

Men enlisting in the regular Navy and various branches of the U. S.
Naval Reserve won't have to pine for culinary dishes like canned goods if they like orders for canned goods by the War Department for the 1942 fiscal year beginning July 1 are any indications.

During that year, Naval personnel will consume 119,728,050 pounds of canned foods. Among the items are nearly 12,000,000 pounds of tomatoes, 7,000,000 pounds of peas, 5,000,000 pounds of corn, 6,000,000 pounds of string beans.

Capt. T. A. Thomson, Jr., Acting
Commandant of the Eighth Naval District, observed that Navy men of today don't require the "Popeye" road to physical fitness and strength in that of nearly 12,000,000 pounds of food, only 3,000,000 pounds are allotted to spinach.

Guernsey Cattle
Auction Held At Kilby Prison

With an attendance of around 750
Alabama farmers and cattlemen, representing the 67 counties of the State, the second annual purchased cattle sale at Kilby Dairy farm on June 26, proved a highly interesting and successful event.

The auction of 21 pure-bred young Guernsey bulls and six heifers brought a total of $3,257.50 in price, but more important than this was the general distribution over the State of these fine animals for improvement of Alabama dairy herds the sale being conducted by Alabama farmers and cattlemen.

Long before the appointed hour for the speaking program to begin at 11 o'clock, prominent Alabamians, especially in the agricultural field, began to arrive, look over the pens of selected cattle to be auctioned, and also view the Kilby pasture where herds of "contented" cows browsed. The social feature, the reunion of friends and old acquaintances, was not the least of the interesting sidelights.

At 11 a. m. the program opened with a talk by Col. W. E. Persons, Director of the State Department of Corrections and Institutions, followed by Dr. L. N. Duncan, President of Auburn. P. O. Davis, Director of Extension Service; Frank Baker, Montevally, President of the Alabama Guar-ney Cattle Club; F. W. Burns, dairy specialist of Auburn, and others. The talks were interesting and instructive.
Among those introduced at that time were Clyde Coe, Dothan; Leon Guy, Montgomery; G. S. Smalley, Sylva-cauga; Taylor Rossor, Bessemer; Ross Smith, Springville, all officers of the Guernsey Club; J. Miller Bonner, legal advisor to Gov. Frank Dixon;
"Duck" Samford, Arthur Huestess,
Bill Cotney, C. S. Keller, H. C. Bates, Col. Hartley Moon and B. P. Livingston.

Newspaper men present included
Editor Herman L. Upshaw of the Eufaula Daily Tribune, who was accompanied by Ashborn Spurlock; Fred Thorton, Montgomery and others in the publicity field.

At noon a sumptuous free luncheon was served to 654 guests. A large number of people, however, arrived later for the sale.

There was a round of applause in the dairy barn where the sale was held, when the first of the pure-bred was led in for auction. As the sale progressed each animal elicited much praise when pedigrees were read and
Col. Tom McCord began auctioneer-ing. Sires and dams preceding some of these animals have in the past sold for sums as high as $10,000 to $35,000.
Top price paid for a single animal during the sale was $235.00. Several were sold for more than $200.00. Lowest price was $62.50. A large number of offerings ranged under one year in age.

Alabama holds third place in the nation in lumber production, led only by Oregon and Washington. Last year this state produced a billion and a quarter feet—enough to fill a 600-mile freight train and this year will produce more.

Conceited Gobbler Gives Auto A First-Class Flogging

This is the story of Tom, the big gobbler that belongs to Mr. A. D. Headley. One day recently Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Culp, of Mt. Nebo community visited the former, who has a large flock of turkeys, among them a large gobbler. Tom walked up to Mr. Culp's car and saw another gobbler in the mirror-like surface. He ruffled himself and gobbled fiercely. The one he saw looked fierce too, so, he flew into him with rights and lefts until he beat himself down on the side of the car, and backed off, considerably subdued, to survey the situation once more. The other turkey backed off, so Tom decided to chase him away. The result was most unsatisfactory, so he walked disgustedly around to the back of the car. There he found another gobbler that had to be chased away. The result was no better, so Tom walked on around. There were turkeys everywhere—he fought them all. He fought his reflection until he was completely exhausted and had to be driven away. But Tom still had that old spirit and was gobbling for more.

PRESIDENT SPEAKS

liberty which the Fathers of the Republic proclaimed to all the world on that mid-summer day in Philadelphia in 1776. It has been essentially a home festival.

I am glad, therefore, to learn that the Office of Civilian Defense is to lead the Nation this year in a grand dedication to liberty on the Fourth of July. I commend this celebration to Americans everywhere to the end that in this solemn commemoration we may find renewed faith in the blessings which are ours because of the struggle and sacrifice, the courage and fortitude and vision of those who made this Nation a reality.

The Plan

The Fourth of July dedication is to take place simultaneously throughout the nation at 4:00 p.m. Eastern Standard Time.

The dedication will begin with a five-minute radio speech by President Roosevelt. This will be followed by the playing of national anthem started by the U. S. Marine Band in Washington and picked up by bands all over the country. Following the national anthem, all citizens led by the President will recite the Oath of Allegiance to the United States.

Your Part

As an American you have a part in the dedication wherever you may be. At home, at the beach, in the mountains, at a picnic, at the theatre, at the ball game, have a radio turned on, listen to the President join in singing "The Star Spangled Banner" and repeat the Oath of Allegiance.

This dedication ceremony need not interfere with any other patriotic Fourth of July effort you may wish to undertake. Many states and localities are planning their own programs. Look to them for information about their plans.

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

If you don't get mentioned in the special column this week don't feel disappointed. We believe everybody in Chilton County now and everybody who ever lived in Chilton did something for which they should be mentioned, but even printers make mistakes—sometimes.

We want to apologize to Mr. T. W. Bryan for getting his initials wrong in the article about the quilt that is owned by he and Mrs. Bryan. The quilt should have read T. W. instead of J. T.

He was getting old . . . he was from appearances a bit travel weary . . . coming from no telling where and going to no telling where . . . his pace was slow, as though it didn't especially matter anyway. Going up on July 31 one day last week, this tourist caught the eye of a motorist who had shared more of the finer qualities of the good Samaritan in his makeup than most and stopped to give a ride to the "old man". Upon asking the wayfarer if he cared to ride to the gentleman paused for a moment and replied, "Nope, I guess not . . . I have just as far to go when you get me out as I have now".

We have a cat at home that when the refrigerator is open and there is a fish in it, won't leave from in front of said fishbox until someone gets him a piece of meat . . . and that's no fish story.

We saw an aged negro man riding through the streets of Clanton this week with a small pickaninny on the handlebars of a bicycle . . . the little fellow was only about 2 or 3 years old and would nearly go to sleep riding and the aged negro would touch it on the shoulder with his hand and wake it up . . . we didn't get any names but it was an odd sight . . . odd because it is a sight that perhaps you have never seen.

Geo. McCain brought some peas to the News office last week that were "peas" . . . imagine a guy with acres of peas measuring more than 23½ inches in length . . . all filled out too . . . them on his place west of town.

Jack Fuqua was in to see this week end and we were right glad to see him . . . he's stationed (and we do mean stationed) over in Georgia somewhere and admits that he likes it fine. Jack says that it's a funny thing when he was a small boy he liked tin soldiers and a little girl that he knew knew painted dolls . . . now, Jack likes painted dolls and the little girl likes soldiers.

We certainly do not intend to call any names but a certain lady was heard to remark down town the other day, "My husband is just as good as they make 'em . . . they just don't make 'em any too good".

We have seen three automobile wrecks in this block within as many days . . . all of course due largely to carelessness. The last one was between a new Plymouth and a Model A Ford . . . the beautiful grill on the Plymouth was badly battered, a headlight was broken and from the water under it looked as though the radiator was busted . . . oh, the model "A" it was, have a single scratch.

S. Levine was in town Monday—happy and good natured as ever and says that he is getting along alright. We were glad to see him and have been wondering all this time why he never came up to see us anymore.

Guess you've heard about being up to your neck in water, haven't you? Well, we think the saying is hot water . . . but with the three Mims brothers it was rain water . . . Clyde was in the store the other afternoon after the deluge wading around trying to keep from coming over his concrete wall at the back door . . . Virgil was in his store doing the same thing and Melvin, who operates the Dixie Cafe, believe it or not, was in the back of the cafe doing the same thing. That's the time that we could truthfully say these three Mims boys were all wet. We hadn't been able to find out where Willie was at the time he may have been sweeping water too.

Warning Issued On Exposure To Polio

Every Effort Being Made To Prevent Disease Here

Alabama does not have an epidemic of infantile paralysis yet, and we are all very anxious to have as few cases as possible of this very serious disease. There are several ways in which we can help to keep down the spread. The State Health Officer has several times advised Alabamians to keep away from the areas where a number of cases of infantile paralysis have been reported. This is extremely important for small children, who are susceptible to the disease, and it is also important for adults who may not contract the disease, but may become carriers of the virus. Please plan your vacation trips in areas where infantile paralysis has not been reported.

So far, Chilton County has been fortunate in having no case, of poliomyelitis. However, it is wise for all people to know what the early symptoms of this disease are, so that if a case should occur, the spread can be cut to a minimum, and so that the

Boll Weevil Plays Havoc In County

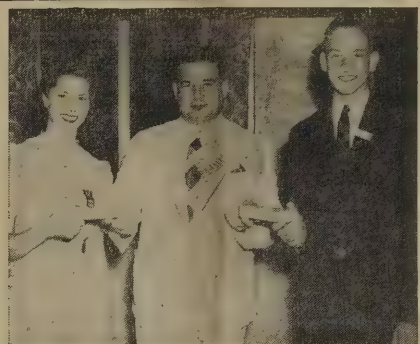

Control Measures Given By County Agent Smith

Boll weevils are playing havoc with the cotton crop in Chilton County, reports P. H. Smith, county agent, in urging farmers to join with farmers throughout the state in a state-wide boll weevil poisoning campaign.

With cotton bringing 15 cents per pound at present and prospects for good prices this fall, it is most important for farmers to poison their cotton with calcium arsenate during July and early August.

Instructions:
1. Poison cotton every five days for three times during July. Poison first and second weeks of August to protect young bolls.
2. Use calcium arsenate.
3. Use blower type dust guns, tractor power, mule drawn hand duster or pole and bag method.
4. When applied with dust guns use five to ten pounds calcium arsenate per acre.
5. When pole and bag method is used mix thoroughly and use five lbs. calcium arsenate and five pounds hydrated (builder) lime per acre.
6. If poison is washed off within 24 hours by rain, poison again at once.
7. See your county agent for any further information desired.

WINNERS OF GOOD DRIVERS CONTEST

A 16-year-old Plantersville girl and a boy, 17, of Clanton, who faced the problem of how they were going to be able to attend school next session, had that problem behind them Thursday, together with the honor of being the safest and most expert youthful drivers in Alabama.

They are Norma Baker and William (Billy) Callen, who came to Birmingham with 22 others selected from approximately 5,000 students who competed this year in the contests of the Ford Good Drivers League.

In addition to a scholarship of $100 each, they were awarded 17 Jewel wrist watches and the right to compete in the national finals at Dearborn, Michigan in August when a university scholarship valued at $5,000 will be presented. Other valuable awards will be made in the national contest.

Dusty King had been murdered—Dusty, who had been like a father to Bill Roper. Then Roper—who had been a respectable man—turned, "outlaw" to "get even."

How Bill Roper gathered together a tougher, more desperate band of outlaws and rustlers, beat the Thorpe gang at their own game, and drove them out of the country, is told with breathless speed and with fidelity to the history of those epic times in "The Smoky Years." Don't miss it!

80,000 Troops Are Slated For Iceland

Number Necessary To Thwart Any Axis Move

WASHINGTON—Iceland, the nation's newest defense outpost, appeared likely today to claim one of the largest United States garrisons overseas—it not the largest.

Latest army figures fix the total of present overseas garrisons at 118,700 troops. The disposition of these forces was not revealed but Hawaii, presumably the most strongly manned post, had 40,000 soldiers in May for maneuvers.

Official information on the size of the British force now occupying Iceland comes under the head of a military secret, but seamen who touched recently at the island estimated it at about 80,000 men—a figure which some military sources believe is not excessive, considering the fact that the occupying force would have to be large enough to discourage German attempts to capture the island.

WASHINGTON, July 8—Less than 24 hours after President Roosevelt announced U. S. occupation of Iceland, the War Department today awarded contracts to equip its troops in north-establishments now in Greenland, Alaska, and the Aleutian Islands as well as Iceland. The War Department ordered 5,919 pairs of skis, 15,784 ski poles, 3,733 pairs of snow shoes and 115,308 pounds of ski wax.

This Week In National Defense

President Roosevelt told his press conference he still hopes the U. S. can stay out of the world conflict. His statement was made in answer to a reporter's question if changing international situations had caused the President to alter his belief, stated in 1939, that the U. S. could and would stay out of the war.

Navy Secretary told his press conference reports that Navy vessels were engaged in convoy duty were "absolutely untrue," and said reports that the Navy had lost lives, material and equipment or had been involved in any encounter with belligerent craft, were "most decidedly" not true.

Foreign Aid

Acting Secretary of State Welles announced Russian requests to buy strategic materials had been received and brought to the attention of the proper Government officials. Mr. Welles also said that the U. S. was under consideration a plan to relax export restrictions on Russian commerce to permit the flow of war materials to that country. He also announced U. S. and North African French officials have arranged a plan calling for continuous movement of two ships carrying tea, sugar and other food to Africa and two carrying

In spite of very rainy weather and muddy roads business men and farmers enthusiastically devoted much of their time last week in visiting farmers over the county to determine if they were interested in selling milk to a condensary.

This survey on 1,402 farms showed a total of 4,596 cows and heifers on the farm. As a further indication of interest this group reported that if the market was established that within three years between 5,000 and 6,000 cows would be available. This can be done very easily by saving heifer calves and not having to buy additional cows.

The survey also revealed the fact that Chilton County farmers do not expect to buy feed for their cows. A total of 4,599 acres of perennial legumes or slightly more than 1 acre per cow will be available for hay and temporary grazing by this fall.

As a further indication that dairying is being developed on a sound basis in Chilton County, the survey showed a total of 9,320 acres or slightly more than 2 acres of improved pasture per cow. This will be materially increased this fall, as many farmers have already expressed an interest for seed and fertilizer for their pastures. Another highlight of the survey is the fact that 918 farmers stated they were able to control biteweed on

More Millions For Coosa - Alabama

Announcement by the War Department that an additional sum of $24,675,000 will be spent upon the powder plant at Childersburg is especially interesting as emphasizing the purpose to develop more fully what has been termed the industrial center of the South. This center, which parallels the Coosa River in Alabama.

The addition to the Childersburg plant will run the cost of that vast enterprise to almost a hundred million dollars, while many additional millions are going into the shell plant at Talladega, the powder bagging plant at Anniston and it is certain that other millions are to go into a shell-loading plant, the exact location of which has not been determined but which undoubtedly will be somewhere on the Coosa.

The conversion of this Coosa River area into one of the chief manufacturing centers of the nation adds great emphasis to the importance of fully improving the Coosa, as the United States Army engineers have proposed. These huge military plants will not only need the great power resources that will be developed under the plan of river improvement, but will need the facilities for navigation that are being developed.

During this time, line no doubt the minds of the members of the Federal Power Commission in Washington as they recommend that at the board of engineers that the power facilities on the Coosa River in order that needs may be met. That the recommendation is being concurred in there seems to be the logic of events making for complete improvement of the Coosa system, navigable, with power plants along its upper of the Etowah River. Wetumpka on the Coosa and navigation made available from Rome to Mobile, with flood control made available for all the lands along the river, that are in need of this protection. (Hadden Times).

Another Country-Saver

Mr. W. W. McCoy, a communist, has announced he will run for Governor. He submits a 11-point platform which when boiled down amounts to this:

A tremendous increase in the operation of the state government through the payment of old-age pensions of $300 a month, raising the salaries of school teachers—all teachers, "mind you"—to a minimum of $100 per month for a full nine-month term; free textbooks to all the grades of the public schools. Those three propositions alone would probably add about $50,000,000 a year to the state budget. It would raise that tremendous over-burdened rate on the cost of automobiles from $3 a year; (2) absolutely abolish all sales tax; (3) raise the homestead exemptions to $2,500, 00 and make it apply to county and municipal taxes as well as state taxes. Ever so often in the life of every state we have these earnest and sincere visionaries. They mean well, and are wholly impractical, and lack of information is what causes them to offer fantastic remedies for admitted evils. It is useless to argue with such mentalities.

Mr. Broyles' announcement for Governor upon this typical "country-saver" platform, will cause a mild ripple of amusement throughout Alabama—Wetumpka Herald.

George Ellis Praises Centreville Road

Our townsman, George Ellis, finds more than ordinary interest and satisfaction in the newly paved highway from here to Centreville.

Before he retired from active business pursuits, Mr. Ellis served 12 years as County Commissioner in the upper district of Bibb County while he lived at Piper. In that official capacity he had supervision over the roads in a large area of Bibb County that is close to Montevallo. Among these roads was several miles of what is now the new paved Highway No. 25.

"I drove to Centreville Sunday to see the new road," said Mr. Ellis. "It is a beauty. When I was Commissioner I had a great interest in that road which I envisioned as some day becoming a connecting highway between Montevallo and Centreville, and a part of our State road system. I am glad to see it has done that. I recall making several trips to Montgomery in the

NEVER AGAIN...

(Says Grover C. Hall, Jr., in his Capitalism Column in Alabama Journal.)

This column will never again use the phrase "defense production" or "national defense" or any of its silly, asperating variations. These terms are frauds, a snare and a delusion. It's "war production" and "war preparation."

THEY "FADE OUT"—

Wake up Alabama, (the News Magazine), and trot us out some more candidates for Governor. It has been several weeks since you held one up to the public gaze. In fact most of those who have been mentioned have faded out of the picture—Albertville Herald.

THE "MURPHY" COUNTY—

The Baldwin Times has coined a phrase that may grow famous. The Times calls its county—"The Spudary of the Nation"—Anniston Times.

LULA BAKER, COLORED

Lula Baker, colored, a cadaver, who died last week had educated 22 negro orphans. Eleven of which she adopted, sent them through high school and eight of them through college by washing. She never had any children of her own; first child was adopted in 1900 and the last in 1936. A devout Christian, she died Sunday.

She certainly did her share for her race.—Collinsville News Era.

AS DEKALB GOES—

We notice by the Fort Payne Journal, that DeKalb County is in the Graves for Governor column. Well, if DeKalb goes for Graves that will about make the whole state that way. Pretty safe bet anyway.—Sumter County Journal.

THE BLESSED—

An appreciative reader sends us the following bit of wisdom: "Blessed are they who do not expect the editor to know everything but tell him whenever an interesting event occurs in which they are interested, for they shall have a better newspaper in the town. Blessed are they who do not think they could run a paper better than the editor runs it—yes, thrice blessed are they because there are so few of them in the community."—Southern Star, Ocala.

WHY ADVERTISERS CAN SELL IT FOR LESS

Regular newspaper advertisers can sell their service or merchandise for less money because they sell enough more in the same time to offset the sales costs on an otherwise fixed overhead. These sales costs, and other regular expenses of doing business. These expenses are as regular as day and night, and are just as much on a few sales as they are on many sales in the same period of time. The non-advertiser can not make as many sales in a given time as the advertiser but his certain head the same. So he must ask a higher price or offer inferior goods at the same price.—Samson Ledger.

THE KNEADY—

Here's a good one from the pen of some newspaper editor. It's obvious that a weekly newspaper editor wrote in addition to the fact that a daily newspaper would have probably had a typewriter.

"It is reported that one of the fastidious newly-married ladies of this town kneads bread with her gloves on. This incident may be somewhat peculiar, but there are others. The editor and circulation manager needs bread with their shoes and pants on, and unless some of the delinquent subscribers of this old rag of freedom pony up before long, they will need bread without a darn thing on, and this burg is no Garden of Eden in the winter time."—Haleyville Advertiser-Journal.

SELLING OUR TOWN—

A local man recently returned from a cross country trip. "The thing I liked most," he said, "was how little many people in many of the towns, and how little they try to sell to strangers. Each town we stopped at on our trip we would ask the filling station man what were the chief points of interest in his town. Most of them replied by saying that there wasn't anything of special interest about the town that they knew of. On a number of occasions on talking later to others we discovered that there were some very interesting things about the town that we wouldn't have missed for anything. The experience gave us the idea that most every tourist is interested in seeing the interesting things of the town that he passes through. Local citizens of a town should see interest of this highway in the early years of its planning."

Mr. Ellis is now retired from active at his home here with an occasional visit to someone of his favorite "fishing holes" for a day or two at a time.—Montevallo Times.

FUNDAMENTAL FACTS AND FANCIES

Compiled and Arranged by JOHN W. MAHAN

Introductory

In compiling and arranging the material in this volume, the first thing on my mind was to give a brief, but comprehensive view of the origin and development of the universe, the earth and man, in a clear, concise, panoramic arrangement that could be grasped and understood by the average person. Accepted facts have been given when available and when fancy is allowed to have play it has been the idea to hold it within bounds of reason.

The average person has been somewhat hazy in his mind concerning a number of the subjects mentioned herein and the white light of Truth is needed to clear the situation and dispel the clouds of fancy and superstition that have harassed him so long.

Some of the thoughts and ideas advanced are revolutionary, but when considered in the light of present-day knowledge and information, they will be found reasonable and doubtless, acceptable to the whole.

No attempt has been made to cover the subjects at length, but the idea of brevity, though comprehensive, has been kept in mind. A fuller study of them may be followed with interest, profit and satisfaction.—J. W. M.

The Universe—Its Vastness

The finite mind of man can hardly begin to conceive and comprehend the vast, illimitable expanses of space covered by the term "universe." Early conceptions were vague and circumscribed and mankind was slow in discovering and determining what is today, common knowledge. And, while we have advanced a long way and can boast of what we know concerning the movements of our own planet and those close by, we still have plenty of space out beyond us to give our minds food for thought in our efforts to view and comprehend its wide expanse.

Astronomy is the science which tells of the heavens above us and of the worlds out beyond the little ball on which we live. Even the casual study of that subject will cause us to realize that, in comparison with that part of the universe we can see with the naked eye alone, we are but a very small showing indeed. However, to us, our earth and its nearby neighbors of our Solar System are the most important parts of the vast expanses of the whole universe.

Early Beliefs

Man, in his early ages of development, studied the sun, moon and stars without the aid of instruments of any kind and was deeply impressed with them, considered the earth as the center of things and all the other planets as adjuncts to it. In gazing up at the sky studied with the twinkling stars man formed the impression that the firmament was a vast dome spreading over the earth and resting on the buttermost edges. He believed the earth was a great flat, stationary disk and that the sun, moon and stars traversed the heavens above it. As he watched the sun and moon throughout the year the four seasons, spring, summer, autumn, and winter, were evolved and he learned from experience when to plant his food and feed crops and gather them for storage against the needs of winter. At the same time he tried to keep in the good graces of the powers he supposed ruled the seasons and gave the growth, increase and final harvest. The moon's changes, from new moon to full moon and its influence on material things about them was observed and considered. Their fancies led them to make for themselves gods and goddesses, to whom they appealed for help and protection. In their imaginations they grouped the stars together and gave them names of mythological beings, both human and animal with symbolical meanings. Many different religious systems, some of them very elaborate and imposing, were evolved and faithfully practiced. The Zodiac, with its supposed influence on man and beast, was worked out and its signs and symbols studied, its precepts faithfully observed and followed. Lack of knowledge and information as to facts that are known today caused them to be superstitious and fearful.

Discoveries by Astronomers

From the time in the early history of man, when the shepherds in tending their flocks at night studied the stars, that every tourist who indicates a de-business. He spends most of his time trying to see the interesting things of the town gets an opportunity to do so. It is possible that long association with the things a town has to offer, the local residents to cease to think of them as interesting. It is well to remember, however, that to the tourist who has never seen them they may be very interesting. Let's tell all the tourists who give us a chance the interesting points about our town.—Fairhope Courier.

with your life and the light will shine everywhere.

Often I called to see a young woman who was dying of an incurable disease. One day, after having prayed, at her bedside, the father of the sick lady remarked in a tone of bitterness, "Doctor, that poor little child of mine has done nothing wrong and she does not merit to suffer this way?" I happened to know the father. His face and very appearance, indicated the life that he had lived. I looked him in the eye and replied, "The Lord thy God is a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the father upon the children to the third and fourth generation of them that hate me." At the sound of the Holy Word, the man's eyes dropped to the floor and then I said as kindly as I could, "Brother, had you ever occurred to you that this poor child suffers before there were sinners among her ancestry?" When we know what sin will do for the body, the mind and the soul of those who come after us, we should be careful about our transgressions. There is no problem in suffering, it is the seed of sin, but there is a tall mystery when we think of thinking men and women being sinners.

Growing in the waters of many of the Western seas there is a beautiful little flower that is gaudy and dainty, and that appears attractive to the denizens of the sea. These Anemones are brilliantly colored and the fish will swim up to them to admire their beauty. As soon as the fish come near this flower monster will thrust out a thousand threadlets of poison and the poor fish will drop dead to the bottom of the sea to fertilize the roots of these attractive plants. In like manner there are many social evils today that have the appearance of beauty and harmlessness. Young and old advance into them to receive social poison that kills the soul. Beware of the devil's Anemones.

One morning Jenny Lind, unobserved, entered the audience of Father Taylor in Boston. The pastor did not know of his distinguished visitor.

and that day he paid a glowing tribute to the power of music as it was expressed from the lips of Jenny Lind. While she feasted on the words of commendation, a tall man sat on the pulpit steps arose and asked of Dr. Taylor if he had ever heard of any one dying while attending the concert given by Jenny Lind and coming from there to heaven. The old preacher paused a moment and then replied, "Sir, a Christian will go to heaven wherever he dies, but a fool will go to a fool, even though he be on the pulpit stairs." In our day we have a mighty close to the altar of our Father, who has sent a few foot soldiers, who ventured into the sacred stand. Because a man sits close to the front in a church is no proof that he is the personification of wisdom.

We were going on a long journey and I went to the station for the agent to prepare our tickets. After much care and study the tickets were ready, and each one was not less than a yard in length. We were to travel over many separate roads and yet all the tickets were attached into one long strip. In each ticket we found the words, "Not good if detached." Our tickets had to stay together if we made the trip. God has bound the requirements of all Christians together. The ticket to heaven has many requirements. The Commands are: "Thou shalt not . . ." Some people are so foolish as to think that they can proceed to heaven and detach the ticket that says, "Remember to keep the Sabbath day holy." Some think that the ticket, "Thou shalt not steal" can be detached from the ticket of glory. Try it brother and see what happens. In place when you present your passport to old St. Peter. Your ticket as a whole will be no good if you detach any part of it.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

A rural electrification project pushed its way into the interior and lights were placed in a home where I often visited. The inmates were so accustomed to walking around in the dark until long after the current was at their finger tips, they would forget to turn it on and still stumble around and bruise their poor faces. The light was there and yet they forgot to use it. God has pushed His program of salvation right up to the door of every human heart, and all of His blessings are at our finger tips, but like the country family, we stumble about in the darkness of sin. Oh that we would learn the art of turning on and turning off, then we would step out of the darkness into the light. Touch God

ALABAMA REGISTERS 15,000 FOR DRAFT

Alabama added approximately 15,000 to its prospective draft army through registration of the 1941 class of 21-year-olds. State selective service headquarters reported last night.

At the same time, however, Brig. Gen. Ben M. Smith predicted that approximately 150,000 who otherwise might have been available for military service had been dropped, in effect, through the deferment of all those above the age of 28.

The apparent 15,000 registration last Tuesday, compared with 350,000-odd last Oct. 16, when all males 21 to 36 were called upon to make themselves available for the army.

ALABAMA DEPARTMENT OF CONSERVATION VACATING RULE VOIDED BY COURT

Shipment for sale in Ala. of game fish, except black bass, caught in other States, will be permitted under a rigid inspection system, it was announced Wednesday by Albert Gill, conservation department director, after conference with Atty. Gen. T. S. Lawson.

This action followed refusal of the Supreme Court to review a Court of Appeals decision striking down a regulation of the Conservation Department that banned sale of out-of-State game fish. The courts held, in a case originating in Geneva County, that the regulation was an encroachment upon the legislative power, and that it would take an act of the Legislature to do what was sought to be done.

ISOLATION OF PULLETS IS IMPORTANT PRACTICE

Separating growing pullets, from older chickens may sometimes prove the difference between success and failure in poultry. Isolating the younger birds, says D. F. King, poultry husbandman, Auburn, gives them a better chance to be raised free of parasites and diseases which are usually contracted from older chickens.

Alabama farm and home agents have been asked by P. O. Davis, Director of the Alabama Extension Service, to assist in every way possible in the aluminum-gathering campaign during the week of July 21. This campaign is part of a nation-wide drive to collect lost and unrecycled aluminum to supplement the vast supplies needed for the production of defense equipment.

Farmers and farmers' wives will be called upon to contribute old aluminum utensils and unused aluminum parts of all sorts. Anything that's made of aluminum will do.

COWS ON POOR PASTURES ARE NOW NEEDING GRAIN

Where drought has materially reduced pasture grasses it is especially important that cows be fed ample grain to hold up production at this time. Farmers realize that if dairy production is going to be expanded to six to eight per cent the heavy milking period will have to be stretched at least two months.

Further discussing increasing milk dairymen, Auburn, says that provision production F. W. Burns, extension must be made now to provide for this winter two tons of hay per cow or one ton of hay and three tons of silage.

NOW IS PROPAGATION TIME FOR MUSCADINE

Farmers are finding that the easiest and quickest way to propagate Scuppernon and other varieties of muscadine grapes is by cane laying which must be done now for best results.

Leaves are stripped from the lower portion of the present season's canes. These shoots are placed in trenches six inches deep, covered with dirt and straw, and pressed down with a rock. Do not cut cane from the mother vine until time of transplanting and leave tip of cane uncovered, says L. M. Ware, Experiment Station horticulturist, Auburn. Root systems will form at the joints and vines will be ready for transplanting in the Fall.

OVER-RIPE FRUIT KEEPS PLANTS FROM PRODUCING

Removing grown cucumbers, egg plants, okra, and squash from the vine will keep these vegetables blooming over a longer period of time, reports Lyle Brown, extension horticulturist, Auburn, who says that fruit must not be allowed to become over-ripe before being picked.

If fruit is left on the vines for a long enough period to form seed, the "draw" on the plants will be so great that abundant blooming will not take place. Whether all fruits of the plants are to be used or not they must be removed regularly, he says.

TEXTILE WAGES IN STATE AFFECTS ALMOST 40,000

An annual wage increase of $2,000,000 in the Alabama textile industry is anticipated as the result of the increase, Monday of the industry's minimum rate of pay to 37 1/2 cents an hour.

There are about 80,000 textile workers in Alabama, about half of whom probably will be affected by the order. The remaining already are making wages within the new scale.

Slot Machine Levy Proposed

WASHINGTON—The House way and means committee have voted to recommend excise taxes on slot machines, office and store machines and optical instruments, other than eye glasses, in an effort to raise $3,500,000 additional revenue to finance the defense program.

Rep. Cooper (D), Tennessee, a member announced that the committee had agreed tentatively on a $25 annual use tax on coin-operated devices that pay cash or tokens redeemable in cash or merchandise and a $5 tax on each machine vending merchandise, such as cigaret machines.

The committee had no estimate of the amount these levies would produce, Cooper said.

A 10 per cent manufacturer's excise tax was approved for optical instruments other than eye glasses and was estimated to yield $1,400,000.

On Typewriters

A similar tax on office and store machines such as adding and calculating machines and typewriters, would produce an estimated $18,500,000.

If this same committee has its way, every privately owned automobile in the United States will be wearing a $5 Federal tax sticker to help raise the desired $3,500,000,000 of new revenue to finance the defense program.

The committee recommended the latter levy last yesterday along with a lot of other excise taxes, designed to produce about $733,000,000 of the additional revenue and Chairman Doughton (D), North Carolina, suggested that "tinkler" receipts for the auto tax might be sold through post offices.

Another committee recommendation likely to effect a broad section of the population was that a five per cent tax be imposed on all passenger transportation fares over 35 cents, whether by rail, water, air or bus.

Yield from the new excise taxes, plus returns from increased previously recommended in individual income, corporation, excess profits, estate and gift taxes, would account for approximately $3,315,000,000 of the revenue sought.

Soft Drink Tax

As one means of raising the remaining money the committee today looked for a way to tax soft drinks without increasing their retail prices.

The treasury estimated that one-cent taxes would yield about $132,500,000 additional.

Apart from the use tax on automobiles, yachts and airplanes, the committee tentatively recommended a 7 per cent excise tax on the sale price of new automobiles which the treasury estimated would produce about $79,900,000. It was contended the tax also would help to reduce competition for the decreased output of pleasure cars and thus help offset inflationary effects of the defense spending program.

The committee agreed also on increasing the tax on liquor from $3 to $4 a gallon and boosted the tax on wines substantially. It refused, however, to raise the taxes on beer, tobacco or gasoline.

On Telephone Bills

Given tentative approval were a five per cent levy on all telephone bills, 10 per cent on jewelry, watches and clocks, sporting goods, trunks and other luggage, phonographs and records, musical instruments and photographic equipment.

The tax on refrigerators and air-cooling equipment and on radio sets and parts would be boosted.

ALABAMA WATERWAY PROJECT PREDICTED

BIRMINGHAM, — Representative Frank Boykin (D) Alabama, forecasts development of the Coosa-Alabama navigation, flood control and power waterway from Rome to Mobile as a project recently.

He said the system would aid national defense and was more likely than the St. Lawrence waterway project now under consideration.

Boykin said Alabama ranked first among Southern states in defense industries and orders and would continue to be in the van of states producing defense materials.

PEACH DRYING PROGRAM LAUNCHED IN ALABAMA

State and county workers of the Alabama Extension Service are urging farm families in each Alabama county to dry a large supply of home-produced peaches for use during the winter months.

Several years ago it was thought necessary to dry fruit on a stove but Dr. C. L. Isbell, professor of horticulture, Alabama Polytechnic Institute, has found that a galvanised roof exposed to the sun, gives about the right temperature for properly drying fruits and vegetables.

Lavada Curtis, extension specialist in food preservation, is at present advising all agricultural workers in the state on the importance of dried peaches in the diet.

At Florida on Masonic 24, June 24, with 12,500 present, there was an accident or fatality to mar the day.

91 YEARS OF PROGRESS

A Historical Tour of the Louisville & Nashville R.R.

THE CHANGE OF GAUGE

Many things of great significance occurred on the Louisville & Nashville in the '80's. Milton H. Smith, vice president and general manager, was elected president on June 11, 1884, at a time of crisis in the Company's affairs. On October 5, 1886, when the tension had lessened, his title was changed to vice president and Eckstein Norton became president. Mr. Smith again became president on March 9, 1891, and so served until his death in 1921.

The L. & N. bridge over the Ohio River at Henderson, Ky., was completed on July 13, 1885, permitting a more rapid interchange of the raw materials of the South and the manufactures of the North. Another epochal event was the change in track gauge on May 30, 1886. Some 2,000 miles of L. & N. track, 300 locomotives and 10,000 pieces of freight and passenger equipment had their gauge lessened from five feet, the gauge of most southern roads, to four feet, nine inches, the prevailing gauge of most northern lines. This task was completed in one day. Ten years later the distance between the rails on all American railroads was standardized at four feet, eight and one half inches.

In July 1884, the L. & N. built the Birmingham Mineral Railroad, an 11-mile line to Red Mountain, mighty reservoir of iron ore. From this modest beginning evolved the Company's many miles of track in the Birmingham District, a vast network serving 13 different coal and iron companies as early as 1887. Such construction gave impetus to the development of Birmingham and in 1886-1887 it enjoyed phenomenal growth; such progress encouraging the L. & N. to expand $134,163.95 for a new depot there in 1887.

In 1882, the first woman ever to work for the railroad became secretary to the assistant general freight agent at Louisville.

CAPABLE HANDS HOLD THE REINS!

DIXIE'S wheels of defense are turning at a tempo never before equaled. To the numerous factories, military bases, and the public at large, quick, dependable telephone service was never more important than now.

Providing and safeguarding this service in these fast changing times is a tremendous task.

Southern Bell of necessity is a big organization with thousands of highly trained telephone veterans who have met and mastered many emergencies.

About 10,000 new telephone recruits, added during the past two years, are being trained by this experienced army for important positions on the telephone firing line, and more are being added daily.

In all, a combined force of 25,000 workers is rushing telephone expansion to meet the South's ever-increasing demands. Speeding up the delivery of supplies are four huge telephone supply bases, located within overnight reach of every major industrial and military center in the South.

This army of loyal telephone men and women is working in harmony to expand and to safeguard the lines of telephone communication throughout the South.

CHAPTER I

This was the crisis—the climax of all that long war. Here they sat, these men who had fought a common enemy for so long: Dusty King, who, with the hoofs of countless cattle, had carved many a Great Plains trail deep into the short grass; young Bill Roper, who had begun following those trails with Dusty King before he was big enough to hold a horse; and old Lew Gordon, Texas man, whose wild marketless herds had been the roots of fortune.

Dusty King and Lew Gordon constituted King-Gordon, the famous partnership that had developed with the great cattle trails; until now their many brands marked far-scattered herds beyond estimate. They were here because of tomorrow's auction of land leased under the hammer would go the grazing rights on the Crying Wolf Indian lands—those miles and miles of stirrup-deep grass that King-Gordon wanted, and that Ben Thorpe had to have.

It was curious that their long war with Ben Thorpe should have met its true climax here. The three in this room understood that the outcome would rest upon what the two older men decided here. Possession of the Crying Wolf meant dominance in the north to King-Gordon, or to Ben Thorpe; there was no longer going to be room for both.

"This is an old fight, Lew," Dusty King said. "It goes back as far as that first time you backed me with a little herd, to see if I could make it through to Abilene. Don't hardly seem like we better draw back now."

Lew Gordon stirred, swaying his shoulders imperceptibly, like a stubborn bear. "Credit's going to be terrible hard, this coming year," he said at last.

Dusty King seemed to sprawl a little more loosely, as he was playing poker in a way of his own. Swagging, easy-going, spendthrift—he still was a man who believed invincibly in himself.

"I passed Ben Thorpe in the road today," he said. He was looking mighty prosperous. I bet he weighs two hundred and twenty-five pounds now, with his stomach pulled in."

"His backing is terrible strong," Lew Gordon said, his eyes on the floor.

No one knew better than Lew Gordon that Dusty King, in tackling the impossible a hundred times, had a hundred times shown the way for the rest. But Gordon remembered too the poverty of the cattle-poor days before any outlet was found for Texas beef. To risk all they had won, in a single slashing stroke at a little more loosely, as he was playing poker in a way of his own. Swagging, easy-going, spendthrift—he still was a man who believed invincibly in himself.

"You know why Ben Thorpe's strong," Dusty King said. "And you know how he got his start. We know why it is that so many Texas outfits are found in Ben Thorpe's hands, and how many different ways he's found to jump down on little lonely Texan cowmen and leave them broke or dead. And we know what showed for a moment behind Dusty King's eyes; but his voice was low and monotonous as before. "Thirty cents be damned," he said.

Lew Gordon looked at him for a moment more. How deep you figure to go?"

"Get the land," Dusty King said. "Ben Thorpe is liable to go crazy and bid his head off."

"We're looking down his throat," King said for the second time. "The least the deputy commissioner can accept is drafts on Kansas City. Ben Thorpe hasn't realized the value of the land. We'll catch him short and force him off the board."

"At what cost to ourselves?" Gordon demanded.

"At all costs," Lew Gordon shook his head. "Maybe thirty-five cents an acre."

Dusty King's voice rose explosively for the first time. "Thirty-five cents," he echoed. "Thirty cents, or seventy-five, or a dollar? Get the land!"

Lew Gordon sighed, and he looked like a man who was weary and old. "You want that land," Gordon said, "even if—"

"At all costs," Dusty King said again.

Gordon looked his partner in the eyes.

"Go in and bid!"

Swinging down the board walks of Ogallala in the cool spring sunlight, Dusty King and Bill Roper looked a whole lot alike. The more than twenty years difference in their ages had not changed Dusty King's loose-jointed swagger, the rakish cock of

INSTALLMENT 1

THE STORY AND THE AUTHOR—many metropolitan writers of western fiction, he knows that part of the country intimately, and can set it on paper without losing much of the freshness and feeling of the plains and mountains. He can describe a vicious fumble so graphically you can run a crooked one, nor a square tickle where he could play a mean one; it's a long time since he rode all night with his rifle in his hands, but Lew, if he isn't stopped—there's plenty he can hire to do his dark-of-the-moon stuff now."

"Dusty," Lew Gordon said, "we've blocked him every way we could."

"That's why he'll get you, and me too, in the end."

Again the silence closed, with behind it the perpetual bawling of the cattle, far off in the spring night. Dusty King said casually, "Cleve Tanner's here."

Bill Roper saw Lew Gordon's eyes flick up to look at Dusty King. "Cleve Tanner?"

"Here in Ogallala."

"What the devil's the meaning of that?"

"Cleve and Walk Lasham are the only two of Ben Thorpe's men that raided the cross timbers with him in the old days; the only two he can really trust, now."

"It's natural that Walk Lasham should be here," Lew Gordon conceded, "but Cleve Tanner, all the way up from the Big Bend—"

"Shows you," Dusty King said, "what store they set on the Crying Wolf lands. Ben Thorpe is sold mighty deep into next year's delivery. Already he's committed for more northern-fed cattle than he can handle. In the fifteen years since then, Bill Roper had learned guns and the cowman that through Ogallala hailed Dusty with comradeship and delight; so that his progress was that of a celebrated character, already famous. The other half—they were Ben Thorpe men—seemed not to see him at all. It was hard to tell which tickled Dusty King more—the warmth of his many friends, or the bitterness of his innumerable enemies."

Now, as they made their way down the muddy street, before the false-fronted wooden buildings, half the crowd that thronged Ogallala hailed Dusty with comradeship and delight; so that his progress was that of a celebrated character, already famous. The other half—they were Ben Thorpe men—seemed not to see him at all. It was hard to tell which tickled Dusty King more—the warmth of his many friends, or the bitterness of his innumerable enemies."

The bidding for the Crying Wolf lands was being held in a disused store, and here the sidewalk and half the street were filled with knot-groups. Through this crowd Dusty King and Bill Roper waded. Dusty trying to look like something bewildered, from the tall country. Beside the door was posted a handbill in black type, giving dust and notice of the auction of leases, and Dusty stopped to study this with a grave empty face, as if he had never heard of it before.

"Mr. King," somebody said, "they're waiting for you, fully an hour."

Dusty looked blank. Then he clutched his hat to his head in a startled way, and rushed inside with a clownish representation of haste.

Within, the crowd of plains-country men—bronzed men, saddle-faced men, sometimes bearded men—gave way as King, followed by Bill Roper, shouldered his way to the back of the line.

"Is this the place," King asked, "where the feller is selling the horse?"

The deputy commissioner took his feet off his table. "The sale was supposed to start at two o'clock," he complained.

A little tribute, there. The commissioner—perhaps already in Ben Thorpe's pay—hardly dared start an important sale, without present his glowing, non-descript-looking representative of King-Gordon.

"No word has come from your partner at all," the commissioner said.

"He ain't coming."

Three men who sat in chairs grouped around one end of the table looked at each other. They ignored King and Roper, as hostile dogs ignore an enemy of whom they are not yet keenly aware.

The big man in the light-colored hat was Ben Thorpe—the Ben Thorpe whose far-scattered herds perhaps already exceeded those of King-Gordon. The shoulder-heavy-bodied, he was today more than ever a power feared in the cattle country—still unscrupulous, still menacing, but now of a different sort—a power that was organization, and of bought-up law.

Beside him, the tall man, lean and narrow-bodied as a slat, was Cleve Tanner; a hawk-faced man, keen-eyed, so clearly sawing that the tight skin of his jaws seemed to shine. Cleve Tanner was manager of Ben Thorpe's Texas holdings, the breeding grounds from which Thorpe's whole organization drew its strength.

The other, the man who seemed uncommonly dark, even among these sun-darkened men, was Walk Lasham. He was Ben Thorpe's manager in the north, the one of his poker-faced watchfulness lay Ben Thorpe's northern holdings, the feeding grounds now necessary to any wide operation in the cattle trade.

The deputy commissioner raised his head. "This," he said, "is a federal auction, to place by public bidding certain lands in the charge of the Indian Department, by the almost smell the smoke.

Lew King's "The Smoky Years" is a glowing, vividly written western romance which contains all the speed and colorful detail that is making it so popular today. It is his best work. Don't miss it! his old soft hat, nor the cracking ring of the spurs he was believed to sleep in.

"The trail years had leathered his face, but they could not diminish his gay exuberance; just as prosperity was unable to take from him the look of the trail. Whatever Dusty King wore, he always appeared to be wearing disreputable saddle clothes. Perhaps young Bill Roper had picked up a lot of Dusty King's characteristics in the course of an association that had lasted almost as long as Bill Roper's life.

Everybody who knew King-Gordon at all knew the story of Bill Roper and Dusty King. Fifteen years ago, at the age of five, Bill Roper had found him in the brush, a little rabbit, beside a wrecked outfit on the old trail to Sedalia. It was Dusty King who had found him there; and was Dusty King who had buried the bullet-shattered body of Bill's father beside that God-forsaken trail.

In the fifteen years since then, Bill Roper had learned guns and the cowman that through Ogallala hailed Dusty with comradeship and delight; so that his progress was that of a celebrated character, already famous. The other half—they were Ben Thorpe men—seemed not to see him at all. It was hard to tell which tickled Dusty King more—the warmth of his many friends, or the bitterness of his innumerable enemies."

"He ain't coming."

The big man in the light-colored hat was Ben Thorpe—the Ben Thorpe whose far-scattered herds perhaps already exceeded those of King-Gordon. The shoulder-heavy-bodied, he was today more than ever a power feared in the cattle country—still unscrupulous, still menacing, but now of a different sort—a power that was organization, and of bought-up law.

The deputy commissioner raised his head. "This," he said, "is a federal auction, to place by public bidding certain lands in the charge of the Indian Department, by the authority of the Secretary of the Interior and the President of the United States; namely certain lands."

He droned through his preamble perfectly; everyone in the crowd knew exactly what was involved. Something more than land was here changing hands. To hold the Crying Wolf would shut out Ben Thorpe's men in the north. But this thing was bigger than that. The two organizations which here clasped again were great powers of the trails; beneficiaries of them were whole counties of Texas mesquite grass, plains, great areas of the middle short-grass country, scores of outfits. The struggle between them had developed into a decade-long combat between men of diametrically opposed principles and methods. And now—

"This land," the deputy commissioner concluded, "is thrown into bloom. I think, gentlemen, you are already familiar with the placement of the lands. Block 1 includes, as previously agreed, an estimated one hundred sections, or sixty-four thousand acres, known hereinafter as 'Block 1'; bounded on the north by—"

Cleve Tanner leaned close to Ben Thorpe, whispered, and Thorpe nodded.

"I shouldn't think," said the deputy commissioner, "we need here a bid of less than ten cents per acre, per acre."

There was a moment's silence, and the deputy commissioner got out his silk handkerchief and mopped his head, as King now let a slow smile come to the surface of his impassive face. A curious rumble ran over the room, and the crowd seemed to sway.

"I got a proposition," Dusty King said. "Nobody is bidding on this land but just us two; nobody means to bid. Throw the whole thing in one pot and we'll bid on the works."

"I'll agree to that," Thorpe decided. The black anger in his face had submerged again, so that he was poker-eyed.

The deputy commissioner was beginning to think that a man who wished he were some place else. "If there are no objections—"

"Fifty cents," said Dusty King. Ben Thorpe's face had turned a curious color, not gray, certainly not bloodless; an odd congested color, like dark sand. "Fifty-five," he said.

"Sixty."

"Sixty-five."

"A dollar," said Dusty King.

"A dollar, five."

"Just in confidence between you and me," Dusty King said, "Mr. Thorpe can't pay that."

"I think my name is good anywhere in the cow country," Thorpe said to the commissioner.

"The deputy commissioner glanced his pen down on the table. "Gentlemen," he said, "I'm sorry to do this; but in the interests of the government, and of the Indian Department which I represent, all those bids in this auction will be accepted only as representing American gold."

"Cash on the nail?" King asked. "There was no question now about the sweat that stood out on the forehead of the deputy commissioner.

"Seventy cents," said King. "I'm already bid a dollar, five!"

"Sure; but we got different rules now. God knows Thorpe can't back a dollar, five in gold. What kind of shenanigans is this, anyway?"

The eyes of the deputy commissioner went to Ben Thorpe's face again, but there was nothing to be read there. Thorpe seemed so humbly still that it was not apparent that he breathed.

"Seventy cents," said Dusty King again in the silence. "Whoo'er up, boys—I've only begun!"

Silence again through the pack of those saddle-faced men; perspiring silence, as the deputy commissioner, dead lumpish silence on the part of Ben Thorpe. Cleve Tanner, his hands locked back of his neck, looked at the ceiling; Walk Lasham, the length of that packed room, and out into the street.

The deputy commissioner seemed melted down, unrecognizable now as the crisp little man who had opened the bidding. His face was white and set, and his eyes showed fear.

"Well?" said King.

"The Crying Wolf," the commissioner said huskily, "the Crying Wolf lands—if there are no other bids go to King-Gordon."

Something like a sigh, a general release of tension, ran through that jam of men.

Close to Dusty King's ear Bill Roper asked, out of the side of his mouth, "How big would we now high could we have gone?"

The mask of Dusty King's face broke up; every muscle in his face came into action, every tooth showed as he grinned.

"Seventy cents," King answered him.

LONDON—American occupation of Iceland will eventually relieve approximately 80,000 British imperial troops including many Canadians, who held the island against the possibility of a German attack. It was reported in London.

It was understood that the British troops would be withdrawn gradually for service in other areas.

Unofficial commentators pointed out that the move took American forces within 600 miles of the German occupied Norway Coast and that lessened material sent from the United States via Iceland might now go three fourths of the way through American protected waters.

It was pointed out that American fighter planes might now fly to Britain via Newfoundland, Greenland and Iceland instead of coming here by ship.

WASHINGTON—"I am sure the Coosa-Alabama has a good friend in the White House," Sen. Lister Hill said after conferring with the President about the proposed Coosa-Alabama project.

The proposed river development has already been approved by the district and division Army engineers. It has received the unofficial approval of the Federal Power Commission.

The Alabamian, who is a member of the Senate military affairs committee approved U. S. occupation of Iceland. "I think we did absolutely the right thing," he said. "It is vital to our defense not to let the Nazi have it."

"There are still a few automobile drivers left who will take the inside of a blind curve at 70 miles per hour," the Greenville Advocate. Give 'em time, Mr. Stanley, give 'em time. They certainly can't last much longer.

ABC BOARD WARNS BEER RETAILERS

The Alabama Alcoholic Beverage Control Board served a pointed warning on retail beer outlets today that increased patronage during vacation months must be met with increased vigilance in observing the ABC law.

The warning came from the Board's action record of June during it suspended the licenses of 10 retail outlets, and placed four other beer retailers on probation for violations of the law.

"This action was not against the rank and file of retail dealers," Mr. Dunn said, "for the great majority of the retail beer outlets are being operated in a commendable manner. This action was against the minority of dealers who refused to heed the warning of the Board and our Committee that they must operate clean, inviting places and maintain order."

CONSUMERS ASSURED NO SHORTAGE OF COAL EXISTS

WASHINGTON—Consumers were warned today against being panicked into buying soft coal at exorbitant prices by the threat of a shortage next winter.

Luther Harr, of the Bituminous Coal Consumers Council division of the Interior Department, said price increases of as much as 50 cents a ton are not justified and told consumers they should pay no more for their coal now than they did last winter.

"Reports have reached this office," he said, "that consumers are being asked to pay unreasonably high prices on the basis that there will be a serious coal shortage in the fall. I wish to emphasize that on the basis of present estimates, there is no reason to suppose that there will be any shortage of coal at the mines."

"Such local shortages as may occur would result from the increased burden on the transportation system of the nation in the fall. It is for this reason that we are urging consumers to buy now and store their winter coal."

CONCRETE makes driving safer — and saves money

The feeling of safety on concrete's skid-resistant surface is familiar to all. But did you know also that concrete is the most economical pavement for Alabama's principal highways? Ask us for proof based on nationwide cost figures.

PORTLAND CEMENT ASSOCIATION
Watts Building, Birmingham, Alabama
LOOK AHEAD, ALABAMA! PAVE WITH CONCRETE!

The pedestrian, unless he mends his ways, bids fair to become the twentieth century's "vanishing American," according to a new booklet on highway safety just issued by The Travelers Insurance Company.

"When the white man first set foot on our shores," the booklet says, "he was beset by many perils, not the least of which were the resentful Indians. Many a Pilgrim chest was pierced by an arrow winging its way apparently out of nowhere and many a skull was split by an unseen tomahawk. Yet the white race survived to dominate in America. Why? Because the white man recognized danger and strove to meet it. He learned to walk with the stealth of his red brother, to avoid open spaces in the forest, to sharpen his senses, to move quickly and surely. Then he taught these precautions to his children.

"Something of this Pilgrim spirit and fortitude is needed among pedestrians today. Around them are dangers, but pedestrians heed them not. Instead they cling to the out-dated idea that they can use the streets when and how they please, regarding the fact that their mistakes are punished by many thousands every year."

The booklet points out that 500 pedestrians were killed in 1940 and more than 290,000 others were injured. Of the pedestrians killed, more than 34 per cent were of those injured, 51 per cent were crossing streets against a signal, crossing between the sections, or coming into the street from between parked cars. Such figures point once more to the major role that pedestrians play in the drama of the highways. It is the need for caution on those who travel afoot.

Merrill Mills will go to England to confer on production methods. Gen. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Forces, lowered requirements for pilots of heavy bombers so that fliers with 750 hours military experience could man the ships to be built at a rate of 500 a month. The Air Force also announced experimentation with glider training for its personnel.

Selective Service
More than 750,000 men who reached 21 since Selective Service registration last October registered for service this week throughout the nation. President Roosevelt ordered 900,000 men inducted into the Army as selectees now in service finish their year of training.

Army Recreation
The War Department announced a program of stage shows at Army camps throughout the country and said civilian contributions to soldiers' welfare will be coordinated by the Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy Inc. Outstanding theatre men have made arrangements for five road shows to visit camps, using equipment built on trucks, the Department said.

Congress passed legislation designed to prevent prostitution with a "reasonable" distance of military and naval reservations.

Defense Area Public Works
Congress voted $150,000,000 for construction of schools, water works, sewers, hospitals and other necessary public works in localities over crowded by defense workers. Works Administrator for Carmody established 11 regional offices to handle the program and select projects suggested by the committee and for which the communities will help pay.

Defense Housing
OPM announced defense housing projects will be given priority assurance of availability of necessary building materials. Defense Housing Coordinator Palmer issued a pamphlet explaining how defense housing needs are met.

Materials
OPM recommended building eight new aluminum plants in Arkansas, the Bonnevill-Grand Coulee area, Upper New York State, Alabama, California and North Carolina to produce 600,000,000 additional pounds annually.

Price Administrator Henderson announced a series of conferences beginning the week of July 7 with representatives of makers of automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines, oil burners and steel furniture to get information on their needs for materials. He said allocations of essential raw materials to take care of public service essential to Civilian Welfare—such as transportation companies, farm equipment manufacturers, fire and police services, hospitals and schools—will be made as soon as amount of scarce materials are ascertained.

Food Conservation
Agriculture Secretary Wickard, Associate Price Administrator Elliott and Paul McNutt, Coordinator of Health Activities, outlined plans for community action to save for immediate or future use, quantities of food ordinarily wasted. The officials urged community leaders to check local fruit and vegetable surpluses, plan for distribution through school lunch and play ground programs to meet nutritional needs, donate surplus food, and make arrangements for preserving products not used in fresh form.

POLIO EPIDEMIC

disease shall do as little damage as possible. The disease usually begins with a moderate fever, some headache occasionally some vomiting and often with symptoms of a cold. The victim is usually irritable and complains of pain and soreness of the muscles. If your child shows any combination of these symptoms, keep him in bed, away from other children and call your family doctor at once.

If children are kept away from areas where infantile paralysis cases are occurring, and also from crowds and public gatherings, and if cases which do occur are seen and reported early, we should be able to avoid a serious epidemic of this crippling disease.

Gov. Bibb Graves, faced with new responsibilities in connection with his appointment by President Roosevelt to the national highway commission, has resigned the chairmanship of the Montgomery Housing authority. The occasion should not pass without a tribute to the excellent work Colonel Graves has done in this important post, for Montgomery can well be proud of the housing units which he and his associates have brought to Montgomery and whose construction and occupancy they assure.

It is a good job well done and many years hence these housing units will exert their influence beneficially upon living conditions in the capital city. As successor to Colonel Graves, Howard E. Pili, president of WSAFA and vice-chairman of the Housing authority was elected chair of this week. He is thoroughly familiar with all the work of the authority and sympathetic with its efforts and purposes—Alabama Journal.

EDUCATION AND THE FUTURE

It has been a remarkable fact throughout history that only educated men can be free.

All the ancient empires of history were dictatorships, though they used different names for their forms of government. The people were kept in superstition and ignorance. They existed only for the benefit of the leader. They fought—killed and were killed because they were held in servitude by men who lived only for power and glory. They were slaves because they did not know anything better, and because their poor intelligence had not been developed to the point at which they would prefer to rule rather than be ruled.

But once men began to reason for themselves and began to sharpen their powers of comprehension, the world took a step forward from its former state of crude barbarism. It was, in truth, that peace was caused by education, rather than education caused by peace. In Athens, the great city-state, peace, prosperity, commerce, and trade, developed because of the laws of Draco, the ideals of Solon, and the reforms of Pericles. Great teachers associated the public, and the influence of Socrates, Plato and Aristotle, caused the people to look seriously to peace as a way of life rather than as a novel.

Athens, however, was only the beginning. As Rome's philosophical knowledge was augmented, its years of peace also increased. India gained years of prosperity as its religious and commercial teaching was propagated. China learned the same lessons. The influence of the French philosophers caused the French revolution. Through the American Revolution, a measure of education from their European conquerors, and because of that education, they received the stimulus to break away from the rest of the world and set up their own republics. And the first American settlers were an educated, religious type who after becoming weary of British oppression, broke away from the Crown and set up their own form of government.

Not every one of these nations that through learning, achieved peace. Remnants had to undergo war. Athens, Rome, and China were destroyed. Even the United States, as well as the other nations of history had to fight, even though they had learned the benefits of peace.

Throughout history nations abandon their peaceful living in order to gain through the use of force the right to cherish peace, the liberty that they had won caused them to neglect that lesson. As a result of peace and freedom, politics and personal interests took the place of education and the people allowed their souls to fall their trustfulness to disintegrate, and their courage to dissipate. They had used education as a means to gain peace and freedom, but they did not steadfastly hold to that education to keep the peace and freedom that they had won. In fact, they had allowed the liberty that they had fought to get to cause them to lose that very same liberty.

We today in America are confronted with that very same problem. Our past education gave us the impetus to fight for freedom and hold freedom and peace, we neglected our educational system. We did not recognize that before we could get to cause them to be blind to our own failures. But now we are recognizing our failures because they are coming to light at a time in which we need the best brains and the best thoughts, and the best reasoning.

When, in the course of political history, a citizen allows himself to believe that it is best to buy votes, that it is perfectly permissible for a Congressman to act like a publicity-seeking movie star, that it is democratic for a Senator to use the power of his chairmanship to outlaw a radio columnist from the radio, then it is high time that something be done. The time has come for the re-awakening of the spirit of education which comes before the manifesting of the spirit of freedom.

True, we must grant, we have made great gains in education. We have some marvelous scientific and physical needs. We have worked out the greatest system of mass production the world has even seen. We have invented machines for brilliant and difficult calculation. But we have failed pitifully in solving our social problems. We did not educate ourselves in the fields of sociology and economics like we should have done. We evaded the social sciences, because they were the far more difficult.

TAGS READIED FOR 1942—The Kilby Prison tag plant in Montgomery is the scene of teeming activity these days as workmen turn out gleaming new Alabama license plates for 1942. This year's color scheme is orange-on-black, and letters and figures are broader-faced and more attractive. Another new angle is the prefixed number which designates the county in which the tag is issued. More than 15 tons of Alabama strip steel plates are used each year in the manufacture of Alabama tags, as well as more than 1,500 gallons of Alabama paint. Scenes at the tag plant are shown above.

Now we are recognizing the facts that we must change our educational system if we are to bring peace to the world. Our new system must be one in which leaders will be trained who will be willing to lead for the benefit of the people rather than for the benefit of their own pocket book. We must take the emphasis off the profit motive, and place it on the true values of life. We must orientate an educational system that will teach all of us, and excluding none, how to keep our peace and prosperity after we have had the courage to fight for it.

We must build an educational system that will show us the way out of our unemployment problems, out of our selfish motives and out of our personal prejudices. We must build a system that will teach us the way to the real security and the real peace and the real happiness.

And we must begin now. If we wait until after the war, we may lose our vision that we need to change. We may sink back to our former state, if we wait. And we may forget our belief in our destiny, if we decide to procrastinate.

In a larger sense, this new education will not be for ourselves alone. It will not just solve our problems for the world. It will not be just a new program for America. It will be a new program for the people of Europe today are led into war because they do not recognize the truth. They are led into hate and tyranny because they do not have the opportunities to find out the real facts. When this struggle is over, and with, we pray, a democratic victory, it will be the American task to educate the world to peace and honesty. To do this, we must first educate ourselves. And then, having shown the way to the rest of the world, we may then be able to build a League of Nations, or an international peace organization, based on vision and education, rather than on mere dreams and hopes. With a realistic education, and with an honest vision, we can be able to establish a way out of war and persecution.

It will take courage on the part of all of us to change. It will take conviction and action. But the facts of history have shown us that education can solve all problems, if only we teach the right. The responsibility is now being handed to us to teach the truth in order that we may find the way out of chaos.

Therein lies the hope of mankind.

Editor Bonnie Hand of the Lafayette Sun is getting tired of receiving so many "news releases" from Advertising Agencies and large corporations. Last week he received one too many it seems and just had to do something about it. This is the result:

Gentlemen:
"We have your mimeograph letter and story, also picture regarding the Valvoline Oil Company's president, this product being distributed by Pan-Am Company."

"Evidently you have been influenced to believe that the weekly newspapers are a bunch of dumb clucks, and sometimes I think I have about reached that conclusion myself, for so many of them use their columns to carry your advertising free of charge. Now you have even become so bold as to request tear sheets on the advertising page of the earth, which is carrying your advertising you disguise under the pretext that it is news. It's news alright, and good news to you when we carry it."

Pray tell me: if this stuff you have just sent me isn't advertising, pure and simple, then why are you, Fitzgerald Advertising Agency, Inc., handling it for the Pan-Am Company? Are you doing this because you think it is such great news? No, gentlemen, you handle this because you are getting paid for it, and I glory in the day when the weekly newspapers, which are the greatest advertising mediums on the face of the earth, will arise with one accord and demand an end to this "news" stuff that fairly insults the intelligence of the people who sit behind their desks, and fight to build a better community for their people; yes, the weekly newspapers that do more to hold the towns, in which Pan-Am products are sold together than any other institution.

When you buy an item at any other business establishment you don't expect that establishment to give you another item just because you bought the first one—do you? Well, that's just what most weekly newspapers are willing to do, but only when the initial item is purchased. Now, friend, if you will return a nice contract and advertising schedule to us by return mail we'll gladly run your news story and even send you a tear sheet for that so you may get paid by your client for that, too. We'll give your advertising the best position possible in our publication, and we'll expect a check for same when we submit proof of insertion.

In glancing through Alabama weekly newspapers this week we do not see one single Pan-Am advertisement. In fact, we haven't seen one for a good long while. Evidently Pan-Am spends its money on signs and magazines and all the weeklies get "news."

We haven't handled any advertising for Fitzgerald Advertising Agency since the present management took over, and we are looking forward to doing so. For the present, however, we'll bring this letter to a close before we get wound up and use more letters than we wish to use telling you that we are also in the advertising business for money, and not because we love you and your client.

You have our correct firm name and address, now place us on your contract and schedule mailing list as well as your "news" list, and we promise you the very best service obtainable. Your advertising will reach a large of potential Pan-Am users. Our rate is only 35c per column inch."

MANY CASES OF DYSENTERY REPORTED IN COUNTY

There have been a great many cases of dysentery, or so-called "summer diarrhea" in Chilton County during the last few weeks. This disease is caused by a germ and is spread in the same way as typhoid fever. It is usually not serious in adults, but every year causes severe sickness and sometimes death of small children and particularly infants.

This disease is easy to control if simple precautions are taken. In the first place, be sure that you use pure water, pasteurized or boiled milk and clean food which is protected from flies. Second, all discharges or feces of a person suffering from diarrhea should be disinfected with chlorinated lime and protected from flies. Third all children should be taught to wash the hands thoroughly after using the toilet and before eating.

When a baby or child becomes sick with diarrhea, keep it in bed, give it plenty of boiled water and consult your family doctor before the condition becomes serious.

STEPS TAKEN TO BOLSTER SUPPLY OF FARM LABOR

The Selective Service System has asked that local draft boards give special consideration to deferments of men needed in agricultural production and the WPA is making special effort to supply demands for farm labor.

These two steps, announces A. W. Jones, State AAA administrator, Auburn, have been taken in order that Alabama agriculture may be assured a fair share of the available labor supply to continue its defense effort in supplying increased quantities of dairy and poultry products, pork and vegetables.

Buy Coal Now

The Federal Bituminous Coal Consumers' Council appealed to the nation to buy coal now so it can be moved from the mines before growing defense production burdens the country's transportation system. There is an ample supply of the coal, the Council said, but by September 15 shortages in some places may develop unless coal is stored for the winter before then.

Army

The President asked Congress for an additional $4,700,000,000 for the Army, most of it for purchase of military goods, $400,000,000 for clothing and other equipment, $300,000,000 for the Air Force and $3,000,000,000 for the Signal Corps and $1,500,000,000 for horses. The War Department announced formation of a completely motorized and heavily armed experimental division, strengthened with tanks, with 50 percent motorized fire power than a present armored division, although with only instead of 15,550 men. The Department also announced that to bolster anti-tank defenses, anti-tank specialists will be assigned to every Army large unit to work out methods of defeating armored force attacks.

OPM announced that during June 1476 military planes were delivered to the Army, Navy and Great Britain, 142 more than the previous month and a new record. The War Department announced contracts of nearly $200,000,000 for new airplane manufacturing facilities and ordered all Air Corps Reserve Officers except those in key positions to active duty by August 1. The Army Air Force established its own Air Staff to form Air Force plans and decide on equipment and other matters without the approval of the General Staff as heretofore.

Navy

The President asked Congress for $1,285,000,000 in appropriations and contract authority for the Navy for additional ordnance, yard equipment, buildings and repairs, including $400,000,000 for defense installations on naval and private ships—anti-mine equipment, armor, etc., but the President emphasized not for guns to arm merchant ships.

Rear Admiral Robinson, "Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Ships, announced the Navy shipbuilding program is proceeding so rapidly that every available combat ship is ahead of schedule." He said the problem of labor supply has been solved and the rate of expansion is limited chiefly by the ability to obtain materials.

Ships

The President asked Congress for $1,698,000,000 for the U. S. Maritime Commission, including $600,000,000 in cash for new ships and $1,298,000,000 in contract authorizations.

The U. S. Maritime Commission announced a saving of more than 500,000 tons of steel in the building of 705 commission designed ships by construction methods not known in the pre-World War. The Commission said the greatest single weight saving measure was the introduction of welding to replace riveting so that entire ships are now built without a single rivet.

ACTION TAKEN TO HALT FURNITURE, REFRIGERATOR PRICE INCREASES

Administrator Henderson on June 27 asked 47 large furniture makers and 14 manufacturers to produce a schedule of 97 percent of the nation's household refrigerators not to raise prices further without consulting OPACS.

The furniture makers were asked also to halt immediately the growing practice of leaving prices open until time of shipment. If this system is continued, Mr. Henderson wrote, "it will upset the market and have far-reaching repercussions on the general price level. It is better for the manufacturer to refuse any customer's order which he is not sure of his ability to fill, rather than resort to the open-price method."

COTTON OIL CEILING PLAN. NED: HENDERSON WARNS

The price of cottonseed oil is receiving the attention of OPACS, Administrator Henderson stated June 27. Since last October the price of crude cottonseed oil at southern mills has risen from about 44 cents to 11.5 cents under the influence of it is believed, of substantial amount of speculative activity. After a check is made on present holdings of cotton seed oil, ceiling action is planned.

ALABAMA WEEKLY WEATHER AND CROP REPORT

The weather of the week was seasonable in all respects, with frequent and locally heavy July showers, sufficient sunshine, and temperature ranging to about 90 degrees in the daytime and dropping to about 70 in the early morning. There were showers in some part of the State on every day of the week. During the first few days the rainfall was scattered and mostly light to moderate. The remainder of the week had more general rainfall, with amounts mostly light but locally moderate to heavy. Some stations had less than half inch of rain, notably Goshua, water with .47-inch, Selma with .38, Union Springs with .26, Eufula 30 and Evergreen .28. By way of contrast, Montgomery Airport had .474 inches and Cullman .424. These figures illustrate the great irregularity of distribution of moisture over the State during the week, but most stations had between 1.00 and 2.00 inches of rain.

Corn continued to show improvement throughout the state during the past week with most reports being fair to good. In some sections reports indicate the crop as being in excellent condition. Rainfall has been ample for corn in all parts of the state with the exception of one or two isolated corners. In certain lowland areas continued rains will probably prove detrimental.

Cotton is reported in fair condition in north Alabama as fair to good in the central portion and only fair in the southern part of the state. Fields in some sections are becoming grassy as a result of frequent rains. Weather for the past week has been favorable for boll weevil activity.

The condition of peanuts is reported as mostly fair in north and central Alabama and fair to good in the southern part of the State.

Hay crops have continued to improve during the rains began and are now reported as fair to good condition in all sections.

Pastures continued to improve throughout the state and are now affording plenty of grazing. Livestock is reported as being in good condition.

Should She Use The Paddle More or Less

That's what Mrs. T. N. Edwards of Clanton Route 1 is up against. Last spring she noticed a stalk of corn that had found its way into her cabbage row. Now, the stalk has produced its fruit—an ear of corn in the shape of a complete hand. Furthermore, in the palm of the hand is placed a paddle. Mrs. Edwards is wondering if she should use the paddle more or, maybe, less.

is of the possible saving of electrical energy by the adoption of daylight saving; and

Farmers Responding to "Food for Defense" Program--Durbin

By his response to the Department of Agriculture's "Food for Defense" appeal, the small farmer of the South is proving not only his loyalty to the nation but also his common sense and his energy.

This is the point made in a statement by Marvin Durbin, FSA supervisor for Chilton County, reviewing the results of the "Food for Defense" campaign to date.

In the four states of the Fifty Belt (Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida), 51,692 low-income farmers have received loans from the FSA to buy additional stock—chickens, brood sows, or milk cows, according to their choice—with which to produce food for defense.

Loans granted in the region total $4,502,304 to date. Mr. Durbin reported, for an average of $87.12.

In this state, the number of loans granted was 21,565 for a total of $1,934,841.53.

In Chilton County, the number of loans granted to date is 300, for a total of $24,702.

"This has made possible, said supervisor Durbin, 'the purchase in this county of 36,600 baby chicks, 150 brood sows and 150 milk cows, all in addition to the stock already on hand. It is easy to see how greatly food production will be increased, not only for the market but also to enrich home diets.'

"The most heartening thing is the fact that in every case the loan application was voluntary. If any proof were necessary that FSA families are willing and able to help their country and themselves as well, it is to be found in the record of this campaign. These figures ought to inspire every American, showing that people are responding bravely and eagerly, given an opportunity."

As a result of growing home gardens under a special provision of the 1940 AAA program, 92,638 Alabama farmers provided themselves with better diets and earned $1.50 a week by carrying out this practice. The practice is being offered on an expanded basis this year.

ALUMINUM

with the duty of collecting scrap aluminum. Mayor LaGuardia has appealed to the American people to respond to his request for assistance. This is a job that must be done and must be done now.

Governor Dixon has been named chairman of the collect-aluminum movement in Alabama and he has designated to County Council for Deputies to act for him in this county.

"We desire to organize committees prior to July 15 and to give definite instructions to these committees between July 15 and July 20. The actual campaign for the collection of aluminum will begin July 24 with a house-house canvass by our voluntary committees.

There is a place in this national effort for every citizen of Chilton county.

"Let me urge you to volunteer at once in order that we may be ready to collect aluminum pots, pans, wornout articles containing aluminum and aluminum scrap of all kinds on the dates set apart for the national collection—July 24 and 25.

The Chilton County Council of Defense is depended upon to and all other citizens of this county to respond to this appeal. We are preparing to defend our Nation against all attackers. You will be doing your part, and essential part, if you join in this national effort to assemble aluminum which can be used in the manufacture of implements of defense."

Dear Editor:

As Chairman of the Chilton County Defense Council, I have been requested to organize the County for the collection of all discarded or used Aluminum that can be spared from the homes of Chilton County.

I have asked Mr. W. A. Guldge to serve as local chairman in and around Verbena; Mr. Hugh Taylor around Cooper; John Maples around Maples; (veteran) John Monroe Smith in and around Thorsby; and Dr. Ballard in and around Jemison.

The collection of aluminum ware in the city crew will aid volunteers in Clanton. A pen will be built in front of the city hall for the daily deposit of aluminum ware.

The Chilton County Defense Council deeply appreciates your usual cooperation in getting this appeal to the people of Chilton County.

Efforts will be made to bring the collected Aluminum from the above mentioned points of the county to Clanton on July 28th and 29th.

Please ask that all who can, take their discarded aluminum that they may have to the above mentioned collection centers—C. E. STAPP.

FUNDAMENTAL FACTS AND FANCIES

Compiled and Arranged by JOHN W. MAHAN

Now, as to who God is and where He dwells, is a matter of conjecture to be answered by each individual to his own satisfaction. Each person is the creator of his own God—or his conception of his God. However, He is, in the final analysis, one and the same God, and Creator.

Omnipotent

Of course, to be the creator and ruler of all the machinery of the universe, God would have to be the possessor of all power—hence, OMNI, POTENT. Naturally, our conception of the One to whom we would be all powerful and able to accomplish things far above and beyond anything finite man might attempt. 'Tis true that in this our fancy should have full play, so that our idea, and conception of His power might be sufficiently broad and potent as to be satisfactory to each individual, for, in this matter one opinion is as good as another—as no one definitely knows.

Omnipresent

It is but reasonable to suppose and believe that the Creator of the universe is present and discoverable in all parts of it—hence, OMNIPRESENT. For our comfort and consolation it is enough for us to believe He is ever present with us on our planet and in our sphere of action—the earth. That we should be able at all times to contact Him is desirable and doubtless is possible, if we attune our spirits to His and adjust our receivers to right initiative.

Omniscient

An "All-wise God" is the One on whom we wish to rely and to whom we can turn when in need of consolation and help. Each individual's conscience and intellect directs in the thought and belief of His OMNISCIENCE.

OUR SOLAR SYSTEM

It is supposed by astronomers that each of the suns in that part of the universe they have seen has a system of planets revolving around it similar to ours. In a sense, our universe is that part which revolves around our sun and is known as our Solar System.

The Sun

The sun (our sun), is the center of our system and furnishes light and heat for the planets which revolve around it.

Planets have no light of their own but reflect the light of the sun.

THE EARTH—ONLY PLANET INHABITED

Astronomers tell us that in vast ages ago our sun was spinning, flaming mass of matter and that as it whirled, a number of fragments were detached from it and became planets—our earth being one of them—the others being those shown in the list above. They gradually cooled down and in the case of the earth, became inhabitable. So far as is definitely known, the earth is the only planet inhabited.

Place in the Solar System

In the arrangement of things by the Creator, our planet, the earth, comes third in the circle around the sun, with an average distance from it of approximately 93,000,000 miles.

Composition and Probable Age

It would seem that the earth, like the sun from which it was detached was originally a flaming mass which gradually cooled down and became encased on the outside, forming rocks and soil, while the vapor around it was converted into water. The center of it likely remains hot and flaming. Geologists tell us that its probable age is something like 25,000,000 years.

The Home of Man

From the best obtainable ideas and information it would seem that the earth was created for the use of mankind as an abiding place. At any rate it is being used for that purpose, while all other creatures are dominated and used by man for his convenience, assistance and pleasure.

There has been a lot of speculation as to where man came from, what his work is here and his final destiny. The idea that his stay here is only a temporary one in preparation for his eternal stay in the celestial city, whose location was high up in the heavens above the earth, has been the most emphasized and insisted on. However, the facts learned from the discoveries of science, the information obtained thereby and the truths learned, has caused man to reach the conclusion that the earth and its environs is really his home and that his work and final abode is here.

The heavenly home in which we are all interested is, very likely, located in the atmosphere and stratosphere surrounded by the earth.

MAN AND HIS ACTIVITIES

Just how long man has been on his way up to the position he occupies today, as master of all the animals on earth, is not known. It is evident from all we are able to learn, however, that he has had a long, hard fight in overcoming the obstacles he has had to encounter; along the way. Pre-historic animals were huge and powerful and he had to be active and alert to survive.

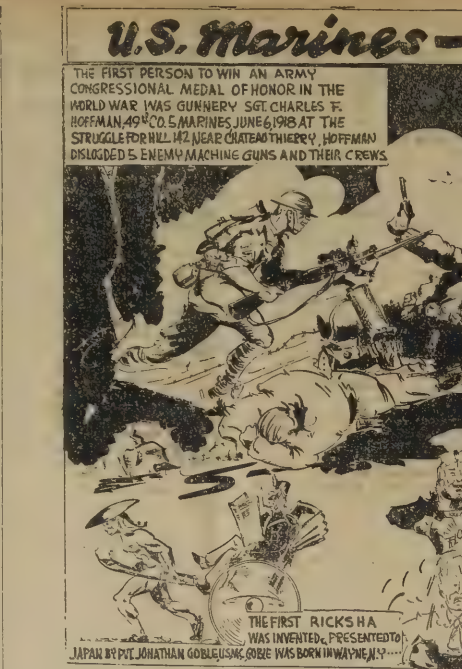

Only Animal with Power of Reason
To be able to reach the ascendancy in the struggle for the mastery over the other, and to a great number of instances, more powerful animals than he has not only had to be active and alert but has had to be able to reason out the situation to find a solution of the problem. That he has been able to overcome and conquer all the other animals on the earth is due more to his reasoning ability than to anything else.

Aspirations and Imaginations

In times past man has allowed himself a lot of latitude in the matter of speculation and imagination as to where he came from and what the Creator had planned for him to do, while here. That he has aspired to high and lofty positions and attainment is evident from the records left down through the ages. He has wanted to dominate and rule the other animals; he has wanted to be free from the fear of hunger and want and independent of the uncertainties of harvests. The stronger and more ambitious of the race desired to rule and exploit the weak for their material benefit and social elevation here. Then in order to gain rest, recognition and reward in the hereafter, they offered sacrifices, paying penance and made petitions to the gods, in order to ingratiate themselves in their favor.

Desire for Help and Protection

In the early ages of mankind there seems to have been a tendency among the weaker ones to look up to and depend on the stronger ones, for protection and help. They led them to the idea of a Super-man, finally to the conception of gods and goddesses, to whom they could appeal when in danger and distress. Systems of religious practice, with offerings and sacrifices, were established and operated, with the view of having rest and happiness hereafter.

RELIGIOUS BELIEFS AND PRACTICES

Man is naturally a religious animal and wants to pay homage and respect to some one bigger, stronger and better than himself. He wishes for some one to whom he can go for comfort, solace and consolation, with a feeling of confidence. This has caused him, down through the ages to give his aspirations and imaginations full play and plenty of latitude in evolving the numerous systems of religion that have existed and still exist.

Early Ideas

Back in pre-historic times when it was a matter of the survival of the fittest, it was the physically strong man that took the lead. Respect for the leader was gradually developed during life and continued on after death. This respect and reverence for the "Old Man" led to veneration and finally, to deification, with the result of the creation in their minds the belief in a god, which belief led to the multiplication of deities. The recollection of the power and wisdom of the "Old Man" suggested the idea of prayer and supplication to him for help and protection, with the confidence that, because of his strength and ability while living, he would still be able to help them. Thus the belief in God was established and gradually became a very important part in their life.

Druids and Natural Place of Worship

Early in the development of man's ideas of the universe was that of an abiding place for his spirit after death. This led to the belief of a place above the earth, among the stars, where his gods were located. In his worship and devotion, he naturally sought the elevated places in order to get closer to his gods. The Druids chose the wooded places and worshipped under the trees. They evolved a system of belief and worship that taught the immortality of the soul; held the mistletoe in highest veneration, and considered their "Snake Egg" the most efficient of all their protective agencies and charms. Their priests were given special training, covering a period of years.

Pagan Beliefs and Temples

The Greeks, Romans, Persians and Egyptians, as well as the Ancient Civilizations of the Americas all had religious systems that had for their places of worship vast and imposing temples in which to gather for their devotions and sacrifices. They had numerous gods and goddesses to whom they erected altars and made sacrifices and offerings, in order to appease them and keep in good standing with them. Usually, they had in their system one supreme god, who supervised and ruled the universe as a whole, while the other and lesser gods looked after the details. In order to keep in the good graces of them all and not overlook any of the gods, there was an altar in the city of Athens, in ancient Greece, which bore the inscription, "To The Unknown God." This altar attracted the attention of the Apostle Paul on his visit there and was referred to by him in his speech on Mars' Hill.

MOSES AND THE JEWS

Standing out in bold relief among all the leaders and religionists of history is Moses, who organized and led that remarkable exodus of the Israelites from Egypt to the land of Canaan. He was a wonderful organizer and deep student of psychology and human nature, never having been surpassed, even to this good day.

Early Families and Clans

It would seem from the study of Jewish history, that the earliest information we have of them is, they were nomads in that part of Asia bordering on the Mediterranean Sea, with families and clans, of which Abraham was the first leader of any note. He seems to have been a man of strong convictions and outstanding character, who was looked upon as the head of the clan and the "Father of the Faithful." Other outstanding leaders were his son, Isaac, his grandson, Jacob, his great-grandson, Joseph and his nephew, Lot.

Their Religious Ideals

In the countries, and nations about the Jews the religious systems were polytheistic—having a varied assortment of gods. Abraham seems to have been the first of any note to have advanced the idea of Monotheistic religion—having only one god—whom he referred to as Jehovah. Naturally he looked on his god, Jehovah, as being the only true god and endeavored to impress that thought on his family and clan as well as on those people about him, with whom he came in contact. His successors as heads of the race, continued to Moses, who emphasized the idea and made Jehovah the one and only god in his system.

KEEP PULLETS TO AID DEFENSE, RAISE INCOME

Keep pullets and turn them into laying hens instead of putting them on the market this summer. This advice is offered Alabama farmers by John E. Ivey, extension poultryman, who advises producing more eggs for defense purposes and to boost incomes.

There is no definite shortage of eggs now but there may be in the future unless production is increased. People are eating more eggs at home. The Army needs more eggs and large quantities are scheduled for shipment over seas. The Government recently asked poultry producers to increase egg production 10 million cases during the 15-month period ending next summer.

"We know that we can produce all the eggs needed for the food-for-defense program," Ivey asserts. "It's just a matter of having plenty of laying hens and properly caring for them."

Pike county has two new home demonstration clubs.

Alabama has approximately 2700 saw-mills, large and small.

The Childersburg National Defense area is to get 400 new FHA homes.

Alabama's Supreme and Appellate Courts have adjourned until October.

Alabama's pig production is 4 per cent less than last year. Five hundred and fifty four thousand pigs were saved this Spring.

Car Exonerated Driver Is Blamed For Most Mishaps

The driver who blames his car when he has an automobile accident is first cousin to the poor workman who always blames his tools, if statistics revealed in the latest annual highway safety booklet issued by The Travelers Insurance Company are any indication. Most accidents, it is shown, are caused by faulty drivers rather than faulty cars.

The insurance company's statisticians, after analyzing 1940's accident records, found that 91.3 per cent of all automobiles involved in fatal crashes and 95.1 per cent of those in non-fatal accidents were in good mechanical condition.

Only 810 of the 36,870 cars in fatal accidents were found to have imperfect brakes and 410 of the ill-fated vehicles had one or both headlights out. Fumblers and blunders accounted for but 440 of the fatal crashes.

The new booklet, eleventh in a series issued annually, stresses the importance of keeping the car in the best possible condition but at the same time points out that the driver should pay as much attention to his own condition as he does to that of his "friends," the booklet says. "The typical driver usually gets a glib excuse. He brags that something went haywire in his steering mechanism, a blow, or the glaring headlights of an oncoming car blinded him. But his account doesn't jibe with the best possible condition. That worthy usually finds driver's car in apparently good condition and writes into his report some mental fault on part of the driver rather than some mechanical fault on part of the automobile as the principal cause of the accident."

Their opposing interests came to a showdown when the Government announced the auctioning of the Crying Wolf land in Montana. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, press of Ben Thorpe's ruffians at the auction, getting his own boys into fights, Jody Gordon was waiting here for news of what had happened to the Crying Wolf. Bill Roper vaulted the foolish little picket gate, scuffed the mud off his boots on the high front steps, and let himself in. Jody flung herself at him, and kissed him, so sweet, so vital, so completely feminine that he wanted to keep her close to him. But she broke away again as he tried to hold her.

"How much did it cost?" "Seventy cents—gold."

Jody's breath caught. "Can we come out on it?"

"Sure we can come out on it. Not a cent less, wouldn't we turned the trick, Dusty?"

Jody sat on a walnut table that had come all the way from St. Louis, and swung her feet. The story seemed to tickle her in more ways than one. "I can just see you all," ing's exuberant mood of victory got not to be dampened. "You want and order!" he chorled. "We'll give you law and order!" said Gordon. "That puts me in mind," said Gordon. "A fellow passed me this here give to you." He handed Dusty a little twisted scrap of paper, on of the corner of something that Dusty untangled it, looked at a moment, showed it to the others. The words were penciled on it in black letters:

IN GOD'S NAME LOOK OUT

"Who's this from, Lew?"

Gordon's lips moved almost endlessly. "Dry Camp Pierce," he said. "That name, without giving what lengths of outlawry brought Dry Camp Pierce to where he was today. Rewards were offered by Ben Thorpe were on Dry Camp's scalp over half the West. He was as much as his life was worth to show himself in Ogilvie now."

"This note—"

Dusty King tossed it off with a grin. "Old Ben Thorpe is spouting off about what all he's going to do when he catches up. He says his teeth showed in his infernal grin. 'I suppose Dry Camp ought I ought to know about it.' He's right Dusty." Lew Gordon said. "Do we want to look out, as all the time?"

"We always had to look out," Jody scoffed.

"It'll be the more so now. There's nothing in the world Ben Thorpe's people will stop at, Dusty."

"Let 'em come on," Gordon said again.

"If you feel that way about it," said Dusty, "what was the idea of a sword thrust through the law we don't wear guns in town?"

Bill Roper said, "We could have thought it to an open shoot-out, five or six ago—ten years ago. Better if we had."

Gordon shook his head. "Nothing ever gelled up with guns. Dusty King pulled his hat a little on one side so that he could see the other under his chin. But said, 'He's partly right, Bill. Ben Roper isn't just one man any more. All Lasham—Cleave Tanner—any of a dozen others could step into his shoes. It's a whole rotten organization has to be busted up.'"

"Ben Thorpe downed, and they'll kill Bill Roper thought."

"Ben Thorpe down and it's only a matter of time," Dusty countered. "Of your head that you can fix things up by downing Ben Thorpe. While this organization stands in the place. Might be a good idea for you to remember that, Bill, in anything happens."

"Dusty," Bill said, "if ever they try you, by God, I'll get Ben Thorpe's last—"

"No," said Dusty. "You hear me? If they get me—you'll remember what I said. You remember we're fighting a thing, and a big fight, not just one man." His face was a peculiar, contagious grin. "Forget it, Dry Camp's monkey, that's all."

He hooked an arm through his shoulder, and went swaggering off. Ben Thorpe down, Ben Thorpe down, turned, and came back, leaned close to Roper. "If anything should happen, kid—remember what I said."

had inspected this territory and found it to contain an almost unbelievable wealth of grass. Bidding went high at the auction, but King beat out Thorpe to gain control of the land. This was a heavy blow to Thorpe who needed the pasture for his herds.

Into their little cubicle flowed the sweet air of the open prairie sweep, inspiring with the fresh smell of the new grass.

She said, "Tell me about your new job."

"It isn't new."

"They said that you'd be the boss of the Crying Wolf, if we got it," Jody said.

For more years than he could remember, he had been working toward this opportunity—the chance to take two years or three, with such-and-such cattle, on such-and-such land, and show that he could pay out on market deliveries in pounds of beef. But now—a million horns and hoofs didn't seem to mean so much.

Something was here—something that wasn't any place else—not on the long trail, not in the wild territory towns. He knew now he had to tell her that and he dreaded it, because she probably would think it was funny. He wouldn't look at her as he spoke, because he didn't want to see her laughing at him.

"I don't know as I'm so much interested as I was," he said.

"Why, Billy—not interested in the Crying Wolf—nearly five hundred square miles of feeder land! What's come over you?"

"I guess maybe I'm tired of riding alone," Bill said.

"Alone? With all the outfit you'll have—I wouldn't call it alone."

"I would, Grass country is lonely country," he said now, "as lonely as the dry plains. You get to wondering what the everlasting cattle add up to, in the course of a life. Then some night you know you don't care what they add up to; and you think, 'Damn fat beef!'"

"Why, Billy—why, Billy—"

"None of it means a damn, without you're there," he told her. "Working cattle doesn't mean anything, because you'll always have all the cattle you need anyway; and no long trail means anything, without you're at the end of it. I'm sick of long drive-trails, empty of you at the end."

There was a long, motionless silence; he kept his eyes on the far sand hills as presently she ledned forward to look up into his face.

"You really mean it, don't you?" Jody said.

Jody's words came very faint, and a little breathless.

"Why didn't you say so before?" He looked at her then, and she wasn't laughing. In her eyes was a light, a warm light, such as he had never seen; a warm light, a beloved light, better than sunset to a weary day-rider who has worked leather since before dawn. Timorously, but very willingly, she came into his arms; and he held her as if she were not only a very precious but a very fragile thing. For a little while it seemed that one trail, a trail longer than the Long Trail itself, had come to its end.

"Can't believe," he said at last, his lips in her hair, "you're sure enough mine."

"You'll never—all that!"

"They had one hour, there in the prairie lookout tower, discovering each other, getting acquainted as if for the first time. The sun went down in a gorgeous welter of color. The light shivered a little. "I wish Dad and Dusty would come. Especially Dusty."

"Why?"

"He has so many enemies. Some of them are dangerous as diamond-bugs. It worries me when he's due and doesn't get back."

"Dusty'll take care of himself." Bill Roper chuckled, and held her closer.

One half hour more . . .

Up from the town came a crazily ridden horse, splashing mud everywhere under the urge of spur and quirt.

"He'll lame his pony if he goes down in that slick," Bill commented. "Now do you suppose?"

The rider tried to pull up in front of the house, and the frantic pony swerved and slid, mud wide open to the sky. Its shoulder crashed the fence, taking down a dozen feet of picket rail. The rider tumbled off, ran up the steps to hammer on the door.

Roper went clattering down the stairs, pulled open the door. "Now listen, you see!"

"Bill—Dusty—Mr. King—he—"

Bill Roper froze, and there was a long moment of paralyzed silence. "Spit it out, man!" Roper shouted at him.

"Bill—he's dead!"

"Who—?"

"Dusty King's dead! Bill, they gunned him—they gunned him down!"

"Who did?"

"Taint' known. Mr. Gordon's riding here."

Bill Roper walked out past the cowboy stiffly, like a man gone blind. Without knowing what he did he walked down to the gate, and stood gripping the pickets with his two hands.

"I don't know as I'm so much interested as I was," he said.

"Why, Billy—not interested in the Crying Wolf—nearly five hundred square miles of feeder land! What's come over you?"

"I guess maybe I'm tired of riding alone," Bill said.

"Alone? With all the outfit you'll have—I wouldn't call it alone."

"I would, Grass country is lonely country," he said now, "as lonely as the dry plains. You get to wondering what the everlasting cattle add up to, in the course of a life. Then some night you know you don't care what they add up to; and you think, 'Damn fat beef!'"

"Why, Billy—why, Billy—"

"None of it means a damn, without you're there," he told her. "Working cattle doesn't mean anything, because you'll always have all the cattle you need anyway; and no long trail means anything, without you're at the end of it. I'm sick of long drive-trails, empty of you at the end."

There was a long, motionless silence; he kept his eyes on the far sand hills as presently she ledned forward to look up into his face.

"You really mean it, don't you?" Jody said.

Jody's words came very faint, and a little breathless.

"Why didn't you say so before?" He looked at her then, and she wasn't laughing. In her eyes was a light, a warm light, such as he had never seen; a warm light, a beloved light, better than sunset to a weary day-rider who has worked leather since before dawn. Timorously, but very willingly, she came into his arms; and he held her as if she were not only a very precious but a very fragile thing. For a little while it seemed that one trail, a trail longer than the Long Trail itself, had come to its end.

"Can't believe," he said at last, his lips in her hair, "you're sure enough mine."

"You'll never—all that!"

"They had one hour, there in the prairie lookout tower, discovering each other, getting acquainted as if for the first time. The sun went down in a gorgeous welter of color. The light shivered a little. "I wish Dad and Dusty would come. Especially Dusty."

"Why?"

"He has so many enemies. Some of them are dangerous as diamond-bugs. It worries me when he's due and doesn't get back."

"Dusty'll take care of himself." Bill Roper chuckled, and held her closer.

One half hour more . . .

Up from the town came a crazily ridden horse, splashing mud everywhere under the urge of spur and quirt.

"He'll lame his pony if he goes down in that slick," Bill commented. "Now do you suppose?"

The rider tried to pull up in front of the house, and the frantic pony swerved and slid, mud wide open to the sky. Its shoulder crashed the fence, taking down a dozen feet of picket rail. The rider tumbled off, ran up the steps to hammer on the door.

Roper went clattering down the stairs, pulled open the door. "Now listen, you see!"

"Bill—Dusty—Mr. King—he—"

Bill Roper froze, and there was a long moment of paralyzed silence. "Spit it out, man!" Roper shouted at him.

"Bill—he's dead!"

"Who—?"

"Dusty King's dead! Bill, they gunned him—they gunned him down!"

"Who did?"

"Taint' known. Mr. Gordon's riding here."

Bill Roper walked out past the cowboy stiffly, like a man gone blind. Without knowing what he did he walked down to the gate, and stood gripping the pickets with his two hands.

She said, "Tell me about your new job."

"It isn't new."

"They said that you'd be the boss of the Crying Wolf, if we got it," Jody said.

For more years than he could remember, he had been working toward this opportunity—the chance to take two years or three, with such-and-such cattle, on such-and-such land, and show that he could pay out on market deliveries in pounds of beef. But now—a million horns and hoofs didn't seem to mean so much.

Something was here—something that wasn't any place else—not on the long trail, not in the wild territory towns. He knew now he had to tell her that and he dreaded it, because she probably would think it was funny. He wouldn't look at her as he spoke, because he didn't want to see her laughing at him.

WOMEN SET HIGH RECORD CANNING, DRYING FOODS

Over 9,000,000 quarts of fruits, vegetables and meats were canned and over 92,000 pounds were dried by members of Alabama home demonstration clubs last year, reports Etna McCaugh, extension home demonstration agent, Auburn.

Total value of these foods is estimated at $3,614,624.

"Canning budgets were filled by 12, 624 of the 15,000 farm families on the canning budget plan; 30,000 received instructions from local extension workers concerning budgets. Demonstrations in canning, gardening and nutrition are being stepped up at present by home and county agents and indications point to an improved record this year," says Miss McCaugh.

"In this time of national emergency the health of all the people is one of our gravest responsibilities," declares O. Davis, director, Alabama Extension Service. "Only a nation of healthy people can be strong. And people are strong if they are adequately fed."

PLANT GARDEN NOW FOR BEST RESULTS IN FALL

Now is a good time to plant a fall garden and many Alabama farmers have already selected and prepared a good piece of land for this purpose.

C. L. Isbell, experiment station horticulturist, Auburn, advises the use of bottom land for fall gardens but says that if upland must be used, select a rich, fertile area that contains plenty of humus. If weeds are prevalent the land must be turned, prepared, fertilized and kept harrowed until a rain. Plantings can then be made, distributing the soil as little as possible.

A good gardener will plant a complete new garden during this month by planting more beans, corn, collards, cucumbers, okra, sweet potatoes, rutabagas, spinach and tomatoes. Fall gardens must be well protected from insects by proper dusting with derris and other insecticides.

YET TIME FOR FARMERS TO EARN COTTON STAMPS

Farmers who signed intention forms to reduce their cotton acreage under their 1941 allotments to participate in the Supplementary Cotton Stamp Program may be eligible for cotton stamps even though plantings were made up to the full allotment.

A. W. Jones, State AAA administrator, said that producers may become eligible to receive cotton order stamps by reducing acreage under their allotments before the plants form bolls or 10 days after receiving notice of the amount of acreage seeded to cotton. Those who did not declare intention of participating in the program before the deadline of June 15 cannot do this.

Home Demonstration News

MISS MATTIE JO BARBER, County Home Demonstration Agent

Chilton County Home Demonstration Club women say it is no flight of fancy to say there is real joy and satisfaction in seeing clothes emerge from laundering clean, fresh and gleaming. In order to accomplish the desired results and to help others get pleasing results from their efforts they have been discussing the principles and procedures of home laundering at their club meetings during the month of June.

Mrs. Minnie Walker of Alpine Club made the following statement: "I did not know how much easier washing could be until I attended Leadership School at Clanton in March and Miss Catherine Haynes, the Clothing specialist, told us that it was not necessary to boil clothes to clean them. Since that time I haven't boiled my clothes a single time and they are just as white as they were when I did boil them."

Some helpful suggestions that the Club members offer to others are:

1. Clothes should be mended and stains removed before laundering.
2. A short soaking period in lukewarm suds is more effective than a long overnight soak.
3. The temperature of the first rinse water should be the same as the wash water since cold water hardens the soap immediately and makes it more difficult to rinse out. Lukewarm and cool water may be used for the second and third rinses respectively.

For further information on laundering ask club members or your Home Demonstration Agent.

Chilton County was represented at the annual State Leadership Camp for 4-H Club members held last week in Auburn by the following outstanding girls and boys: Eula Price, Mt. Pleasant; Henrietta Smith, Collins Chapel; Jesse A. Culp, Mt. Nebo, and Joe Earl Williams of Enterprise.

Each county in the State is permitted to send four delegates to the camp. While there they will participate in group discussions of current problems of youth. Among the prominent speakers they will hear are Dr. Rosa Lee Walston, Dean of Women, Alabama Polytechnic Institute; Dr. L. N. Duncan, President A.P.I.; Dr. F. Austin State Health Department; Miss Etta McGough, State Home Demonstration Agent; Mr. P. O. Davis, Director Alabama Extension Service.

The Isabella Home Demonstration Club has taken as its project the establishment of a community library which is to be located at the home of Mrs. B. M. Bizzell. Club members are to contribute books and magazines that they feel will be of interest to readers in the community. The Club hopes to direct the attention of their youth toward the reading of worthwhile writings.

IN MEMORY OF GERALDINE

On Monday night, June 23, at 9:30, the death angel visited our home and plucked the flower of our life, Geraldine, 70 months and 16 days old.

When she lived we had something to live for, but since Jesus has carried her home, we have something to die for. We only hope that we may so live that we can meet her sweet and smiling face in that great beyond where sad parting comes no more.

Oh, it was so hard to give her up but God needed another little angel. His will must be done, not ours.

We wish to thank those that lend a helping hand in her sickness, death and funeral. Also for the beautiful flowers that were given, do we give thanks.

May God bless you is our prayer.—Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sanders.

PATES CHAPEL SINGING TERMED A SUCCESS

Our singing Sunday at Pates Chapel was a great success if it was dismissed about 2:30 on account of rain. Singing was just getting in a good way when every body had to go. It seemed that the people were in a singing mood and that's what it takes to make a good singing. There would have been several more directors if the singing had continued all afternoon.

The following directed through the day:

B. L. Cobb, Mrs. Grover Bice, Prof. L. T. Grant, C. W. Scott, Jack Jones, G. Crumpton, Curtis Bean, Lonnie Cobb, Howard Maddox, Audrie Blevins, Marvin Davenport, Eugene Cleckler.

We are sorry to say there were some directors whose name we were unable to list here.

The following quartets were present: Liberty Hill; Alabama Four and Oak Grove.

Pianists for the day were Mrs. Howard Roper, Miss Lowery, Mrs. Earl Maddox, Mrs. Grover Bice, Mrs. Marvin Davenport, and Mrs. Jewel Coker.

Prior to the national defense program one out of every 20 trucks operated on the public highways was owned by the federal, state and local governments. Military equipment has increased the ratio of publicly-owned vehicles.

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

Confidently we like to get run of town last week for being a day with our paper than usual day honest now, it was a newer paper wasn't it? It made us feel right so many people calling up and wanting to find out what was the matter, makes us feel that maybe after all we are appreciated.

Did you ever see the like of cantenines and water melons in your life?
Saturday the town was over run with them, not mentioning the other vegetables brought in, seemed every wagon and truck was loaded with fresh country produce. Shows that Chilton County farmers know how to make the stuff . . . all they need is a few more.

Another airplane fell Saturday morning near here and the pilot was scattered up a little—nothing serious though. Imagine if a plane had fallen a few miles distance from Clanton a few years ago . . . half the town would have been out there and there would have been big headlines in all the daily papers. Now it gets no notice at all and those who did read it, did so only casually . . . airplane accidents are as common as automobile accidents.

An aged negro man was standing on the corner last Saturday afternoon.
His hair was as white as snow and his bearing wasn't as steady as once it had been . . . he was looking up at the second story of the A & P Grocery, staring, with mouth wide open for some minutes he was heard to remark, my, my, ain't that a high building.

A good friend of ours slipped off a board and got not married . . .
didn't let a soul know a thing about it either . . . we been thinking hard trying to get even with him for not letting us know something about it until 'til now haven't had any luck; well, we haven't given up yet . . . the name S. E. Scott, the photographer.

Last week when the Alabama Press-Association held their summer meeting at Huntsville the Chilton County
News and the Clanton Berry Growers Association had a big basket of Chilton County Peaches on the registration table for all to see and all to get a glimpse of the kind of fruit we grow down here in Chilton County . . . It got the big hand and Sunday's Birmingham News carried a picture of it.

CAN'T WE PULL TOGETHER?

Beginning this morning (Friday) the City Governing Body has decided that all houses in Clanton go daylight saving time.
A canvass of the city was made the first of this week and more than two to one were in favor of adopting the new time.

Electrical engineers and men high up in the nation's defense movement have made the statement that millions of kilowatt hours could be saved by this movement. These men should know what they are talking about. You do not know and I do not know, but these men are paid to know. We have to take their word for it.

Now, the will of the people in
Clanton is that we adopt new time.
Let's pull together and work in harmony in this undertaking.

Many of our boys now serving Uncle Sam quit good jobs to serve their country for only twenty-one dollars a month. They probably would rather have stayed at home on fat salaries but all we have to make sacrifices. The least we can do is to back our President, our Governor and our City Government.
Below is a letter from the Mayor and Council:

To the merchants and professional men of Clanton:
"Yesterday we made an effort to determine the will of the merchants relative to Daylight Saving Time. 37 out of 52 favored responding to the call of the President of the U. S. and to the call of the Governor of Alabama that we go on Daylight Saving Time.
"Since we feel that it is important that all citizens of Clanton use the same time, we the undersigned Governing body of Clanton request that all Citizens of Clanton adopt Daylight Saving Time effective Friday, July 25, 1941.

SIGNED: C. E. Stapp Mayor,
H. G. Heflin, John B. DeRamus, C.
O. Jones, L. E. Dieffenferfer.

Volunteers Needed To Help Collect Scrap Aluminum

Every Pound of Excess Aluminum In County Must Be Collected Now

Every resident of Chilton County today was urged by C. E. Stapp, Chairman of the Chilton County Council of Defense, to volunteer for service in the aluminum collection campaign which began July 21st.

Mr. Stapp said the Defense Council is anxious to collect every pound of waste aluminum that can be found in the county and the work cannot be done without the aid of patriotic citizens.

"The Council of Defense has completed the preliminary work preparatory to the actual collection of the scrap aluminum," said Mr. Stapp. "However, we must have the assistance of all residents of the county if the campaign is to be a success. You are vitally interested in the success of the

Fox Hunters Hold Annual Hunt

By CLARK HEADLEY

Between Cape Creek and Mineral Springs Wednesday evening and night, the Chilton County Fox Hunters Association held their annual hunt, which was termed by everyone as the "best yet".

"With hundreds of pedigreed hounds scattered from one hillside to the other, the program was opened with the Bench Show at five o'clock at which time "Trouble", six month-old pup of Mayor C. E. Stapp was judged the best dog in the show.

In the absence of R. J. (Bob) Goodie, who was supposed to be the judge, Messrs. Calvin Whitley and J. C. Machen of the Sylacauga Association were appointed judges of the show.

Nimrods from Talladega, Shelby, Bibb, Dallas, Autauga and Clay counties gathered with the local association in carrying out in unique procedure their Fourth Annual Hunt and some of the oldest and most popular hunters in the state were present for the events which lasted on into Thursday morning.

A big barbecue, deliciously prepared with camp stew and all that goes with it, was served to the attending crowd immediately after the bench show. It was stated that approximately 250 plates were served. Believing that something better than water should go with the barbecue, a 60-gallon barrel (Continued on Page 5)

REVIVAL TO BEGIN AT PINEDALE NEXT SUNDAY

A last minute announcement it to the effect that the revival at Pinedale church, three and one-half miles north east of Clanton will begin next Sunday.

Bro. J. J. DuBose is coming up and will begin the meetings. Be sure and take note of this and tell your friends. Everyone is cordially invited.

We thank Mr. Roper and Mr. Dief for this cooperation. That's what we need here—most-cooperation among our farmers and merchants.

That old man "rumor" is about again . . . Charlie Cox and family were up this week from their plantation in Baldwin County . . . Charlie could have been on political business instead of pleasure you know . . . of course, we were just wondering.

FLASH—Earl Parrish, Buster Foose and R. M. Tucker (that's me) are saving Chilton County for Democracy . . . they're attending the Convention of the State League of Young Democrats being held at Montgomery this week.

E. F. Culver of Mt. Creek pulled a new one on us this week . . . brought a five dollar William in and laid it on the counter for his subscription as long as he lives. Mr. Culver is nearly 70 years and must be some sport. Anyone who would wager that he would live five years in this day and time, whether he be 7 or 70 would necessarily have to be a good sport.

Thirteen Is No Unlucky Number For Clanton's Mayor Stapp

Thirteen may be an unlucky number for some people, but, not for Clanton's Mayor, Mr. Stapp, an ardent fox hunter and a great sportsman, carried thirteen dogs out to the annual hunt Wednesday and took more prizes than anyone present. Of course, he says he had more dogs than anyone else and besides he had Mrs. Stapp pulling for him.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS

Chilton County News will revise its Subscription List August First. Unless your Subscription is paid up in advance—or you notify us before your subscription is paid up—to continue coming to you—your name will be dropped from the list.

This has been made necessary on account of the increase in cost of production, and the probability that print paper will become scarcer and scarcer during the next several months, because wood pulp is one of the necessary materials in the manufacture of munitions for National Defense.

In re-arranging a great many names some errors will likely occur. And, if your subscription is paid in advance, and you should fail to get your paper the first week in August, Please notify us promptly, and correction will gladly be made.

Check your Name and Address now, at the top right-hand corner of this page and see if they are correct—and that your subscription is paid ahead of August 1, 1941. If it is not, mail, send or bring an amount that will pay you ahead to the Chilton County News office before next Friday, August First.

OUT OF THE MAIL BAG

Chilton County News received the following letter a day or so ago from one of the oldest and most reliable Paper Houses in the Country:

July 23, 1941

Mr. Mark Tucker,
Chilton County News,
Clanton Ala.
Dear Mr. Tucker:

IMPORTANT TO YOU

Some of our printer friends have been "put on the spot" by their customers who have given them rush orders for printed matter because the paper could not be shipped in time to suit their customer's requirement.

Paper mills are running further and further behind due to defense and government requirements. It is not unlikely that the future will bring conditions whereby PROMPT SHIPMENTS may be out of the question on some of your orders.

For this reason, we suggest that you tell your customers of these crowded conditions and ask that they anticipate their requirements for printing enough in advance so the order for paper can be placed now—and you can receive the stock in time. Of course, we will do our best to take care of old friends like you—self, however, conditions under which we have no control, may prevent 100 per cent cooperation.

From time to time we will keep you informed of conditions in the paper market . . . and we assure you of our wholehearted cooperation as we greatly appreciate your business.

Cordially Yours,

During the last World War I paid as high as 17 cents a pound for ordinary news print paper; and it is not improbable that all grades of print paper will become scarcer and increase materially in price within a very short time as a result of the present Defense needs.

Therefore, I urge that all business and Professional people place orders NOW for the printing supplies they will likely need for the next several months. This advice is based on past experience, and you will profit by taking advantage of it.

Sincerely,

Mark K. Tucker.

Former Chilton Lady Injured In Collision

Mrs. Duke Woodson, of Martin Dam was seriously injured and Mrs. Joseph Gregory, of Tallahassee Route 1, received several injuries not believed to be dangerous, in an automobile collision on the road between Kent and Martin Dam about 10:00 Wednesday morning.

They were taken to Community hospital in Tallahassee, whence information of the accident was received Wednesday night, later confirmed by State Highway Patrol headquarters in Montgomery. The Highway Patrol report stated that the two women injured were drivers of the cars involved in the collision.

Soldier Dies In Local Hospital

Cecil J. Johnson died in the Central Alabama Hospital early Thursday as a result of taking poison. Yonnie Johnson, who was drafted several weeks ago from Montevallo Rte. 2 had been ordered recently to leave for Ft. Benning, Ga.

Funeral services will be held at Ennon church near Montevallo at 10:00 Friday morning. He is survived by his mother, a brother and a sister. Spigener Funeral Home in charge.

Uncle Sam stepped into the peach situation in Chilton County this week when the Surplus Marketing Administration sent a representative here to investigate the conditions.

Norman F. Horsey, the Department Representative has been in Clanton several days now going over the prospects of marketing fifty carloads locally.

R. M. Roper, L. E. Dieffenferfer and Crover Walker, mentioning only a few when the market blew up last week got in touch with Congressman Peterson, Lister Hill and former Gov. Bibb Graves, who kept the wires hot to Washington trying to save the peach growers of the county from losing their entire crop. Word reached Clanton Thursday that the Government Surplus Marketing Administration would pay $1.00 per bushel for U. S. No. 1 peaches. These of course government inspected, graded and packed, two-inch minimum.

This price is E. O. B. and will hold through Sunday, July 27th.

According to our figures, here is what it will mean to us.

One freight car will hold 387 bu. baskets of peaches multiplied by 50 gives you 19,350 bushels at $1.00 per bushel is close to $20,000 that the peach growers will receive for their fruit.

Mr. Dieffenferfer and Mr. Roper are lending their efforts now to getting a Government inspector here so that grading and packing can begin.

Isabella Group To Tour Florida And South Alabama

Leaving Monday morning, August 4th, some twenty-five members of the Isabella Chapter Future Farmers of America will tour South Alabama and Florida and Georgia on an extended educational tour.

The boys, accompanied by their Vocational Agriculture Instructor, Mr. J. H. Camp, plan to go to Montgomery, Dothan, Panama City, Ocala, Silver Springs, and Daytona Beach. They will return via St. Augustine, Jacksonville, Waycross and Auburn. They plan to visit agricultural centers of interest in Florida, Alabama and Georgia while on their tour.

R. L. Duffey Sets Pace For Letter Carriers In Aluminum Drive

R. L. Duffey, Rural Letter Carrier of Mt. Creek, is setting the pace for other carriers of his vicinity and the state in the national drive for old aluminum.

In making his daily rounds, Mr. Duffey collects all old aluminum pots and pans and other aluminum ware he runs across and is asking the cooperation of his patrons to this effect that they may help him to load up with this badly needed metal. Mr. Duffey says he hopes and urges that other mail carriers do the same thing.

This Week In National Defense

The War Department asked Congress for legislation to retain the National Guard, Reserves and Selectees for the duration of the emergency. President Roosevelt told his press conference that unless Congress acts the Army faces serious disintegration.

The President said no violation of contract or faith would be entailed in such extension of service, because the Selective Service Act had provided for such extension of service by Congress in the event of a national emergency.

The War Department announced initial deliveries of the A-24, a new dive bomber that can outperform those now being produced at a daily rate of 1,500 compared with 289 one year ago. Under Secretary Patterson issued a statement of Army progress showing expenditures increased six-fold in the past fiscal year.

Lease-Lend Act President Roosevelt sent Lend-Lease Administrator Hopkins to London for a new survey of British needs, and assigned two Army generals to speed the flow of munitions and food to Britain. The Surplus Marketing Administration purchased 30,000,000 pounds of tobacco, 2,544,000 bushels of corn and 75,000 bales of cotton for shipment abroad under the Lend-Lease program.

Civilian Supply The APACS announced a program to give preference over other civilian needs to repair and maintenance parts for privately owned automobiles, trucks, trailers, tractors, household refrigerators, stoves, ranges and water heaters, plumbing fixtures and furniture, hospital equipment, surgical instruments and eye-glass frames and parts.

Ships The Maritime Commission said expansion of the merchant shipbuilding program requested from the Congress would provide 566 new ships by the end of 1943. Although only one of the 312 emergency cargo ships was scheduled for delivery this year, at least 10 will be in operation by December 31, the Commission said. (Continued on Page 2)

Mark Remarks:

Mark, and Mrs. Mark, who remarks more than Mark - remarks, took a swing around the circle in North Alabama last week, meshing into the Fourth Estate's three-day confab and shindig at Huntsville and Decatur - and what a glorious time we did have. Wherever we went, before and after arriving at the newspaper offices, we found public opinion to be about unanimous that "Bibb Graves" should be elected Governor without opposition. And if there was a person attending the Press Convention who is against him, they kept mighty quiet.

I have never seen as fine crop prospects in Alabama before and everybody seems to be in high spirit in anticipation of the better times that are now just around the corner.

The Clanton Berry Growers Association sent a hamper of Chilton-Ala. berries to the newspaper folks who were assembled at Huntsville, and they ate 'em up while expressing sincere appreciation.

Thirty years ago I met with the editor of the Eighth Congressional District at Decatur, when the Tennessee Risk Improvement Association was organized. This was before a Civil War. I did have a sack of cement poured in the great development that is following. I have seen many dreams come true in the Tennessee Valley - where we live.

I reached a tree-score-years-and-a-half-old pair of socks - and that is all.

This Editor Says Elect Bibb By Acclamation

(From the Fayette Banner)
A lot of people over the state are beginning to talk of Alabama's next Governor, and the consensus of opinion is there is but one man to have that place from 1943 to 1947 and be better than the Honorable Bibb Graves.

Whether many over the state have ever supported him, or have been his personal and political friends, in the next few years, Alabama and the nation is entitled to the best business man to be had, and Governor Graves stacks up as no other Alabamian at this time.

Many states have had governors with much ability to think and do and get for their states, but friend and foe alike have long since learned that of all governors, Governor Graves stands out at the head of the list for constructive leadership and accomplishment for his state.

Alabama people, whether they have ever taken a liking to Alabama's most popular governor, they are now almost of one accord that next year it is absolutely necessary that he be put at the head of the state to render that service which the state will be badly needing during the trying years that will be ahead of the next governor.

Business men, professional men, manufacturers and laborers, all accepting as a fact that there is not a man in the state who needs to run next year, unless it is just to get before the people for some future political purpose. Only one primary will be needed for the governor's race next year, and this said in defense to all the good men who are spoken of over the state. This is no time for politics, but for real service, and if the rest of Alabama is as solid as this section, then a governor by acclamation could be had and save any feeling being aroused by having a race.

The Fayette Banner could suggest with all candor that all those who have a desire to be governor crush that spirit and enter into an harmonious drafting of Governor Bibb Graves next year, and in so doing give notice to the whole of America, for America is America in real action.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

One day Saint Francis of Assisi suggested to a young Monk that they go into the City and preach. Together they journeyed down main street and conversed with the people as they walked along. Finally they returned to the gate of the Monastery and the young man asked, "Father, when are we going to preach?" "My son," said Francis, "Our behavior has been observed. We have delivered our sermon as we walked and talked with the people." "We all know that preaching is not dependent on pulpit. If you are a good man, you are a sermon as you go along. It is possible for conduct to have more power than the pulpit oratory. We often hear it said, "What you says speaks so loudly, that I can not hear what you say." Anyone who lives beautifully, is preaching a beautiful sermon, even if words are not spoken.

I was leaving home for the day and my mother followed me to the door. As I bade her good bye she had this to say to me, "Dan, look up for your behavior today for our family will be judged by the way you conduct yourself." That day the words of my mother lingered in my mind. As Christians we belong to the family of God. As we go out each day we should look out for our behavior. Christianity will have merit only as we watch the people. Today people are not reading the gospels in order to learn how to live. They are watching you, they are watching me. What is the Gospel according to you? At the close of each day it is well for us to look back over the record of the day and see if our behavior has measured up to our faith and profession.

Paul was writing to his son in the gospel and in plain English this is what he had to say to Timothy: "When a man is in a contest game he must play it according to the rules, or else he will lose the reward." In baseball a man may knock a home run and then fail to observe the rules as he races around the track, and it is not counted. Life is like that. On the diamond I saw a man make a foul play and the umpire ruled him out of the game. He was furious and demanded of the umpire his reason for ruling him from the field. The rules of the game were produced and this man, with shame went into the pit. After all, the most wonderful contest in the world is found in the game of life. The rules that govern life were made by the One who created life. Each must play by those rules or the player loses. The man who is a law unto himself and rebels against God's law, is sure to fail because he did not strive lawfully.

Modern warfare is bringing to light many truths that we should learn. In life training camps our young men are often in great danger because they are forced to train in the dark. In the blackness of the night many of them are losing their lives because they have to march and fight in the dark. At the close of the year 1939 it was said that England lost more blackouts that year on the account of the blackouts than she had lost in the battle fields. Darkness is dangerous. The darkness of the night on the battle field is symbolic of darkness that is falling over the spiritual life of today. We are justly alarmed as we see our young life being trained in the spiritual darkness that is throughout the world. A pall of darkness has settled over our national life, our social life and even our church life. In the midst of this darkness our young people are being trained and no wonder that so many of them go to pieces in their moral standards. In our present condition our greatest need is more light.

When an emergency arises. Another and very pertinent reason for our far-seeing former executive is the after-war rehabilitation which is bound to come in that administration. No man has broader experience in dealing with war and rehabilitation problems, and he could better serve Alabama in his close affiliation with the national powers than any other. Give us Governor Bibb by acclamation and serve Alabama to the highest degree.

fastest ship construction during the last war was seven months and 23 days, the Commission said, but it now hopes to reduce the time to 4 1/2 to 5 months, with two ships completed every day in 1943.

The Maritime Commission took title to 16 more Danish vessels, and four Italian vessels under provision of the Shipping Requisitioning Act and the Coast Guard seized 15 other Italian and one German ship to be put into service as soon as sabotage damage is repaired.

President Roosevelt signed legislation giving him power to grant defense materials priority in merchant shipping space and loading facilities.

Aluminum Collection

OPM Conservation Chief McConnell announced housewives' donations of used aluminum were during the collection campaign July 21 - 29 should produce a minimum of more than 2,000 additional fighting planes. He said tests indicated a minimum of 15,000,000 net pounds usable in defense manufacture will be collected in the national campaign. Civilian Defense Director LaGuardia said State Procurement offices of the Treasury Department will direct shipment of collected material from concentration points in each State to the nearest selected smelter.

Prices

Labor Secretary Perkins announced retail food prices increased 17 percent during the last two weeks of the year to amount to 1.6 percent in the first two weeks of the month. Principal rises in the price of egg-lard, butter, pork chops and canned tomatoes, she said.

President Roosevelt told his press conference he is considering placing a ceiling on rents and on commodities and asking Congress to put "teeth" in price-fixing measures.

Price Administrator Henderson speaking at Atlantic City, said costs and prices have risen at the wholesale level and will soon hit the nation's pocketbooks. Before long, he said, "there will be more purchasing power running around hunting something to buy than there are goods available." WPA and Defense.

WPA and Defense

WPA Commissioner Hunter said total average WPA employment during the 1942 fiscal year will be maintained at 1,000,000 instead of 1,700,000 as in the past year. He said almost 30 percent of all WPA workers were employed on national defense projects in June and cuts will be made more slowly from these projects than others.

Increased Wages

The Labor Department announced weekly earnings of wage earners in manufacturing industries in May rose to a new high of $30.69, a rise of five cents since April and 21 percent over May, 1940. Hourly rate moved up to an average of 72.6 cents, a gain of 25 cent over April and 9.1 percent over the same month last year. The Department of Agriculture reported the general level of farm wages rose to the highest level in 11 years on July 1, 60 cent above the 1910-14 average.

Power and Defense

President Roosevelt asked Congress for authority to establish regional or nation-wide daylight saving time for all parts of the year as deemed practical. The Federal Power Commission reported that rainfall lessened the power shortage in the Southeast although much more rain is needed before full usage of energy can be permitted small consumers.

MOST IMPORTANT TO GROW FOOD AND FEED

Too much stress can't be placed on food and feed crops, says Director P. O. Davis, of the Alabama Extension Service, who points out that Alabama farmers can increase their food supplies by growing more products at home. "Sometimes people might think we talk too much about the live-at-home program," the extension head declared, "but I think it is true. During these times of world distress and uncertainty we must grow our own food and feed supplies if we expect to continue as a healthy nation."

Alabama's 115,000 4-H club boys and girls are taking an active part in national defense by collecting scrap aluminum and buying defense bonds.

Floyd News

Last Saturday night we had a good prayer service. Our Sunday school was good Sunday.
Last Sunday night we had two sermons in the place of one. B. T. U. The classes arranged and assigned part for next Sunday night afterwards. For next Sunday night a wonderful message. After him, our old pastor, Bro. Culpepper delivered another message. We were glad to have these preachers with us and invite them back.

FUNDAMENTAL FACTS AND FANCIES

Compiled and Arranged by JOHN W. MAHAN

Organization and Practical Plans

Moses went about the matter of leading his people out of Egypt in a thoroughly practical way. He perfected an organization in conjunction with a system of religion which has never been surpassed. That he was able to organize and hold together that band of former slaves kept them buoyed up and interested in their exodus to the land of promise, is yet a marvel. The desirability of the promised land as a permanent home, with freedom from task-masters, where they could worship their god under their own vine and fig tree, have peace, plenty and the protection of their god was held before them; the regular worship of Jehovah insisted on and carried out; these were the main ideas Moses and Aaron kept in the minds to accomplish the almost impossible task of the undertaking.

LAWY-PUNISHMENTS AND REWARDS

Rules, regulations and laws are necessary factors in the every day life of civilized man. On his way up from conditions surrounding pre-historic man and his problems, he has learned a number of things from experience and practice. Among these is that certain actions produce certain results, establishing what are termed, laws.

Early Beliefs

Fear played an important part in the life of early man; fear of the strong by the weak; fear of the elements; fear of hunger and want; fear of the anger of the gods. All these kept man in a constant state of anxiety. From experience and observation he learned that some actions caused pain and suffering, while by refraining from such actions he was spared that pain and suffering. On the other hand, he found that if he did certain things he would receive the rewards of pleasure and contentment. This gradually led to the idea of punishment and rewards.

Natural Laws

The idea of reaping what is sown, dawned on man at an early age in his development and the laws of nature were learned. As civilization dawned and authority was assumed and delegated, rules regulations and laws were developed and practiced. The rights of ownership and possession were established and social practices, with judges to decide the issues, and punishment as well as giving rewards - became the custom. Restitution and reparation in the matter of damage, with an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth and a life for a life, was established as law.

The Ten Commandments

Moses, in his negotiations for the Israelites, issued the edict of laws, from the god, Jehovah, summed up in the justly famous "Ten Commandments." While they are evolved and promulgated especially and specifically for the Jews, they are, however, a splendid foundation for any one on which to build, though none other than Jews are obligated to observe them. The idea of punishment for transgressors and rewards for the faithful permeate them, and they have been a potent influence for good in upbuilding of civilization down through the centuries, since their issuance. They underlie the laws of most all the nations of the world today.

Following this, a copy of the "Ten Commandments," taken from the book of Exodus in the Bible.

Ten Commandments (Exodus XX, 3-17)

1. Thou shalt have no other gods before me.
2. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image, or any likeness of anything that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the water under the earth: thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them: for I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me: and showing mercy unto thousands of them that love me and keep my commandments.
3. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain: for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.
4. Remember the sabbath day to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work: but the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God: in it thou shalt not do any work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy manservant nor thy maidservant, nor thy cattle, nor thy stranger that is within thy gates: for in six days the Lord made the heaven and the earth, the sea and all that in them is, and rested the seventh day: wherefore the Lord blessed the sabbath day and hallowed it.
5. Honour thy father and thy mother; that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

6. Thou shalt not kill.
7. Thou shalt not commit adultery.
8. Thou shalt not steal.
9. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.
10. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's.

JESUS AND THE GOLDEN RULE

To make a plain, clear and unbiased statement concerning Jesus and his place in world history, together with his ideas, theories and teachings, without shocking the tender sensibilities of many, would be a hard task, indeed. However, from the purely human standpoint, making an estimate of the potency of his teachings in comparison with other philosophers and teachers, should not be considered as bordering on sacrilege.

His Birth, Ancestry and Environment

There has been a lot of rather far-fetched and over-drawn mysticism taught in the past about the miraculous conception and virgin-mother birth of Jesus, which, in the light of present day knowledge and thought, has lost its hold on the more sober and sensible man of the time.

There is a desire for a more probable and practical explanation of the birth of him whose simple teachings have so changed the beliefs and practices of the world. All the beautiful touching, awe-inspiring pageantry, with its adoring shepherd, angelic choir and homage of the wise men, that has been taught credulous believers down through the ages, is wonderful to contemplate, but hard to accept as authentic at this stage of the world's knowledge of truth and facts.

An edict from the Roman authorities seems to have been responsible for his birth in the town of Bethlehem in Judea, though the fact that his ancestors were Jews and conforming to custom, had something to do with it. That his youth up to the age of 12 years, was spent in and around the town of Nazareth, in Galilee, among his Jewish kin, seems to be authentic record. All his early training was in Jewish atmosphere and under that influence, in environment steeped in Jewish traditions.

Early Training and Influence

From early childhood, Jewish youth was taught the history and traditions of the race and were thoroughly grounded in the principles and practices of their religious belief. From the records available it would seem that the mother of Jesus took special pains to give him a thorough training in the things which accounts for the Jewish color of his teachings. However, this is a tradition that he had some training in the philosophy of an order called the Essenes.

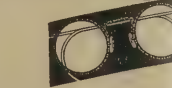

Later Ideas, and Teaching

It seems pretty generally understood that those silent years of Jesus' hidden, forty years, between the ages of twelve and thirty, were spent in study and preparation for his ministry. It is possible that a part of that time was spent in other countries than Judea and Galilee, very likely Egypt, Arabia and India, where the learned of teachings and philosophies other than Jewish, as given in his later teaching, summed up in "The Golden Rule."

EGGS ARE DISCOLORED BY EXCESS COTTONSEED MEAL

To prevent off-colored and flavored eggs, farmers are having to keep laying hens away from certain plants and limiting the cottonseed meal in their diet.

Turnips, onions, garlic, and leeks, if eaten freely may cause an undesirable flavor in the eggs, says John E. Ivey, extension service poultryman, Auburn. Off-colors occur if more than five per cent cottonseed meal occurs in hens' diets, yolks tending to become mottled and whites tinged after eggs have been stored several months. Shepherd-purse and field pennycress may produce a green color in both white and the yolk.

LAYERING AND CUTTINGS FOR TOMATO PROPAGATION

If no tomato plants are available for transplanting at the present time, cuttings and layerings can be used for the fall crop.

Clip branches from plants now bearing and set in a sandy, shady place where they can be watered often. When sufficient growth has taken place, L. M. Ware, horticulturist, recommends transplanting to the field or garden. If weather conditions are favorable a high percentage of cuttings should survive.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to take this means of expressing our appreciation and thanks for the kindness and sympathy shown us during the illness and death of our mother, Mrs. Catherine Franklin. Especially do we wish to thank Dr. Gragg and the people around here and also J. Meli Martin and Sons and for all the beautiful floral offerings. God bless you all is our prayer.—The family.

IN MEMORY

On Thursday, July 17 at 6:00 the death angel came and carried away our loving mother, Mrs. Catherine Franklin. She was 84 years old. When she lived we had something to live for but since Jesus has carried her home, we have something to die for. We hope to meet her smiling face in that great beyond where there will be no more parting. It broke our hearts to think we had to give her up, but we know she is at rest and we only want to live to meet her in Heaven. Everything was done that loving hands could do.

She leaves to mourn her passing one daughter and two sons, Miss Elizabeth Franklin, Mr. Robert and Ralfee Franklin. Funeral was conducted by Rev. Daniel at New Salem Friday, July 18 at 2:00 with Martin and Sons in charge.

BUTTER PRICE MAY BE HIGHER THAN 31 CENTS

Two facts should be kept in mind in connection with the federal government's recent announcement that it would support a 31-cent-a-pound butter price at Chicago, believes F. W. Burns, dairyman of the Alabama Extension Service.

First, this price refers to a long-time average price, and not to the butter price in any single month. Second, the price of 31 cents a pound should not be considered a "ceiling" but rather a "bottom" below which the average butter prices will not be allowed to go.

Rites Held For Aged Verbena Lady Thurs'y

Miss Phillie Serena Cooper, age 79, was buried Thursday, July 17, 1941 at the Chestnut Creek church cemetery in Cooper.

She died Wednesday morning at the home of her niece, Mrs. C. W. Mitchell in Verbena, where she had made her home for the past fifteen months.

Miss Cooper had been bed-ridden for the past ten months, having suffered a broken hip the first of September of the past year. She spent six weeks in St. Margaret's at Montgomery, returning later to Verbena. Recently she had been affected by paralysis.

The deceased was one of the oldest citizens of Chilton County. Her grandfather, Peter Cooper, was one of the first settlers in this section of the state, being a land owner and slave holder of Civil War days. He came to Alabama in 1819 and settled the land surrounding Cooper and Verbena, having erected a plantation home at Verbena where the house site is now known as the Old Coffey Home. The father of Miss Cooper, Andrew Cooper, was settled at Cooper where she was born February 3, 1862.

Miss Cooper told vividly of her memory of seeing Yankee soldiers, pass by as a mere child when Wilson's Raiders swept through Alabama. She remembered when the first railroad, the L. & N., was brought to this part of Alabama. She recounted seeing construction work carried on by Convict labor and the excitement of seeing the first train come through and riding on it.

The ancestors of Miss Cooper were formerly from England, taking possession of a land grant between the Cooper and Ashley rivers in South Carolina given them in payment for services rendered the crown of England.

Miss Cooper is survived by several nieces and nephews among whom are Mrs. Mitchell of Verbena; Mrs. Pearl Hanlin of New Orleans; Mr. R. C. Hanlin of Plantersville and others.

Interment took place at Cooper where Rev. G. G. Williams was in charge assisted by Rev. Hardin of Verbena.

Funeralbearers were Judson Strook, Blocker Williamson, Phil Mitchell of Verbena, Hughie Taylor, Luther Vance, Walker Allen of Cooper.

PICKLEWORM CONTROLLED BY DERRIS USED WEEKLY

Alabama farmers are finding that they can control the pickleworm of cucumbers, cantaloupes, and squash with a one per cent derris compound.

Weekly dustings are recommended by F. E. Guyton, professor of entomology, Auburn, from the time the first fruit sets. Do not use derris either ready-prepared or home-mixed that contains any sulphur as this will destroy plants. Talc must be used as the agent to mix with derris, advises Guyton.

"Green Hand" To Be Shown At Isabella

"The Green Hand", an all-Southern talking motion picture of the achievements of a wayward farm boy who gains glory through the educational leadership of the Future Farmers of America, will be shown free to the people of Chilton County next Saturday night, July 26, at 7:30 o'clock in the Isabella High School auditorium, it was announced this week by J. H. Camp, vocational agriculture teacher at Isabella.
Feature picture of a two-hour movie program that includes an educational short subject filmed in natural color, and a comedy. "The Green Hand" will bring to Chilton county residents the film dramatization of the nationally famous story of FFA and the new agriculture economy of the South written by Dean Paul W. Chapman of the College of Agriculture, University of Georgia.
"There will be no admission fee and no free-will collection of any kind, Mr. Camp said. "This program was produced primarily in the interest of agricultural vocational education in the South and tells a true story of events as they actually happened in one of our Southern communities. Families and friends of FFA members and 4-H club boys and girls, and everyone interested in the welfare of our South and its people, are cordially invited to attend."
Dean Chapman's book "The Green Hand", so named because the title is that bestowed on every degree member of the Future Farmer organization throughout the country, is believed to be the first novel ever written which has been dramatized for the movies with an all-Southern cast and entirely filmed in the South. More than 6,000 F. F. A. boys and another 1,000 distinguished guests first saw "The Green Hand" when the picture's gala premiere was held at Athens, Georgia.
Today 9,000 persons each week are viewing "The Green Hand" all through the nation. The picture has been hailed as an "epic of education" and a nation-wide sphere of constructive influence has been forecast for the film by educational leaders.

Chances Good For Developing Coosa-Alabama Rivers

WASHINGTON - Senator Hill and Representative Hobbs again Saturday predicted early approval by the army board of engineers of the vast Coosa-Alabama River development project.
Power shortage, they said, have already threatened the nation's industrial development. Any move to obtain additional power as soon as possible would relieve the existing pressure, it was pointed out.

Hill and Hobbs both emphasized that approval of the Altoona, Ga., Dam at the headwaters of the Coosa - one of the projects in the far-reaching power expansion program announced Wednesday by the Federal Power Commission - was a fore-runner to development of the entire Alabama watershed.

Construction of proposed powerhouses would guarantee an additional 115,000 kw. capacity of 200,000 kw. in 40,000 kw. hours of electric energy a year, Hobbs pointed out.

Total cost of the proposed program would be approximately $95,000,000 and annual maintenance cost of about one million dollars.

PATES CHAPEL

A notice that everybody is working hard again this week, especially the ladies who are canning and drying vegetables and fruit while they are plentiful.

Our community is well blessed with fruits and vegetables if we have had a wet season. It seems that the only thing the rain has harmed is our fruits and vegetables. The peaches seem to decay a little and the bean beetle works when it rains where we cannot spray.

The most distressing fact of all is that many who could come to Sunday school every Sunday and we would have plenty to have Sunday school, but just think, there was not enough at church last Sunday to have one class. Something is robbing our church.

We should ask ourselves this question: Can it be that there is a vacant place in church Sunday? If so, please fill that place and let us see if our Sunday school is vacant any more. It seems that we have six days to work and one to worship, but most are taking the seventh like the sixth. Folks, this is Sunday. If you cannot get it finished in daylight, let loose a little sleep and go to Sunday school and you will be as well off Monday as if you had worked Sunday. I know you would have enjoyed Sunday school and church.

Our lesson was on alcohol problems. We will know that alcohol keeps a lot of people from church and I do not approve of it any way but there are other things that keeps our people from church on Sunday where they could do this on Saturday. So, let's come to church next Sunday as it is our preaching time.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Dawson and sons visited Mr. Evans Dawson Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCarty spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Ollis Watkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Cox of Birmingham spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Sunday.

Mr. Philip Franklin is having trouble with his back and is not able to work but can walk around. We hope it will soon be able for him to go to work again.

Little Earlie Gene Dawson was on the sick list Sunday and Sunday night but came around and about straight again.

Mrs. Neale Pates grandchild is in a Montgomery hospital, seriously ill, but was improving the last report we heard.

We are expecting a great time for the old people at the Sunday in September at this church as this is their annual all-day singing. Everybody is invited to come and bring lunch and spend the day and make it a happy day for them.

Our revival begins the second Sunday in August with Bro. Hodges doing the preaching again this year. So everybody come and join in worship with us.

WATCH YOUR STEP

By all means help conserve electricity for national defense by cutting off all lights when they are not absolutely needed. Dr. J. N. Baker, State Health Officer, urged today. But:

"Persons ascending or descending darkened steps and walking in other unlighted parts of a building should be extremely careful so as not to fall and suffer serious, if not fatal, injuries," he added. "No less than 196 persons were killed in this state in 1935 as a result of falls in the home, while all accidents occurring in the home were responsible for 625 deaths during that year—nearly as many as were caused by motor vehicle accidents. Three-fifths of all home accidents in 1935 occurred among the very young and the aged. These should be particularly careful while groping about in the dark, especially on steps and in unfamiliar places."

BUILDING BEING WRECKED COLLAPSES

MONTGOMERY, ALA.—The partial collapse of the three-story brick building at 24 Commerce Street Sunday through wrecking the building, resulted in no personal injury or loss of life, as the workmen making an excavation on the adjoining lot for the new home of the Union Bank and Trust Company were not on the job.

About 25 feet of the wall collapsed and a large hole was left in the other. A dental laboratory, storage space, a brokerage firm and an attorney's office were located on the second floor while the third floor was vacant.

Dusty King and Lew Gordon were joint owners of the vast King-Gordon range which stretched from Texas to Montana. When coming up this string of ranches, they continued up to fight the untamed Ben Thorpe. Thorpe rivaling King-Gordon in power.

CHAPTER IV

"He buried Dusty King five miles north of the vast King-Gordon range which stretched from Texas to Montana. When coming up this string of ranches, they continued up to fight the untamed Ben Thorpe. Thorpe rivaling King-Gordon in power."

"Then, by God, King-Gordon has come to its split-up!"

Silence again before Dry Camp said, "And I suppose I'm expected to just kind of stand aside and stay out of it and see how you work it out, huh? Well, I won't do it, Bill."

"You're in this, Dry Camp."

"How am I in it?"

"I've got to have me an outfit. It's not to be made up of boys that aren't afraid of Ben Thorpe or all hell; boys that haven't got anything more to lose. I'll need near fifty men. But to start off with I want Lee Harsh, and Tex Daniels and Tex Long, Nate Liggett—Dave Shannon—"

"Wow!" said Dry Camp. "You get those four or five in the same bunch, they'll eat each other alive."

"That's the kind I want," Bill Roper said. "I want a wild bunch such as the West has never seen before."

"And me—what am I supposed to do?"

"You—you're heading south. They're going back to Texas and"

"You're in this, Dry Camp."

"You're going to start rounding 'em in."

"What you offering these boys?"

"Horses and grub, and what other stuff we'll need. Not another thing. They sat silent for a long time more."

"All right," Dry Camp said. "I'll go."

In the starlight Bill Roper swung down in front of the little shack which served King-Gordon as a loading-foreman's office at their Ogala pens. Within, Bill Roper found Lew Gordon sitting alone.

"I just talked to a man," Roper said, "that saw the killing."

Gordon was instantly alert. "Who was it?"

"He's a man that can't come forward, because he's already an outlaw in his own right. But Dusty was killed by Ben Thorpe, and Walk Lasham, the three working together. Walk Lasham bore down Dusty's gun."

They looked at each other for a long moment.

"This man that told you this—we've got to get hold of him; his story has to go to the authorities, Bill."

Roper shook his head. "He'll hang if they lay hands on him. Anyway, nobody would believe him against these three."

Lew Gordon made a gesture at once impatient and weary. "Wherever we turn we hit some snag of lawlessness," he said. "There's too many men afraid to stand forward and face out the law. Seems like nothing is done open and aboveboard any more."

"Never was, since I remember," Roper said. "I've got a couple of ways in mind right now. I'm going on the warpath, Lew."

er and wealth, but he had gained his position through wholesale cattle rustling and gunplay. Their opposing interests came to a showdown when the Government announced the auctioning of the valuable Crying Wolf land in Montana. Bidding went high at the

"We're going to carry the war into the other camp, Lew. For every outfit that Ben Thorpe has grabbed by force of arms, he's going to lose two for every head that he has come into his herds by rustle and raid, two head of his are going to be missing when he makes his roundup camp. First thing, I'm going to break Cleve Tanner down in Texas. After that—"

Lew Gordon looked Bill Roper hard in the eye, smiled a little, and shook his head. His voice was slow and deep, stubbornly emphatic, as a granite cliff is emphatic. "No. We've never gone outside the law yet, and while I live we never will. We play the straight game always; and that's the only way that's in the hands of things beyond us."

Bill Roper angered. "I know how you feel about it," he said, keeping his voice down. "You swayed Dusty that way always. If you'd looked at it different, the guns would have been out years ago—and it would have been Ben Thorpe that went down. As it is—Dusty King is dead. Now you want me to drift on as we always drifted, and I'm supposed to forget that Dusty's out there under a pile of stones. Well, I'm not going to play it that way, Gordon."

"While you're with King-Gordon," Lew said slowly, "you'll play it as I say you'll play it."

"If you want to buy me out," Roper said, "you can do it at your own price. Because I'm going to do exactly what I tell you I'm going to do. I wouldn't turn a sneek on you, Lew."

"You figure," Lew Gordon said incredulously, "that you, one youngster on horseback, can smash up Ben Thorpe? You wouldn't last forty seconds longer than a celluloid collar on a dead gambler."

"There'll be a few go with me," Roper said.

"Dry Camp Pierce for one; Lee Harsh, Tex Daniels, Tex Long; in all, maybe fifty men that I think I know where to get."

PROMPT DUSTING URGED FOR BEETLE CONTROL

"Watch your beans" is the word from the Alabama Experiment Station as it is revealed that the second generation of bean beetles, aided by excellent weather conditions, is on the upswing.

At the first sign of this insect, F. E. Guyton, professor of entomology, Auburn, advises dusting with derris, either ready-prepared or home-mixed. If ready-mixed to be used 50 to 75 per cent is suggested; if it is to be prepared at home use seven parts of talc or super-fine dusting sulphur to one part of four per cent rotenone-bearing derris by weight. Thorough dustings should be repeated as needed.

The bean beetle can, in a very short time, destroy the entire bean crop but if dusted before infestation becomes heavy the insect is easy to control, says Guyton.

AAA ADVISES FARMERS TO ORDER BASIC SLAG EARLY

A. W. Jones, State AAA administrative officer, is urging Alabama farmers to make application for basic slag now even though it may not be used until later.

Mr. Jones points out that a contract with the Farmers Marketing Exchange Association calls for 36,000 tons of basic slag to be supplied Alabama farmers at the rate of 4,000 tons each month.

This contract was awarded under the AAA conservation materials program under which fertilizer and seeds are furnished to farmers in lieu of a portion of their AAA payments.

A recent survey shows that ground 26,000 tons would be wanted in August and September in the various counties.

Your child should like this tasty liquid laxative and you should like the gentle way it usually wakes up a youngster's lazy intestines when given by the simple directions.

SYRUP OF BLACK-DRAGHT contains the same principal ingredient which has enabled its older brother BLACK-DRAGHT to give so many users such satisfying relief for so many years!

MORE COLLARDS, CABBAGE TO TAKE CARE OF NEEDS

More collards and cabbage should be planted now if plenty is to be had for fall and winter use.

Plant in rows and thin if water is available; if not, plant in a shady place that can be watered and transplanted in the present government experiment Station horticulturist. Many of these staple vegetables can be planted to good advantage as they are usually sure crops and are healthful food, he adds.

NEWS AND FACTS of Statewide Interest

YOU, TOO, Have An Important Place In This Program

ALABAMA's Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, state, county, and city law-enforcement agencies are constantly seeking to improve the generally good conditions surrounding the retail sale of beer in Alabama. The beer industry itself, through its self-regulation program, is cooperating in this work.

BUT—law enforcement agencies and the brewing industry both recognize that no program can be entirely successful without the approval and active support of law-abiding citizens.

We would like you—every citizen—to help eliminate the scattered few retail beer outlets that persist in violating the law.

You can do this by patronizing only the clean, reputable outlets and by reporting to our Committee any outlet whose operation is not as wholesome as beer itself.

MT. CARMEL

Bro. Hyman Atchison preached at this place Sunday night. His subject being, "Freedom and Excuses". After hearing this sermon we are more thankful for the freedom we can still enjoy in this, our country. May the time soon be, when all nations may have this freedom to worship the only True God.

Come back again all you Pates Chapel folks, your presence meant a lot to our B. Y. P. U. Sunday night.

Mr. Oswald Mims of Birmingham was home over the week end. Miss Lillian Higgins of Clanton spent the week end at home.

Our heartfelt sympathy is extended to the loved ones of Mrs. Catherine Franklin who departed from our midst last Thursday afternoon about 6:00. She had been in declining health for about six months but bore her suffering bravely. Her place is vacant here but we feel Heaven is just a little brighter since she has joined that Heavenly Band.

Miss Dorothy (Dot) Williams is spending two weeks in Selma with an aunt, Mrs. Stella Shoults.

"Pa and Ma" Sewell are attending the revival at Refuge part of this week.

Hoping to have a good singing next Sunday at this place. All you lovers of music come help us make this the best. We would like to have all our members back at B. Y. P. U. Sunday nite. Let's make our union strong again. Come on and bring some one else.

GRAVES RECEIVES PLAUDITS OF ASSESSORS AND COLLECTORS

Another Covey Endorses "The Little Colonel" For A Third Trip To The Governor's Chair

(From The Montgomery Advertiser)

Col. Bibb Graves received the homage of another potent group of public officials Tuesday night, when he was chief speaker at a banquet at the Whiteley Hotel featuring the ninth annual convention of the Association of Tax Assessors and Tax Collectors of Alabama.

The assembled tax officials and their friends widely applauded introductory remarks by Silas Garrett, assistant attorney-general who presented Col. Graves as a builder and a champion of human welfare, whose two administrations were the most progressive Alabama has ever known, and adding that it is "widely rumored" that he will fill the Governor's chair a third time.

Col. Graves lauded Alabama's county tax officials as exponents of Democratic local self-government, and contrasted the esteem in which he said they are held with popular hatred visited upon the publicans at the time of Christ. This he said was because the old publicans were "carpetbaggers" sent by a remote central government, whereas Alabama's county tax officials held office by mandate of their home folks.

Quotes Scripture

Col. Graves quoted with approval the scriptural injunction to muzzle not the ox that treads out the corn. He reminded the tax assessors and collectors that he had kept this injunction in mind, and looked out for their interests, in framing Alabama's home-land exemption law. In event of any alteration or extension of the home-land law, Col. Graves promised to be guided by the injunction against muzzling the corn-treading ox, which he quoted several times.

Referring to the world crisis, Col. Graves gave as his opinion that civilization faced the greatest peril in its beginning, but voiced confidence in America's future. While pointing to inevitable sacrifices, he declared that this country should "hold fast to social gains and to the profit motive" and declared that any war-time abridgement of liberties would be temporary and "lost and shall be restored" when the crisis is over.

Entertainment at the banquet was featured by vocal selections by Lem Edmonson, Jr., accompanied by Mrs. U. L. Heustess, and a floor show with dancing and other selections by Misses Georgette Johnson, Nanette Thompson, Dorothy Graydon, Joan Massey and Tell Thomas with Miss Minnie Olin Day furnishing the accompaniment.

Dixon With Washington

Tax officials opened their annual meeting Tuesday morning, with a welcome address by Mayor Cyrus B. Brown, and response by R. L. Bishop, tax assessor of Etowah County.

The afternoon session was featured by addresses by Gov. Dixon and J. L. Lawson, assistant director of extension at Auburn. Gov. Dixon referred to the serious situation confronting the nation and declared that it would be the State's policy to carry out any request made by Washington in furthering the defense program. He listed as a patriotic duty the observance of daylight saving time both by State and local governmental agencies and citizens generally.

The convention will end this morning with address by Senator John H. Bankhead to be followed by election of officers.

(Quotes Atticus Mullin, political writer for "Grandma"):

"There are approximately 268 tax collectors and assessors in Alabama and more than 200 of them are in Montgomery in annual convention and they are outspoken for Graves for governor and insist that they are more nearly unanimous for him than are either the probate judges and county commissioners or even the mayors and city commissioners..."

effort. Your Government has called collect all the waste aluminum in the nation, in order that it may be used in the manufacture of articles for defense.

"Giant plants are now being constructed for the manufacture of aluminum but they cannot be completed for some months and the need for aluminum is NOW. In nearly every home in this country, waste aluminum in the form of worn out pots and pans, parts of old household machines and other implements may be found. Your Government needs them and needs them now.

"Every citizen who makes a donation of waste aluminum is assured that it will be used solely for national defense. Nobody will make a profit out of this effort. The only cost will be for the actual handling and transportation of the waste aluminum to the smelters where it will be converted into materials for national defense.

"The urgency of this appeal is indicated in a joint statement to the American people issued by William S. Knudsen, Director of the Office of Production Management and F. H. LaGuardia, Director of the Office of Civilian Defense, who said:

"The Nation needs aluminum for planes and other vital items in its defense program more rapidly than existing facilities can produce it. Additional facilities are being constructed as quickly as possible. In the meantime, the people of the Nation can help by donating all used aluminum waste that can be spared from their households without being replaced. No individual or group or corporation will make any profit out of this transaction. The entire proceeds of the sale will be used for Civilian Defense. All aluminum will be used exclusively for Civilian Defense."

Chairman Stapp said the following plan had been adopted by the Council of Defense for the collection of aluminum in Chilton County:

The people in and around Verbena are requested to take their aluminum to Mr. W. A. Guldedge's store, Mr. Hugh Taylor's store will be collection center for all Aluminum in and around Cooper. Mr. John Maples of the Maplesville Bank will arrange to take care of all aluminum donated in the Maplesville area; Mayor Monroe Smith and Dr. Ballard of Thorby and Jemison will arrange to take care of donations in their respective areas. While in Clanton Mayor Stapp has arranged a pen in front of the City Hall and has asked that all who can please bring their aluminum and place in the pen. If it isn't convenient for you to take your aluminum to the City Hall give it to the garbage trucks operators who will call twice at each home in Clanton this week

Traffic Accidents Hit Peak During Weekends

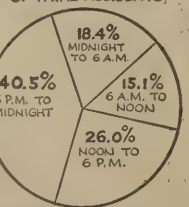

Beware of Sunday! It is an unholy day, a day of sinister happenings, a day when Death reaps its heaviest harvest, according to "Here Today—" eleventh annual booklet published by The Travelers Insurance Company in the interests of street and highway safety.

From an analysis of America's highway accident record for 1940 it can be drawn the following conclusions: Saturday and Sunday vie for dishonor as the most dangerous days for automobile drivers. Of 35,000 people who met their death in traffic accidents, 13,860 or nearly 40 per cent were killed on weekends. When the days were divided into hours, it was discovered that the evening hours from six to midnight accounted for 14,180 or 40.5 per cent of those who died in automobile accidents last year.

Thus the booklet reveals to the layman unacquainted with accident facts that the worst driving hours are the most dangerous driving days are the very hours and days he most frequently chooses for pleasure trips.

Sunday has long been considered the most dangerous day of the week, but last year Saturday crept up until the two are running almost neck and neck as fatalities. Most dangerous single hour of the 24 is between 7 and 8 p.m., according to the booklet. Fewest accidents occurred on Tuesday last year, although the year before (1939) Wednesday was statistically safer. Unexplainable is the fact that although there are more persons killed on Sundays, there are more persons injured on Saturdays.

Thorsby Baseball Club Have Ice Cream Party

The Thorsby Baseball Club sponsored an ice cream supper at the Community Park last Saturday night. Several boxing matches, tap dancing and string music entertained the crowd of approximately 250. Ice cream and cold drinks were sold for the benefit of the ball club.

The team won two and lost one during the past week. Autaugaaville defeated us by the score of 5 to 1. Our team was crippled by the absence of several regular players and errors caused our downfall. Molley of Autaugaaville, who pitched for Auburn last year was on the mound for Autaugaaville and was touched for six hits by our team. Turner did the catching. "Bull" Watkins pitched for Thorsby and gave up only 5 hits, but infield errors lost for us. Pate was behind the bat. Antioch was defeated by the score of 13 to 8. Baggett and Watkins pitched for Thorsby with Collins catching. Heavy hitting by both teams featured the game. The hits were 11 for Thorsby and 8 for Antioch. McGraw started the first hit but was soon replaced by Jackson and Perkins. Cunningham caught. Sterretts was defeated in an abbreviated game to the tune of 14 to 3 in a game that featured some really heavy hitting. A home run by Tapscott, two triples by Powell and one triple by "Bob" Collins accounted for most of Thorsby's runs. Sterretts was held to 4 hits by Watkins and Baggett. Pate caught for Thorsby. The battery for Sterretts was Abercrombie and Goodman to Johnson and Bell.

We meet the strong Draper team here at Thorsby Saturday in a game that should really be interesting. All who are interested in seeing a good ball game are invited to attend.

... U. S. Department Writes On Fresh Peach Industry

July 19, 1941

Hon. Pete Jarman
House of Representatives.
Dear Mr. Jarman:

The following information regarding the situation of the fresh peach industry in the United States and the steps being taken by the Surplus Marketing Administration to relieve the pressure of excessive supplies on commercial markets has been prepared in line with our recent telephone conversation.

As you probably know, the total United States crop of peaches, except California clingstones, is expected to be almost 54 million bushels during the current season. This production is the largest since the all-time record harvest of 69.5 million bushels in 1931 and represents an increase of about 36 per cent over both the 1940 output and the average reported for the 1930-39 period. In view of the unusually heavy supplies this year and the necessarily limited extent of possible assistance by the Surplus Marketing Administration, it is believed desirable that our programs be concentrated upon an effort to support the market position of the most acceptable commercial varieties of yellow peaches. The yellow varieties are well adapted to the several forms of utilization contemplated under the surplus removal programs of the Surplus Marketing Administration and make up the bulk of the national peach crop.

The programs which are now available to the fresh peach industry, or which are expected to be made available shortly, include:

1. Direct purchase for fresh distribution.

2. Surplus Food Stamp Plan.

3. Canning of fresh peaches purchased.

4. Processing for pulp.

Purchases for direct distribution in the fresh form are expected to begin in the Southeastern States soon after (Continued to Page 8)

A Notice From Our Postmaster

The mails in all parts of the country are being flooded at the present with letters relating to so-called endless chain schemes soliciting defense savings stamps.

Patrons of the various postoffices depositing in the mails matter relating to schemes of this nature should be warned that the sending of such matter through the mails is a violation of the postal fraud and lottery statutes.

Notices are served on persons participating in such schemes, whose names are called to the attention of the Department requiring them to show cause why fraud orders should not be issued against them. Such orders forbid the delivery of any mail to the persons named therein.

JAPAN IS SEIZING UNITED STATES' GOODS

Robert A. Martin, United States correspondent, in Birmingham Post says: "Japanese army authorities in Northern China have started to seize American property, the United console announced."

Alabama Rotarians have selected Gadsden for their 1942 conference.

This Week In National Defense

Acting Secretary of State Welles said present Japanese activities directed toward Indo-China endanger peaceful use by peaceful nations of the Pacific. ... jeopardize the procurement by the United States of essential materials such as tin and rubber. ... necessary for our defense program. He said the safety of other areas, including the Philippine Islands, also is endangered.

The President issued a statement that the United States has been leasing oil to Japan. ... with the hope- ... it has worked for two years—of keeping the war out of the South Pacific for our own good, for the defense of Great Britain and the freedom of the seas. ...

Mr. Roosevelt told his press conference that the Far East are being alarmed by the American public a greater awareness of the danger of the whole world situation. But as yet, he said, the public is not sufficiently cognizant of the perils of the situation, any more than it realizes the danger of war in the West.

ARMY

Secretary of War Stimson said production of vital items has been increased with the cooperation of American industry during the last "100 crucial days" as follows: light tanks, 475 per cent; medium tanks, 467 per cent; smokeless powder, 127 per cent; machine guns, 93 per cent; TNT, 92 per cent; training planes, 55.7 per cent; bombers, 17.8 per cent.

The War Department said Army expansion has progressed faster in the past year than the manufacture of modern weapons, but since it is more important to know how to employ a weapon tactically rather than to know how to fire it, "little training value is lost by the substitution of a stove pipe for a motor on an oak bough for a machine gun."

If a company has fewer guns than men, the guns are rotated so each man has a chance to learn how to handle them.

The War Department said it is giving four types of tests to discover a trainee's ability and to help find his "right" place in the Army. Selective Service Headquarters announced that 752,572 one-year-olds registered on July 1.

HIGHWAYS

Congress passed a $320,000,000 defense highway bill for construction of roads and experimental airplane landings strips, and to pay states for damages from Army and Navy maneuvers.

Mark Remarks:

A hamper of the prettiest peaches I have ever seen was shipped by the Clanton Berry Growers Association, to Arthur Williamson, Jacksonville, Fla., Monday. They were ordered by Webb Stanley, of The Greenville Advocate, for his maritime friend in Jacksonville.

The kind words expressed by our friend and contemporary, T. E. Wyatt, editor of The Clanton Union-Banner, in his last week's issue, are sincerely appreciated. I have known the Wyatt boys—Mack and Gene—a long time, and cherish the unbroken and unmarred friendship that has existed between us during all these years. I am confident it will continue that way.

Providence has supplied plenty of everything worthwhile for everyone—and, but for the selfish, arrogant, greedy, grasping few, there would be plenty of health and peace throughout the world.

A writer in The Birmingham News asks: "Is chivalry passing?" No, it went by some time ago, shortly after we went out to save the world for democracy.

One of America's serious troubles is too many "careers," and too few hands in the kitchen. —MARK

Felicitations

We bow as gracefully as we can at the age of 70, plus.

CONGRATULATIONS, NEIGHBOR, ON YOUR BIRTHDAY.

The Union-Banner learned Monday that on that date—July 21st—our esteemed neighbor and fellow-one-gal-lowed sufferer, Mark Tucker of The Chilton County News, had reached his three-score-and-ten mile post. We extend congratulations, neighbor.

In passing, we will make this notation: Mark Tucker has been in Clanton on to four years connected with the Chilton County News as editor, publisher, owner and what-not. During his stay in Clanton the relations between the two newspapers has been most cordial indeed, which we believe is as it should be. When Mr. Tucker came to Clanton he told us that he considered us not as a competitor but as a co-worker. We are glad to say that idea has predominated every day during his stay here; we can see no reason why it will not continue to exist and on in the future.

Again, we grasp the opportunity of extending hearty congratulations and best wishes for many more such occasions. —Clanton Union-Banner.

CANDIDATES TAKE NOTICE—

Says the Grove Hill Democrat.

The Association of Tax Collectors and Tax Assessors is now on record endorsing Bibb Graves for a third term for Governor. This endorsement follows similar action by the Association of Probate Judges and Commissioners and the League of Municipalities. Other likely candidates could spare themselves a lot of needless trouble by taking note of the same and those who don't like Graves as Governor might as well begin arranging now for a 4-year vacation.

HAPPY EVENT COMING

The veteran Editor Mark Tucker, of The Chilton County News, celebrated his 70th birthday last Monday, July 21st. Congratulations. In all probability he will be celebrating another birthday his favorite Governor will have been re-elected again.—Wetumpka Herald.

OUT OF THE MAIL BAG

Chilton County News received the following letter a day or so ago from one of the oldest and most reliable Paper Houses in the Country:

July 23, 1941

Mr. Mark Tucker,
Chilton County News,
Clanton Ala.

Dear Mr. Tucker:

IMPORTANT TO YOU

Some of our printer friends have been "put on the spot" by their customers who have given them rush orders for printed matter because the paper could not be shipped in time to suit their customer's requirement.

Paper mills are running further and further behind due to defense and government requirements. It is not unlikely that the future will bring conditions whereby PROMPT SHIPMENTS may be out of the question on some of your orders.

For this reason, we suggest that you tell your customers of these crowded conditions and ask that they anticipate their requirements for printing enough in advance so the order for paper can be placed now—and you can receive the stock in time. Of course, we will do our best to take care of old friends like yourself, however, conditions under which we have no control, may prevent 100 per cent cooperation.

From time to time we will keep you informed of conditions in the paper market... and we assure you of our wholehearted cooperation as we greatly appreciate your business.

Cordially Yours,

Mark L. Tucker.

During the last World War I paid as high as 17 cents a pound for ordinary news print paper; and it is not improbable that all grades of print paper will become scarcer and increase materially in price within a very short time as a result of the present Defense needs.

Therefore, I urge that all business and Professional people place orders NOW for the printing supplies they will likely need for the next several months. This advice is based on past experience, and you will profit by taking advantage of it.

Sincerely,

Mark L. Tucker.

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

Gypsy Smith tells of a certain woman that he met in a Gypsy camp who claimed to be a Gypsy. She was traveling with the band and to all appearance she was of the tribe. Mr. Smith knew his own people and after a few words with her he was certain that she was not a Gypsy. She saw that she could not deceive the noted Evangelist and confessed that she was not a Gypsy and that she had just joined the band. To one who knew Gypsies she was known to be an imposter. In making his application the sweet spirited Evangelist remarked, "There are so many people in the church, who have done as did this woman, they have joined the church but they are not of the church." As a member of the church, without the standard of life required of a church member, will not carry you places in the mind of God. God knows His own and it is useless to try deception.

A story of long ago tells us that Scipio Africanus was one of the greatest generals the world had produced up to his day. This man was noble in leadership and life, but there was a son in his family who had nothing of his father's qualities. It became known in the Senate that this dissolute, cowardly, rake of a son was wearing with pride the picture of his noble father upon his breast. A law was passed that stopped this unworthy boy of that picture. He was judged unworthy and unfit to wear the picture of his noble father. As sons and daughters of God Almighty we have a worthy Father in heaven and we have a worthy Brother in Jesus Christ, and I am wondering if we are living worthy of the One in whom we have life. The good book says, "Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." As a church member you are wearing the picture of God on your breast. It is far better to carry His picture in your heart.

While men were digging for diamonds in South Africa they came across a substance that was half charcoal and half diamond. This formation started out to be a diamond of rare value, but it stopped in the making. It had the misfortune of becoming tangled up with slag and failed. For that reason it was not worthy to be placed in the crown of the king. In this peculiar formation of nature we see the picture of many a life. There are those who start out to make life that is kingly in its nature and in its scope and it becomes worthy and fine. But, there are those who start out to make a fine life and become entangled with sin and slime and nothing of value is produced. In the making of a life that is priceless in value we are commanded to keep ourselves unspotted from the world.

A bar of steel hung in a gun factory by a small chain. It was eight feet long and weighed five hundred pounds. By the side of the steel bar a bottle cork was suspended by a silken thread. The steel and the cork were perfectly still, and then a test was made. The cork was pulled back and allowed to swing against the bar of steel. For ten minutes the steel bar did not move. Another ten minutes, and the bar showed signs of uneasiness. At the close of a half hour test, the bar of steel was swinging to and from like the pendulum of a clock. What seemed to be impossible had been done by continually striking the bar of steel with the cork. You can strike a marble slab with a steel hammer, and nothing is done, but if the blows follow each other for a period of time, the slab will crack and fall apart. We are influencing people all around us every day. We may console ourselves that our example is having no weight, but if we keep striking you will move in the hearts of men. Stay away from church and you will soon be keeping others from going.

An English aviator was flying his plane over the fields of Arabia and developed an engine trouble, he selected an open field and landed. So he had repaired his engine and was ready for the air again. He had not gone very far before he heard the sounds of gnawing. Being familiar with that sound he knew that a rat from the field had crawled into his plane while he was repairing the engine. Knowing that a rat could not live in his plane he turned the nose of his machine into the sky and soon the gnawing was heard no more. When he landed the next time he found a large field rat dead on the floor. May I not say that some professed followers of Christ tarry too close to this old world, and moral pests often climb into their character. Such things as dishonesty, selfishness, impurity, hate, love of pleasure and the like, have taken up an abode in their hearts. These moral pests can not live in a high spiritual altitude. If such things appear in your character now, let me advise you to sail higher in your living. If these things are within you, you are flying too low.

BIBB GRAVES — THE NEXT GOVERNOR

Says The Shelby County Reporter: It now seems as certain as anything human and in politics can be so far ahead, that Bibb Graves, twice Governor of Alabama, will be elected next year to a third term in that high office.

Col. Graves, he is called Colonel about as often as he is called Governor, has been peculiarly fortunate in his successors in the office of Governor. Each time he has been followed by a man who denounced him and all his works, and promised to high heaven to sweep out and scrub down every thing that might even look like Graves. Then almost on the first day of each of these successors took office he began to prepare the way for Graves to come back. This, it seems to us, is especially true of the present Governor.

And so it looks like a third term for Graves. And why not? The people want him; at least a great majority. Realizing that, the politicians have staged the mightiest band wagon on rush this state has ever seen. Practically every newspaper that has declared itself so far, is for Graves. Weeks ago, Atticus Mullin of the Montgomery Advertiser, one of the shrewdest political writers in the state, gave it as his opinion then, that not another man in the state, had a chance against Graves. So, barring a miracle, as certain as January 1943 rolls around, Alabama will have her first third term governor—and his name will be Col. Bibb Graves.

DUTCH CLOVER DECLARED PERENNIAL UNDER AAA

Recent approval of white Dutch clover as one of the perennial soil conserving crops under the four-point Alabama conservation plan is expected to greatly benefit Alabama farmers. The ruling allows white Dutch clover to be considered a perennial soil conserving crop, of which one acre must be planted for every 15 acres of cropland. Formerly this crop was considered an annual crop only in the AAA requirement calling for 25 per cent of the cropland to be erosion resisting for soil conserving crops.

The ruling will aid farmers in operating under both of the new practices and is effective immediately, applying to the 1941 goal.

COWS AND LEGUMES

Chilton County had a recent dairy survey of 1,402 farms—4,596 cows and heifers were listed—4,999 perennial legumes were shown.

FUNDAMENTAL FACTS AND FANCIES

Compiled and Arranged by JOHN W. MAHAN

THE KINGDOM OF GOD—JESUS' MAIN THOUGHT

"Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His Righteousness." That quotation would seem to prove the matter of the idea that "The Kingdom of God" was his main thought and most important theme. "Know ye not that the Kingdom of God is within you?" From this it would seem that the nature of the Kingdom is spiritual.

The Fatherhood of God

Jesus' idea of God seems to have been that of Creator-God-Spirit. As the Creator of all, He is, in that sense, the father of all. As the Great Spirit, He is the spiritual father of the lesser spirits—men, and the supreme head of the spiritual Kingdom of God which is in the hearts of men. Jesus often emphasized the idea of the tender, thoughtful and compassionate consideration of the Father for His children as well as His great love for them.

To establish the Kingdom of God, a spiritual kingdom, within the hearts of men was, perhaps, his greatest desire, and he sought to impress its desirability and helpfulness both by precept and parable as well as example in the matter of his miracles and healing.

The Universal Brotherhood of Man

That all men are brothers, in the heart of Jesus, was his greatest desire, and he sought to impress its desirability and helpfulness both by precept and parable as well as example in the matter of his miracles and healing. The Universal Brotherhood of Man, that all men are brothers, in the heart of Jesus, was his greatest desire, and he sought to impress its desirability and helpfulness both by precept and parable as well as example in the matter of his miracles and healing.

The Golden Rule

"As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them," is the Golden Rule of life as advocated by Jesus. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself," is another of the Golden Rules on which the Kingdom of God in the hearts of men was to be established. These are the keys to the solution of all the social problems of mankind. When men and nations adopt and live by these principles, peace and plenty will soon come to and abide with all.

THE BIBLE—OLD TESTAMENT

All systems of religion have traditions, teachings and history of beginning. They are oral at first and later on in the progress of organization and development, they are collected, compiled and made into permanent records. This is the case in the matter of the Bible of the Jews and the Christian organizations. First oral and scattered by word of mouth, then in scattered records which were collected, compiled and made into permanent records.

A Jewish Book

There has been considerable lack of real information in the past, concerning the origin, growth and purpose of the Old Testament part of the present-day Bible. Early ideas, practices and history of the Israelites were handed down by word of mouth from the time of the patriarchs to that of the exodus from Egypt, when Moses as their leader, collected and compiled the materials and added his laws, rules and regulations for the nation he had organized. This was all done EXCLUSIVELY for the Jews, and the later records of history, teachings and prophecy included with them were all likewise for Jewish use solely. They did not concern or apply to the whole nations around them except in their dealings with them, nor do they today apply to any except the Jews.

Historical Value

The Old Testament records the wanderings, wars and general ups and downs of the Jews and is perhaps, the only authentic record of the time from their beginning on down to the time of their dispersion.

These records throw light on and corroborate Historical events in the other nations about them, being of considerable value in that respect to people other than Jews.

Its Philosophical Literature

The proverbs and other philosophical matter contained in the various books of the Old Testament are the cream of the wisdom of the different leaders and wise men of Israel, prior to the time of its compilation and permanent record. This matter stands high in comparison with the wisdom of all other nations and civilizations. King Solomon seems to have been responsible for the most of the work.

The literary value of the other parts, for descriptive and imaginative worth, beauty of expression as well as interesting entertainment, rate very high.

This accounts largely for the high standard it has in the estimation of students of literature as well as those who value it for other reasons.

THE BIBLE—NEW TESTAMENT

The advent of Jesus with his ministry and teachings marks the beginning of a new era in the world's history. 'Twas scarcely a ripple on the sea of thought at the time, but was destined to revolutionize the old established order of things and gradually permeate and overthrow the systems then in operation.

A Christian Book

Jesus did not present his ideas and teachings as something entirely new, but grafted them on the old Jewish system and built on that foundation. The history of the beginning of Christianity and the record of Jesus' ministry are contained in the four books supposed to have been written by the apostles whose names they bear: Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. The Acts of the Apostles continues the record of the work of the apostles and early converts and teachers, in the establishment of the Church. The epistles of Paul give some idea as to how the doctrines were spread in the countries around Judea and the system gradually established as something preceding the Jewish system of belief.

Its Historical Value

Taken as a whole, the books of the New Testament give a record and a summary of the events which occurred in the beginning and growth of Christianity during approximately the first century of its development. In no other records do we find the details of progress made in spreading the doctrines and establishing the local organizations of the new church. However, some of the contemporary secular histories make reference to the movement.

Its Mystical and Prophetic Teaching
Mankind for ages seems to have been leaning towards mysticism and has been attracted to and interested in the thought and study of the idea. This a lot of the mystic is present in the thought and teachings of Jesus, of the apostles and apostles and especially the apostle Paul, is very apparent from the study of the New Testament as well as to advance different mystical beliefs, based on their interpretation of the matter contained in the Bible. Science, however, has shown that there is, if any, of these ideas will stand the white light of proven facts.

Youthful and Aged Play Saddest Accident Roles

Saddest roles in America's tragic highway accident drama are played by the very young and the very old, according to an analysis of the 1940 accident record recently issued by the Travelers Insurance Company.

When a baby under four or an elderly person over 65 is killed by an automobile, the chances are greater than six out of ten that it will be a case of being struck down by a modern jehi. True, death strikes often in every age group, but the gruesome picture of this slaughter of usually innocent pedestrians is one to give every motorist pause.

Traffic deaths among youths in the 5 to 14 age group are split about equally between pedestrians and operators or occupants of vehicles. Almost as many children in this group are killed in bicycle accidents as in smashups involving two cars.

In the age group 15 to 64, a relatively small percentage of persons on the death list where pedestrians, according to this latest analysis.

'Small Talk' Helps Unite Mother, Son After 33 Years

Last Woman Saw of Child Was When Husband Took Him for Haircut.

NEW ORLEANS.—The small talk of a suburb, Miss, beauty parlor, where a customer engaged an attendant in conversation while under a permanent wave machine, was united a mother with a son she had not seen for 33 years.

Miss L. E. Crofton last saw her boy as he toddled around a corner in Alexandria 33 years ago with her estranged husband. The child was not yet a year old. That was the last she saw of him.

The years passed and she married again. Her former name was Dees. She turned to the police to find her son. She went to civic organizations.

Recently, a 36-year-old man, a former sailor and father of two children, called her from a funeral parlor. It was her son, Harold.

The story of the two's search for each other was revealed by Mrs. Crofton.

First Link Established.
Mrs. Morgan—Mrs. Crofton couldn't remember her first name—was "fixing up" to come to New Orleans at a beauty parlor in Vicksburg. The establishment was operated by a Mrs. Dees, Mrs. Crofton related.

The permanent wave made a hit here. A friend asked Mrs. Morgan where she got it, and the Vicksburg woman told her.

"That's funny, the friend replied. "One of my best friends here was a Mrs. Dees once. She is Mrs. Crofton now, but you know she had an awful experience. . . a child was kidnapped from her years ago, and now she doesn't even like to talk about it much. I don't think she ever heard from the boy again. He must be a grown man now."

Mrs. Morgan remembered the incident when she returned to Vicksburg and interviewed the beauty parlor operator. She learned enough to start her thinking and afterward she told Mrs. Dees what she surmised.

Harold Dees wrote immediately to Mrs. Crofton. Then he followed up his letter, arriving in New Orleans at 3:30 o'clock one morning.

Long Gap Bridged.
Mrs. Crofton related how the two exchanged stories of the intervening years; how Dees had begged his father for information concerning his mother and his search for her. He told of his service in the navy; that he now was married and had two children and that the beauty parlor operator was his mother.

She told of her frantic search, of spending all her money and finally of moving from Alexandria to New Orleans. She produced a picture of her son, a faded print of a three-year-old boy.

Dees left for Vicksburg shortly after his first visit. But he promised to come back.

"Imagine," he said, "the thrill of getting not only one but two 'first' grandchildren at the same time—to say nothing of your first child and his bride besides!"

Prisoner in an Icebox
Dams Beer, but Is Saved

DAYTON, OHIO.—Homer Stocklein, accidentally trapped in the refrigerator in the basement of his restaurant cafe here, remained calm and "cool" in his predicament and used his head to escape from a possible frost-bite.

Stocklein went into the basement of his establishment to check some stock in the refrigerator. He left the door ajar because it cannot be unlocked from the inside.

A few minutes later, Beno Zeiler, an employee, came into the basement, saw the refrigerator door slightly open and slammed it shut. Stocklein was trapped in the dark refrigerator, the lights going out as the door closed.

He pondered the situation for about 15 minutes, getting nearer the freezing point every one of those minutes. There just didn't seem to be any way to attract the attention of those in the restaurant. Then came the idea that saved Stocklein's life.

He shut off all four beer lines running to the upstairs. That brought action. Employees, fearing the beer lines had frozen, went to the restaurant to check the temperature adjustment and found Stocklein. They discovered he was half frozen and "burned up."

Aunt Lizzie Has Spat
With Boy Friend at 110

SAPULPA, OKLA. — Bright-eyed "Aunt Lizzie" Deever celebrated her 110th birthday had been a "pretty sorry" occasion.

In the first place, she was confined to her bed with influenza, the first illness of her long lifetime. In the second place, she said she had quarreled with her boy friend, 77-year-old John Nigh.

Lizzie, who has had nine husbands and outlived all of them, announced she had decided to make John No. 10. Later she said she had changed her mind because "he gets mad too easy."

Nigh was in a bad humor, too, and disclaimed any matrimonial intentions. "She's too old for me," he said.

Woman Ruins Jail; City Builds New One

LIVERMORE, CALIF. — This city is going to have a new state jail and for ample reasons. It was a woman prisoner, who last tore out the plumbing, smashed the bed and a chair and tore the jail apart for ample reasons. "I do it," Chief of Police George N. Doten reported. "We merely regard it as routine now."

Ingenious London Gang Robs Banks

Postal Savings Looted by Clever Forgers.

LONDON.—Behind the activities of a London gang of youths operating an ingenious new racket is a mystery. "I don't know about the police know nothing."

Not even members of the gang know his name or what he looks like. The "big shot" employs youths to rob the Post Office Savings Bank by means of a simple, but original, piece of forgery.

The police know how his racket is worked. They know that the scheme was originated by a Canadian who was sentenced last month. They have even arrested three members of the gang, who have been sentenced to Old Bailey.

But the identity of the boss remains unknown.

The gang works in groups of three—an agent, a forger and a with-drawer—mainly in districts of London's East End.

They are set up together in back rooms and remain unpretentious in their dresses—though each has been earning $12 a day. The agent opens at different post offices at least two savings bank accounts every day with deposits of five shillings. In one he deposits a second sum, say two shillings.

The forger then detaches the stamped side of the book with two entries and fixes it in the book with one. Thus his book shows a five-shilling entry with an official stamp, then a blank line with an official stamp.

On that blank line the forger fills in a deposit of 20 pounds.

The "big shot" goes from one post office to another making three pound "on demand" withdrawals until the money is withdrawn.

What method the "big shot" employs in recruiting a gang of collecting his cut has not been revealed.

Course in Baby-Minding
Latest for British Women

LONDON.—Many British matrons and young married women who feel they are not suited for factory work are taking courses in baby-minding under a scheme put forward by Ernest Bevin, the minister of labor.

The course lasts a week or more and the fee is five shillings. The first to be opened was at King's College, Durham, and immediately attracted 40 applicants. In addition to lectures the students visit child welfare centers and nurseries for practical experience.

One graduate, Mrs. Margaret Bourdon, of Newcastle, wife of a soldier and who has a son three years old, said to a London Daily Mail reporter:

"Like all women, I suppose, I thought baby-minding was work every woman does by instinct. But I have learned how wrong this was. We don't get jobs as baby-minders, we shall all be better mothers."

Professor Brian Stanley, who is in charge of the education department at King's college, said:

"Here we are chiefly concerned with the educational side of baby minding. There is a lot to learn and we are fortunate in having the assistance of many experts."

83-Year-Old Motorist
Is Quick on Comeback

MANTENO, ILL. — Eighty-three-year-old Trefley Soucie may have a little trouble seeing the approach of a fast train, but he still has a snappy comeback for anyone who thinks he should stop driving.

Driving across the railroad tracks here, Soucie failed to notice a train bearing down upon the crossing. His car was completely demolished by the impact, but he was unhurt.

As he sat upright in the wreckage, a youthful bystander ventured to comment that Soucie is too old to be driving an automobile. Soucie turned on him and said: "Say, listen, young fellow. Younger people than I have been killed in accidents like this—I'm not even hurt."

City Asked to Take Over
Betsy Ross Home for Tax

PHILADELPHIA. — The Betsy Ross house, where the famous colonial seamstress is said to have made the first American flag, may change ownership because of unpaid taxes.

That was disclosed when Mayor Lambertson transmitted to the city council a proposal that the municipality take over the shrine and assume the taxes accumulated in a 35-year period.

The proposal was made by the American Flag House and Betsy Ross Memorial association, which offered to give up title to the property if the city would pay unpaid real estate taxes, totaling approximately $13,500.

Spend-The-Day Picnic At Log Cabin Beach

By Mrs. John Schmidth

The Baker Home Demonstration Club, together with our agent, Mrs. Barber, held their regular monthly meeting at Log Cabin Beach with a spend-the-day picnic.

We had the pleasure of having with us Miss Lucile Mallett, District Supervisor from Auburn, her presence was thoroughly enjoyed by each member present.

At the noon hour we spread our lunch under the beautiful trees near the river bank. It was fit for a king, and from the way we devoured it, evidently everybody enjoyed it.

After a hike in the woods, after lunch we had a watermelon cutting, which came at the right time since all were tired and hot.

All members present voted on making this outing annual and we departed looking forward with much enthusiasm to next July. The members absent sure missed a day of enjoyment.

Proves His Alibi;
Stop Sign Stolen

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.—The motorist didn't pay the fine. Haled before a city traffic court on a charge of passing a stop sign at an intersection, the driver protested that there was no stop sign at the intersection.

So Sergt. C. L. Dobbs investigated. There was no stop sign. Someone had stolen it.

'Old Jake' Still Is Running His Ferry

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—High banks deflected most of the night light from the stream; geometric shapes hulked higher above it; and down on the water, his single lantern barely illuminating his passengers, a big, bearded figure sculled his single-oared ferry between low landing stages.

It might have been Charon piloting his charges across the Styx. In reality, it was "Old Jake"—Jake Anderson, who for 43 years has sculled his 25-foot rowboat across the water, carrying passengers at three cents a head.

Almost under the shadows of New York's downtown skyscrapers, Old Jake or one of his two assistants transports his customers by one of the oldest means of commerce known to man. Great ships ply the Hudson river within sight of the little ferry; powerful tugs rock the boat as they pass through the gap, but Old Jake and his side still propel the craft by that single oar at the stern.

The gap is a strip of water joining New York harbor and a ship basin two miles inside Jersey City. Its 300-foot width separates a railroad terminal from a populous industrial and residential area, so the three-cent ferry was established more than 50 years ago to save commuters a long walk around the basin.

Old Jake was a Scandinavian seaman until he took up the ferry's car in 1898. He is 83 years old now, his friend says. It's hard for him when a cold wind sweeps through the gap and ice floes block the boat. But on mild days he takes his turn.

If a passenger comes to the gap and sees the boat on the far side, Old Jake shouts a lusty "halloo!" In time, he saunters down to the landing and sculls his way across the gap.

If it takes 10 minutes, no one complains. The customers agree with the skipper: The service is certain and that's all one should ask for three cents.

Mibs in 'Kerchief Give Clue to Robbery Mystery

CLEVELAND.—A soiled handkerchief knotted around six marbles was the clue that solved the great burglary mystery at the Friendly Gas Service station, which has been looted three times in the past few weeks.

Albert Fouldner, the attendant, found the handkerchief on the morning following the third burglary. During the day he noticed a 10-year-old boy nervously loitering about the station. When Fouldner walked up to him with the handkerchief, the boy began to cry. He admitted the handkerchief was his and that he and five other boys, ranging in age from 8 to 11, had been robbing the station.

Bottles of pop and pennies from the station desk was all that was ever taken.

British Flier's Wedding
Delayed by Two Sinkings

CAPETOWN, UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.—This business of trying to get married with a war going full blast has stumped John Emery, Royal Air force officer.

Emery, who sailed from England for South Africa to marry Miss Doreen Turner of Toronto. But he chose the 13,581-ton Cunard liner Athenia, which sank September 4, 1938, west of Ireland.

Along with other survivors Mr. Emery found himself back in England. Later he was ordered to South Africa.

In March, Miss Turner set out across the Atlantic to meet Mr. Emery, who has been waiting here for three weeks.

She chose the Egyptian liner Zam-zam and now is a German prisoner.

Texan Tells Off Police
Then Gets Out of Bounds

EL PASO.—Pat Gordon realized a lifelong ambition when he ordered two policemen out of his house and got away with it—but the satisfaction was short-lived.

The officers, called to a tourist camp where Gordon lives, to answer a call concerning other persons, entered Gordon's cabin. He promptly ordered them to leave, stating that he had broken no law and was on his own property.

When the policemen stepped out of his cabin, Gordon followed and continued to "lay the law down to them."

As the police judge said later, Gordon stepped out of bounds when he did this. He was arrested and charged with disturbing the peace.

'Jump Happy' Parachutist
Takes Leap in His Sleep

ATLANTA.—First Lieut. Gene Padgett of the 501st Parachute Battalion, Fort Benning, Ga., thinks he must have been "jump happy."

He made a leap last week, he says, and his 'chute didn't open. He reached for the emergency rip cord, and nothing happened.

Fumbling for the rip cord, he was startled to find he did not have on his jump suit.

"Landing on your feet is the correct way to jump," he mused—and landed square on them, but I woke up on the ground 10 feet below the window of the bachelor officers' quarters."

He had been parachute jumping in his sleep.

Children Calmed in Beds
Of 40 Wounded Soldiers

LONDON.—Forty children, patients in a Cardiff infirmary began to cry when awakened by bombs during a recent raid. They cried still more when they had to leave their beds and go to a military hospital.

They were hurried to bed, but their crying went on. Then a nurse went to the next ward where wounded soldiers from Dunkerque were being treated and asked fathers to adopt the babies for the night.

The 40 children, still crying, were put in the men's beds and in a few minutes were asleep.

Bridgetender's Dog Knows All the Tugs
BOSTON.—Bridgetender John Lynch says his mongrel dog "Curley" knows every tug in Boston harbor by its whistle.
 The dog raises a fuss to get out and extend a greeting. Lynch says the dog usually makes a particular fuss when a navy tug goes past because the cooks always toss a ham bone ashore.

Prescribe Ways To Check Witches

'Hex' Country Superstitions Part of Daily Life.

HARRISBURG, PA.—Settled in the rich farming lands of southeastern Pennsylvania, the "Pennsylvania Dutch"—a number of whom trace their ancestry to the earliest colonial days—are famous for many things—thrift, prosperity, good farming, better cooking, religious sects, and a highly developed "superstition" that still influences the daily life of the family.

A. M. Aurand and Jr., author of several books on the local customs and history, has written a pamphlet detailing many of the superstitious beliefs of the region.

While a large number of our more common beliefs in "good and bad" omens, are incorporated in the superstitions of the "Dutch," the "hex" country has added a number to the list, particularly for combating witches.

Local legend, Aurand says, prescribes that "if you are bewitched lay a broom before your door. The first person to peek it up is the witch! Or if you think you are bewitched, baklava of the first person to borrow something. She is an other witch. Since all witches ride brooms, you can rid yourself of the intruder by sweeping her out the door. Then she'll turn into a black cat and run away."

Other witch lore cited by Aurand as "necessary knowledge" in the area to keep witches out of the house include a spring of St. John's Wort nailed over the door, salts good to keep out flies, a toad's foot nailed over both doors and windows, and a similar procedure with a horseshoe.

However, if the witch eludes you there are a number of ways to get rid of her. Prescribed methods are throwing salt in the fire; cut off the ears of a black cat, or shoot her with a gun loaded with hair.

Big Man-Made Cave in New York Is a Refrigerator

LEITCHWORTH PARK, N. Y.—An unnamed cave in Leitchworth park is a reminder of a $250,000 engineering mistake of many years ago.

The cave was started a century ago by ambitious canal builders who sought to extend a waterway from Runda to Onondaga, N. Y. The builders tried to tunnel through the mountain rather than have the canal skirt the mountain, and nature had won a battle.

The canal builders had planned to extend the tunnel 1,082 feet, with a height of 27 feet and a width of 20 feet. After their ambitious dream faded, the cave served as a hiding place for fugitive slaves during the Civil war.

In 1822 when the Genesee Valley railroad was replacing the canal, using the same right-of-way, railroad engineers also dreamed of a tunnel at the same spot. But they, too, gave up the idea.

Chilling gusts of air strike anyone approaching the entrance. Inside is a natural refrigerator large enough to hold a dozen carloads of meat though the entrance is only a little higher than a man's head. In the dark, unwholesome darkness, even a flashlight with a 1,000-foot beam makes little impression.

Acce Proves Right to Title by Saving Child

RED DEER, ALTA.—A big black Labrador, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Redman of the Parkville district, is a hero—he saved Catherine, 10, daughter of Corporal and Mrs. Kroeker, from being mauled by a ferocious bulldog.

The child was playing with two little companions on a street when the bulldog attacked. In vain the two companions endeavored to draw the dog off.

Suddenly a streak of black raced across the street engaged the bulldog in battle. While the two dogs were fighting the children were removed.

Catherine suffered cuts and bruises; Ace was not hurt.

Women in Britain Find Rations Melt the Bulges

LONDON.—Women who for years have been trying to fit a diet that would reduce those unwanted bulges have discovered that rationing is the ideal thing.

Many women are regaining slim lines they thought had gone forever. They are not only getting slimmer, but, also fitter, as is generally agreed by medical men, factory welfare officers and dietitians.

People now are in a better state of health than before the war, and many older people who suffered in health during the last war say that they feel much fitter in this one.

Tale of Hunger Is Brought Back By Mercy Ships

Sailors Wept at Sight of Children and Adults At Marseilles.

NEW YORK.—Swarms of hungry men, women and children at Marseilles, whose dragging steps and pallid faces brought tears to the eyes of American seamen, were described when the mercy ships Exmouth and Cold Harbor returned here after delivering food and medicines to unoccupied France and Spain.

Hundreds of cheering children, ship officers said, thronged the Marseilles piers and rushed aboard in search of food when the American Export Line freighter Exmouth steamed into the harbor recently, and the American Red Cross ship Cold Harbor which arrived a few days later. Forty French children tried to stowaway aboard the Exmouth when she left France.

Edward P. Labzertner, chief officer of the Exmouth, said, on his arrival here, that "nearly the whole town" was out to meet his ship.

"They're hungry over there," he said. "When we tied up at the dock so many people swarmed over the ship I thought they would go through the deck. You should have seen those hungry people. If you're not hard-boiled you could not help a couple of tears showing. Some of us who thought we were hard-boiled found that we weren't."

Cake Before Speeches.
 He told of a French Boy Scout who went aboard to deliver a formal greeting to Capt. Oskar Ljungstrom, skipper of the vessel, but who could not take his eyes off a piece of cake on the table long enough to get out his speech.

"They forgot their speeches and ate every crumb," the chief officer said. "Then the chief steward gave out gallons of coffee. The French women were so happy they pitched in and helped us wash the ship's dishes. They had seen real coffee and sugar in a long time."

On the day the ship was to leave for home, he said, most of the crew had to be detailed to pull stowaways out of their hiding places.

"They hid everywhere, from the crow's nest to the tanks at the bottom of holds," he said. "Kids were under the covers of lifeboats. How they got there we'll never know."

More Suffering in Spain.
 Officers of the Cold Harbor, which docked in the Hudson river at West Sixty-first street, told substantially the same story about the Marseilles throngs, but said that they had seen even more children suffering from pellagra and malnutrition at Cadiz and Seville, Spain. The ship discharged 4,200 tons of flour at the Spanish ports and 1,100 tons of milk and medicine at Marseilles.

In Marseilles, they said, the crew could hear the shouts of children on the pier when the ship was far out in the harbor. Waving American and French flags, the children shouted "Vive l'Amerique" and "Vive Roosevelt," until they were hoarse.

"It was the mass pallor and the brave attempt at liveliness in our presence of those foot-dragging, listless children that made some of the crew feel like bawling," a Cold Harbor officer said.

None of the crew, he said, met a single child begging for food ashore, but sailors from the ship spent their money buying meals for boys and girls.

Think Up Puzzlers for Draftees Sans Schooling

WASHINGTON.—A searching "literacy test" will be given prospective draftees who have not completed the fourth grade, the army disclosed.

Men will face stern rejection if they cannot answer such puzzlers as these:

"Can paper be used to write on?"
 "Which is larger, an inch or a foot?"

"Are there eight days in a week?"
 "An aim of the test is to find out whether a man can read and write well enough to enable him to learn to be a good soldier in a year."

Prospective draftees will be asked to read a simple essay, say on "insects," and they will face the following inquisition:

"Are all houses small?"
 "Are farmhouses close together?"
 "Do all people own their own homes?"

Arab, Never a Soldier, Is Demobilized 21 Times

VICHY.—A dispatch from Algiers told tonight that the case of Abdullah, an Arab who was demobilized from the French army 21 times without being mobilized once. He made a profession of getting out, and might have gone on doing it indefinitely if property had not turned his head.

Twenty times, with the aid of false papers, he was demobilized and each time he drew the usual 1,000-franc (nominally, $20) bonus. With the proceeds he bought 20 suits, 100 ties and other apparel.

Police knew no such Arab ever had such a wardrobe legally. They shadowed him, and he was being demobilized for the twenty-first time they arrested him. As an added touch, he was wearing a Croix de Guerre.

Mitzi Likes to Ride And Sound the Horn

NEWARK.—A crowd gathered around a parked car in which a bull terrier was sounding the horn.

Mrs. Joseph R. Britting of Irvington, explained in embarrassed tones that "Mitzi insists on accompanying us, and when we leave her for too long in the car she calls us by blowing the horn."

Armless Man Uses His Own Gadgets

Does More Minus Arms Than Most Do With Them.

DANVILLE, GA.—Vincent Hart finds his armless condition actually a handicap. At least he has done more without arms than most people do with them.

The 50-year-old man lost both arms under the wheels of a train eight years ago. Friends thought he would take advantage of his World war record and spend the rest of his life in government hospitals. But hospital life bored him, and he came home to Danville.

Since then he has built a house, developed a fine garden and designed several tools that take the place of his missing arms and hands.

When winter comes Hart holes in and studies languages, mechanics, and electricity. He eats only fruits and vegetables he has raised and preserved and warms himself with firewood he sawed with an ingenious contraption.

Hart now had a reading and writing acquaintance with French and Italian. He began the study of Spanish and liked it. So he went to Puerto Rico for five months and came home speaking Spanish like a native.

Hart's mechanical bent and studies stood him in good stead. He has a room full of gadgets which he attaches to the stub of one of his arms, slings over his shoulder, or holds between his teeth. With them he can do almost everything except shave or break eggs. He lets the town barber shave him, and as for eggs, he said he never liked them much.

His hammer, saw and knives are fitted to stiff leather straps that tie to the stub of his arm. They do his heavy work. In addition he shoots a gun, cooks, weeds his garden, plants seed and writes legible hand with the aid of other gadgets.

Hart said he found his handicap a challenge which he couldn't let pass. And in overcoming it, he said, he discovered a new meaning and joy in life.

Can't Enlist in Canada, New Yorker Kills Self

MONTREAL.—James D'Elia, 27 years old, of 1414 Park avenue, New York, hanged himself in the wardrobe of a hotel room here because he was rejected when he tried to join the Canadian army, it was disclosed. A previous suicide attempt had failed. A verdict of suicide was returned at a coroner's inquest.

D'Elia disclosed in a letter to his wife that he had first tried to take his life last Saturday by swallowing 14 sleeping pills, but "the only effects were that I slept until Monday."

D'Elia said he had come to Canada not to kill himself but to join the army. "But I have failed at the army, too, because I am an Italian," the letter said.

D'Elia also left letters addressed to his mother, Mrs. Rose D'Elia; his son, Frank; his sister, Therese; and a number of friends.

New Magnesium Sources Open to Late Process

WASHINGTON.—A little factory in the Northwest holds the answer to a question defense officials here are asking anxiously—can the United States produce sufficient magnesium to meet the expanding needs of the defense program?

In a small experimental plant at Pullman, Wash., bureau of mines experts are working to perfect a new process through which magnesium can be produced from an ore found throughout the West.

Present production of magnesium, for which the OPM recently invoked mandatory priorities, involves the electrolysis of magnesium chloride, derived from saline wells or sea water. If the new process, a complicated electrothermic reduction of the ore, is successful, extensive new sources of supply of the vital metal can be tapped.

Germans Use Telescope To Spy on U. S. Forts

SAN FRANCISCO.—The German consulate has installed a six-inch telescope in its new quarters "to keep an eye on everything that goes on in the Golden Gate," W. W. Chapin, chairman of the San Francisco planning commission, said.

Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, German consul-general, and his staff moved to an old $44,000 mansion on Pacific Heights, which overlooks the forts and army posts flanking the entrance to San Francisco bay. Chapin said the telescope would make even the army's gun batteries at Fort Baker, Fort Barry and Fort Miley "appear just across the street."

CONGRESSMAN PETE JARMAN SPONSORS THE DOBBINS BILL

He Is Convinced That The Price Will Aid The Alabama Farmer

Simultaneously with his introduction of the Dobbins Milk Bill in Congress, Representative Pete Jarman of the Sixth District, released the following statement for publication:

The Congress has long recognized the necessity of affording aid to the farmer in his unequal struggle for parity with the industrial worker. It has been natural for me to consistently subscribe to all reasonable proposals designated to carry out this policy.

The recent wholesale rejection of selectees by the Army has revealed what most physicians and nutritionists have long warned us of, that nearly forty per cent of our boys are unfit for military duty. Most of these rejections were due to malnutrition or defects attributable thereto. That such a condition should exist in a land of plenty, where surpluses of a number of crops are so great that storage space for them has become a major problem, is unthinkable and intolerable, and must be corrected if at all possible.

W. D. Dobbins, a very successful business man of Alabama who was born and reared in the Black Belt section of my Congressional District, has, after years of study of American nutritional problems, conceived a plan that will both aid the farmer and tend to alleviate and prevent malnutrition among our children and future generations. His plan is to provide all children, of fourteen years of age or under, a sufficient quantity of milk to supply the necessary calcium and vitamins to prevent malnutrition during this important growing period.

After a careful investigation and mature consideration of this plan during several months, I have decided to introduce and sponsor in Congress a bill to effectuate it. It is my firm conviction that this bill will prove a good investment to the tax payers of America, with little or no cost to them.

The great war raging in Europe, which threatens to engulf us as well, creates the necessity that we spend vast sums for National defense. All of this money cannot be repaid in our generation. This, and the uncertainty of the future, will place enormous burdens and responsibilities upon the children of today and the generations of tomorrow. Since we must bear these heavy burdens and responsibilities, we should, and must, provide for their normal growth and development, both physically and mentally. We cannot afford not to attempt some plan to safeguard this development and prevent the deplorable condition of forty per cent of our people reaching maturity as suffering from malnutrition.

I am equally convinced that this bill will aid the farmer, who constitutes the backbone of this country, as well as the children, by greatly contributing toward a stable and profitable agriculture. It will provide him with a cash market for this essential and diversified farm product. To produce the additional milk which will be needed under this bill will consume most, if not all, of the surplus grain and feed stuff, which is depressing the farmer's market. Much of the land now being used in the production of surplus grains and cotton will be diverted to the production of milk, further effecting the present surplus. Placing this land in pastures will materially contribute to soil conservation. All of this will cause the farmer to be more self-sufficient and will save much of the cost of future farm aid. It is very probable that these savings will be sufficient to pay the entire cost of this humanitarian program which will conserve American youth while conserving American soil.

A quart of milk a day per child will reduce the checks of American children on the pastures green and the farmers' purses.

Four Perfect Bridge Hands Ends the Game

DALLAS. — It won't happen again in 647,000,000,000 bridge hands. Four Dallas winners received perfect bridge hands.

What's more, the hands all fell in the proper sequence, the dealer having the low suit and the other players with progressively higher cards. That deal broke up the game for the evening.

Claims He Knows Of Rich Gold Mine

Felon Hauls 'Lost Dutchman' Back Into the News.

FLORENCE, ARIZ.—The lure of Superstition Mountain and the legendary Lost Dutchman gold mine once more are back in the news.

Latest indication to insist he knows the "true story" of the Lost Dutchman mine is a life-term inmate of the Arizona state prison, who said he wanted "forever to shut the mouth of every man" who claims to know the location of the fabulous mine.

The 63-year-old convict, who was a prospector before he was sentenced to a life term for murder of a fellow gold-seeker, said he knew where the mine was and would reveal its location to "some man of reputable character."

The inmate asserted the mine is located in the Superstition mountain range where, according to legend, the Spanish conquistadors first uncovered the rich lode. He said it was "in the direction" of the mountain and was located under "a black oak cone."

The secret of the Lost Dutchman mine supposedly was lost after the Spaniards were massacred by Indians. It was reputedly rediscovered by an old prospector named Jacob Walz, who was called "The Dutchman." When Walz died several decades ago, the secret of the mine's location—if there is one—died with him.

Foresight Is Used in Placing Seekers for Jobs

QUINCY, MASS.—More than 100 job-seekers have been aided in finding their proper niche by a group of nine successful business men who formed a "job clinic" here a year ago.

It was the idea of a wealthy Quincy banker and philanthropist who invited a board consisting of a newspaper editor, a power company official, the secretary of the chamber of commerce, the superintendent of schools, the city librarian, business executives and two vocational directors, to undertake the project. This group meets once a week and interviews applicants for guidance.

They advise the job-seeker to know exactly what kind of a position he wants and if he wants to be doing that type work 10 years later. They suggest he arrange all his assets, line them up and prepare an intensive campaign to sell his services.

Shepherd Uses His Knife

To Kill Mountain Lion

SANTA ROSA, N. M.—Felipe Sinerios is 63 years old. He has herded sheep most of his life. Not so long ago he glanced at his flock on the Milagro ranch and saw the sheep scatter in fear of something among them.

The lean, active rancher hurried to the spot. Before him a dog-sized lion was attacking the sheep, but when Sinerios came nearer it released the animal and sprang at him.

Sinerios fought with his hands while the mountain lion used its claws. The man won. Sinerios forced the lion's jaws shut, held it long enough to draw a knife from his pocket and killed it. He carried the lion to town to have his lacerated hands treated. To back his story he brought the lion's carcass.

Old Indian Chief Is Irked by His 'Wild' Young Men

Chee Dodge of the Navajos Blames Program of Education.

PHOENIX, ARIZ.—Chee Dodge, big chief of the Navajos for more than half a century, thinks the government's education program is making the young Indians "wild."

Chee Dodge should know, for he was born on the 16,000,000-acre reservation in northern Arizona from 1884 until 1938. The young Indians used to be quiet and obedient, but now—well, Chee Dodge borrows the white man's phrase and says they're "going to the dogs."

"The Indian boys used to be tame," he said. "Now they go to school. When they come back they are wild. It looks to me like the government's going to brand them one of these days."

Boys to Progress.

Chee Dodge was named the big man on the reservation in 1884 and held the post until "these young educated fellows came along to tear up the country."

He insists that he's neither Democrat nor Republican, but he just can't understand this business of "scientific soil surveying."

Last summer, Chee Dodge pointed out, the government had the Navajos round up many of their horses and sell them to preserve rangeland.

"They sell all the horses," Chee said. "And pretty soon they sell all the cattle and sheep."

"I would like to know how the Indians make a living."

He laments that he hasn't anything against these new things taught in the schools. He doesn't know much about education because they didn't have schools when he was young.

Irked by Impetuosity.

The biggest complaint against the "young fellows" is that they "think they can change everything overnight."

"Maybe it's O.K.," he concedes. "We wait and see tomorrow, maybe."

One of the things Chee Dodge likes to talk about is the time he saw Kit Carson, the famous Indian scout. That was when Chee Dodge was four years old and Carson and other scouts were rounding up the Navajos and taking them to Fort Sumner in New Mexico.

"It was a young kid then," he said.

"They got the young fellows and the old men and women and the people up there. But all the big chiefs were hiding in the Grand canyon."

Chee Dodge has visited Phoenix and likes the new state capital, because it's nice and warm in winter and because he gets to stay out pretty late with his friends, taking in the bright night spots.

Regularly, he adds hastily, his bedtime is nine o'clock.

Arizona Extends Solace to Ghosts Of the Old West

Territorial Prison Which Housed Many Toughies Now a Museum.

YUMA, ARIZ.—If the ghost of Pearl Hart, first "lady" stage robber of the old West, and that of Swede Rogers, as cool a murderer as the first, are to be put to rest, they are unhappy today, there's a reason for it.

The old Arizona Territorial prison, which served as "home" for so many years of the old West, and scores of other toughies of the old West, has been converted from a grim showplace for tourists to a respectable and staid museum to house relics of days gone by.

But as far as old-timers were concerned, the new sign reading "Arizona Territorial Museum" wasn't at all needed to remind them of the stirring days of a half-century ago for the stories of Lady Pearl and her rip-roaring companions will live on.

Prison Built in 1875.

The old adobe prison was established in 1875 when Arizona was established a territory. It was built of adobe and its walls ranged between four and eight feet in thickness.

Advocates of modern scientific means of criminal rehabilitation would gasp at the solitary confinement chamber—a small dungeon whose only ventilation was provided by a narrow hole running straight through the thick ceiling. Locked up there the more recalcitrant prisoners became meek and repentant within a day or two.

The stories of Lady Pearl Hart and Rogers are the most romantic tales connected with the old prison. Pearl was a dance hall girl who said she turned to robbing stage coaches because she needed money to return to the home of her invalid mother in Ohio. Arrested and sentenced to five years in the prison, Pearl decided to give officials as much trouble as she could—until a handsome young musician, convicted of a mining camp slaying, came to an adjoining cell.

Prisoners Fell in Love.

The story is that Pearl and the young musician fell in love, so Pearl chose to reform, get out of prison as soon as possible and marry the young man. She was married in the prison kitchen and her cooking so tickled the palates of the convicts that many of them (so the story goes) withdrew their applications for parole.

She was released before her five years were up, but the prison records unfortunately do not show whether she ever became a musician lover outside prison walls.

Rogers, an arrogant rumbler who professed to be a graduate of Oxford university, was one of the coolest figures in the old West. His dress was impeccable, but no one dared accuse the quick-shooting Rogers of being a dandy.

Tuscaloosa is black-topping and otherwise improving several of its streets.

U. S. Dept. Agriculture Surplus Marketing

July 21st, and contracts for processing fresh peaches into pulp have already been awarded in that market. Fresh peaches were placed on the Surplus Food Stamp list as of July 1, and it is anticipated that bids for canned fresh peaches will be accepted within a short time. Your report on the situation in Alabama has been called to the attention of our Purchasing Division, and they have agreed to one of their representatives into the area in the immediate future.

Current reports from several of the market price prevailing at the present time on early varieties of peaches may be attributed in part to shipment of undersized and immature fruit from all of the early states. The principal reason for the weak market, however, lies in the adverse effect of recent wet weather upon the crop and carrying quality of the fruit. The matter of condition may be doubted, but it is expected that as the weather improves and the later varieties begin moving to market.

I trust that this limited discussion will serve to outline the plans of the Department in regard to extending assistance to the fresh peach industry. At request of Senator Bankhead, secretary, a copy of this letter is being forwarded to his office.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) E. W. GAUMINZ.

LABOR

President Roosevelt established a committee on fair employment practices in the Office of Production Management to prevent discrimination against defense workers or Government employees because of race, creed or national origin. The six members represent the CIO, AFL, newspapers and radio, and the Negroes.

OPM Associate Director General Hillman announced that 800,000 AF of building trade union members have reached a stabilization agreement with the Government calling for no strike on defense projects for the duration of the emergency and no stoppage of work because of jurisdictional disputes "or any other cause."

Mr. Hillman told railroad officials and labor executives in Congress that to schedule of Navy contracts, if road workers could be shifted to defense work under a "voluntary labor priority" plan, Mr. Hillman said, estimated 1,000,000 workers will be needed by the aircraft industry in July 1942, as compared with the 200,000 employed today. He said $550 million worth of new shipbuilding industry where 375,000 are now employed.

NAVY

Navy Secretary Knox presented a special Naval ordinance flag to companies who are ahead of production schedules of Navy contracts. He said firms who are "all out" for defense will be permitted to fly the flag and their employees will be allowed to wear in their lapels an "E" traditional Navy mark of excellence. The Maritime Commission said the entire shipbuilding program is nearly sixty days ahead of schedule.

PRICES

Price Administrator Henderson said the baking industry to reduce operating expenses instead of raising prices. He said ingredient costs have risen half a cent a loaf. Bakers and Grocers have recommended maximum prices at 10 per cent above present minimum.

AGRICULTURE

OPM Associate Director General Hillman said agriculture will be represented in all of the recently created OPM Commodity Sections concerned with "commodities produced by agriculture or necessary to the production of agriculture."

ALUMINUM COLLECTION
OCD Director LaGuardia announced that on July 30 local aluminum collection committees will send mail collected in the voluntary program of the 49 States. He said the Treasury Department's state procurement offices will then offer the scrap smelters having defense contracts OPACS prices.

The merchants of Clanton are re-stocking ready for their Fall Trade. They have been stocked to their full order to get goods at the low-possible price, therefore it is easy on the customer this fall when prices are high. Crops have been good and the markets are better than they were for the past several years. Prices are higher and the average customer is more able to buy than he has been in a long time.

All in all things just look a lot better for the farmer, and when things look brighter for the farmer, they look brighter for the merchant. When you are in town this week, stop at the stores and see for yourself what a stock they have secured your fall buying—the clerks will be glad to have you visit them.

Chilton Gives 379 Pounds Of Scrap Aluminum

Mayor Cohen Stapp announced Monday that Chilton County had sent 379 pounds of aluminum to Birmingham as this County's quota.

The national campaign ended last Saturday, and though some days will pass before an estimate can be made of results, prospects are that the total will go far above the hopes and predictions of those in-charge.

REVIVAL AT SAMARIA

There will be a revival at Samaria Church beginning August 10th. Bro. O. A. Davis, pastor of the Clanton Baptist Church will do the preaching.

Thorsby Baptists Schedule Revival

Services To Begin On Sunday, August 17

The Thorsby Baptist Church revival will begin on Sunday August 17. Rev. J. Titus Aldridge, pastor of the church will do the preaching. Services are planned for both morning and evening the time of service will be announced later. Mr. Aldridge, a graduate of Howard College, recently came to Thorsby from Dora, Alabama where he was pastor of the church there. He has been active in State work for the past several years, conducting revivals at Daily Vacation Bible Schools and other important church activities. He is in Tusculum, Tenn., conducting a daily vacation Bible school. He preached during the revival held in the Thorsby Church last week and a few weeks ago held a meeting at the Thomas Baptist Church in Thomas, Ala.

Special prayer services are planned for this week and next at the Church and in homes about the community. Dr. Ezell, who is well known to Chilton County, will be here for services leading to the revival, beginning Wednesday night, August 6, and continuing through Friday, the 8th. Everyone is cordially invited to come and hear Dr. Ezell. Prayer services will be held at the church and in the homes during next week.

Various committees were appointed by the pastor last Sunday to ascertain the many needs that arise in the planning of a genuine revival. These committees are as follows: Enrollment committee, Mrs. Leonard Lowery, Chairman; Mrs. M. E. Will (Continued on Page 3)

Quail On Toast For Chilton Sportsmen

Mr. Tom Ford of the State Department of Conservation has recently advised Mr. Stapp, president of the Chilton County Game Conservation Club, that the State Game Farm has approximately 6,000 of the finest quail ever raised there. The requirements are that at least eight land owners in a county make application and contract for the care of the quails before any will be shipped to the county.

Land owners who desire quail from the State Game Farm are urged to get in touch with Mr. Stapp at an early date.

Mr. Ben C. Morgan, chief of Game, Fish and Seafood Division has advised Mr. Stapp that if the sportsmen of the county will put up $50 the Department would secure from the Pittman-Robertson Funds an additional $150 making a total of $200 all of which would be used to buy seed, fertilizer, etc., for game in this county.

Alabama's Young Democracy Gains Strength With Harmony

JIM SMITH, of Tusculum, newly elected president of the Alabama League of Young Democrats.

MRS. DOROTHY VREDEBURGH, of Vredenburg, Young Democratic National Committeewoman.

All of State's Factions At Peace Within Its Ranks

Deriving strength from the harmony within its ranks, the Young Democracy of Alabama is preparing to make its voice heard at the coming national convention of the Young Democratic Clubs of America which will open at Louisville, Ky., Aug. 21. At the State convention held at Montgomery in the closing days of July, the Young Democrats of Alabama marshalled a show of strength never before attained. Present were 246 accredited delegates representing 66 of Alabama's 67 counties with more than as many additional members attending.

While the Young Democrats are an organization, went on record in support of the national administration's foreign policy and domestic policies as well, possibly the most significant thing about the convention from Alabama's point of view, was that the leadership of every political faction in the State was present and able to mingle gracefully with the rest.

Gov. Dixon and Col. Graves broke bread at the barbecue. Handy Ellis and Clarence Inner, rivals for the seat of Lieutenant Governor, got together and hobnobbed happily before the camera. All in all the convention was a happy occasion in which factional differences were abated.

One of the important deeds of the convention was the unanimous endorsement voted for Joe Cordell Carr, Tennessee's young secretary of State, leading candidate for the national presidency. The convention elected W. J. Primm, Jr., of Montgomery, national committeeman, and as Mr. Primm has been working in Mr. Carr's behalf for the last 18 months, Alabama's active support at the national convention is assured.

Homier Matt Adams, now national president of Young Democratic Clubs of America, came down from his home in Illinois to address the Alabama hosts and enjoy their hospitality.

Just before the state convention adjourned the Young Democrats emphasized their intra-party impartiality by conferring life memberships upon Gov. Dixon, Col. Graves, Senator Bankhead and Senator Hill.

The Alabama organization went up state for its new president, electing Jim Smith, young Colbert County lawyer, now serving as deputy solicitor. Dropping down to Pike County the organization elected Oliver Brantley executive vice-president, Mrs. Dorothy Vredenburg, wife of Pete Vredenburg, Vredenburg, Ala., lumberman, was elected national committeewoman.

Vice-presidents from each of the State's congressional districts were elected as follows: J. E. Tait, Mobile, first district; Bob Kendall, Evergreen, second district; Alto Lee, Dothan, 3rd district; T. W. Bennett, Anniston, fourth district; Douglas Henslee, Gadsden fifth district; George Miller, Jr., Livingston, sixth district; Carl Elliott, Jasper seventh district; Horace Armstrong, Scottsboro, eighth district; Talbot Ellis, Birmingham, ninth district.

Methodist Church Closes Most Successful Revival

The two weeks meeting which closed in the Methodist Church of Clanton last Sunday night was a splendid revival. The song service and the children and young peoples' work was directed by Mr. Moody B. Cunningham of Memphis, Tenn. Mr. Cunningham goes from Clanton with the love and good wishes and prayers of the christian citizenship of Clanton for the fine christian spirit and the efficient service rendered while in our town. Dr. T. C. Cassaday, pastor of the Methodist church, did the preaching in the meetings. Dr. Cassaday reports that twelve new members were added to the rolls of the church during the meetings, making a total of forty-one since the first of February. The membership of the church is greatly revived and much encouraged because of the spiritual awakening in the community, and because of the growing spirit of brotherly love and cooperation be-

Coosa, Has Vital Role In Defense

Army Engineers Have Recommended Improve ments

W. J. Boles, in Birmingham News-Age-Herald:
Coosa River, along whose placid waters the Cherokee, the Creeks, the Alabamas and other Indian tribes hunted, fought and pursued their wild activities for untold ages before white men set foot on Alabama soil, is fast becoming one of the major national defense areas in the United States.

Already the home of numerous industries, using natural resources of their immediate communities, around through the greater part of the river's meandering course, and others, for which the federal government is spending many millions of dollars, are in process of construction.

Not only is the Coosa Valley the home of many industrial plants but it is the source of much of the electric energy that turns the wheels of industry and illuminates the homes and business establishments of the greater part of Alabama.

Congress now has before it, or soon will have, a proposal to improve the Coosa-Alabama waterway from Rome, Ga., to Mobile, Ala., for navigation, and incidentally to increase its hydro-electric production to supply the needs of the increasing industrial activity.

More than a century ago the federal government undertook removal of bars to navigation on the Coosa River and up to about 25 years ago had expended more than $2,000,000 in providing and maintaining a channel with a low-water depth of three feet. Sim-

Marketing and Purchasing Ass'n Met Thursday

More Than Two Hundred Attend Annual Meeting At City Hall, Clanton

Last Thursday the Chilton County Marketing and Purchasing Association held its first annual meeting at the City Hall in Clanton. There were a little more than 200 present. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mr. A. D. Headley, who called on Marvin Durbin, County FSA Supervisor, to discuss with the group the purpose of the meeting. Mr. Durbin also introduced the out-of-town guests who were Glenn H. Deffke, District RR Supervisor, Miss Cindy Lester, District Home Supervisor, and Mr. E. B. Johnston, Manager, Central Farmer's Coop. Inc. After explaining the purpose of the meeting and introducing the out-of-town guests, Mr. Durbin called on Mr. E. B. Johnston who explained to the group how the Central Farmer's Coop. had been assisting the farmers in Central Alabama, in saving on their purchases for the past four or five years. Mr. Headley and Mrs. Griffin, HM Supervisor, discussed the savings that had been made on purchases in Chilton County. It was pointed out that a little more than $2,027.00 had been saved during the current year.

The President next called on Miss Lester who made a short talk to the group. Marvin Durbin pointed out that a little more than 35,000 chicks had been placed with FSA borrowers in the county and discussed with the group plans for marketing cockerels. Mr. Headley called on Mr. Glenn H. Deffke who discussed with the group the future of the organization. The President appointed a nominating committee composed of Houston L. Fraywick, G. L. Griffin, and E. H. Williams, and the following officers were elected for next year: A. D. Headley, President, G. L. Griffin, Vice-president, Leonard S. McCraw, Secretary-Treasurer, Franklin Patterson and Robert E. Burks, member of Board of Directors. After the meeting adjourned, $742.00 was distributed in dividend checks to 99 farmers of the organization.

This Week In National Defense

President Roosevelt sent a special message to Congress saying "We stand, as we did in the closing months of 1915, at the beginning of an upward swing of the whole price structure," and asked authority to set ceilings for prices and rents, to purchase commodities when necessary to assure price stability, and to deal more extensively with excesses in installment credit.

He said the "facts today are frighteningly similar" to the situation in the last war when the wholesale price index increased nearly 140 per cent between October 1915, and June, 1920. In the past 60 days wholesale prices have risen more than five times as fast as during the preceding period since the outbreak of the war in Europe, he said.

"The whole production falters under inflation," he said, and "the unskilled worker, the white-collar worker, the farmer, the small business man and the small investor all find that their dollar buys ever less and less."

The Bureau of Labor Statistics announced its index of prices, as of July 26, stood at 88.8 per cent of the 1926 average 15 years ago. Mr. Price Administrator Henderson said the crisis in the Far East necessitates a price ceiling on raw silk and may make necessary a ceiling on tin prices. He asked dealers and customers not to pay prices for high grade waste paper above those prevailing July 26, "pending an investigation of the price structure."

ECONOMIC DEFENSE

President Roosevelt created an Economic Defense Board consisting of Vice-President Wallace, Chairman, seven Cabinet members, and such additional members as Mr. Wallace may select. The President said the new Board will formulate the nation's international economic policy, coordinate the economic activities of defense agencies and plan for post-war reconstruction.

Mark Remarks:

Says The Roanoke Leader: "The word 'defense' is now being used to cover a multitude of sins." Yes; also a multitude of sinners.

It isn't "daylight" saving time at all; it is "nightlight" saving time.

Alabama Mills at Greenville, paid off with silver dollars recently. I don't know anything that can make a fellow feel more like whistling, than the jingle of metal coins in his britches.

This horrible war is growing more terrible every day. Comes news that all the silk mills are to be closed down. That means that this writer will have to give up silk and go to wearing cotton socks. Isn't that awful.

This war should be called the World War for Trade Territory; for that is exactly what it is.

If there were no illiterates, what would the sophisticated do for some one to look down upon and pity.

Peace via the bomb and blitzkrieg route isn't peace at all; there may be a cessation of hostilities, but it will only be for the period of preparation for more bombs and blitzkriegs. Peace doesn't travel the road of the bomb and blitz.

HIGHLY APPRECIATED KIND WORDS

Washington, D. C. July 29, 1941
My dear Mark:

I was struck rather forcibly by the little item in last Thursday's News to the effect that you had celebrated your 70th birthday. It is hard to realize that so many years have passed by since it was my happy privilege to make acquaintance with you and your interesting group. My mind went back over the years and visited with you at Scottsboro, Talladega, and for several very pleasant years at Birmingham.

I do not have any misgivings that you will misunderstand an old friend's telling you that he considers you one of the finest characters he has ever known and that the friendship permitted him with you has been one of the brightest gems in his whole lifetime. We saw some tough days together, and we have seen some happy ones. I feel a sense of guilt in not having cultivated more closely the intimate friendship that was ours twenty years ago, but at no time has my esteem for you changed. I like to think of my pal, old Mark, as we were there in Birmingham together in the early 20's.

I hope your health is good and is able to sustain that unquenchable spirit that is the trademark of a fine character. I know that you are enjoying life because you have always enjoyed life and have always been able to see something good and something cheerful behind the blackest cloud. And so, my friend, I hail you and wish you sincerely many more happy birthdays.

Please convey to the Mrs. my very warmest personal feelings and remember me to the other Tuckers. I hope to be down in Alabama before very long, and if circumstances permit, I am certainly going to run by and shake your hand.

In the meantime, Mark good seth to you, God bless you, and for this time good bye.

Sincerely,
—BOB VAIL.

Congratulations to the veteran Editor Mark Tucker, of the Chilton County News on the celebration of his 70th birthday Monday, July 21st. May he and his devoted wife have many happy returns of the day and all their wishes be realized.—Livingston Southern Home.

Mark Tucker, editor of the Chilton County News, says: "I reached three score and ten Monday and didn't get a necktie, a shirt or a pair of socks—and that is news."

And ten what? Ten years off for good behavior! Congratulations and best wishes for many more years of good service for your county and the newspaper fraternity, and happiness for you and Mrs. Mark—Green County Democrat.

Graves Scores Again

A couple of weeks ago an effort was made in Roanoke to organize a Young Democratic Club for Randolph County, which was said to be the only county in the state not organized. The big coming attraction and incentive for organizing in a hurry was the state convention to be held in Montgomery.

When some of the young men had intended joining in good faith and innocence became convinced that the purpose of reorganizing the Young Democrats (so soon after the national election) was to further the candidacy of Bibb Graves in the forthcoming Democratic primaries, their interest slackened and the reorganization of local Young Democrats did not go through as planned.

The Young Demos held their state convention in Montgomery last week end, and the expected happened. They voted Bibb Graves a life membership in the organization and further endorsed his candidacy by going on record in favor of a trend away from 'centralization of government in the capital at Montgomery' and support of candidates who favor such policies. In addressing the convention the national president of Young Democratic Clubs (a citizen of Illinois) said that he was for a "third term for the nation in 1940 and for a third term for Bibb Graves in 1942."

Thus the Graves machine captured another convention for the Colonel in his sweep toward a third term. Most of the conventions and most of the newspapers in the state that have committed themselves have hopped aboard the bandwagon. The Dothan Eagle and The Talladega Daily News are two notable exceptions in the newspaper fraternity that come to mind.

The seeming landslide for Graves is hard to explain if it is as universal and as genuine as the propagandists represent it to be. Three years ago those candidates for governor who spoke out loudest against Graves extravagance received the most votes in the primaries.

Gravism appeared to be in permanent disfavor. The Dixon administration has enjoyed wide popularity and confidence these three years, and it got its start by remedying what it called abuses and rackets. of the Graves administration. Is the Graves noise coming from the rank and file of the taxpaying voters of Alabama, or are the politicians the main whoop-ers-uppers? —Roanoke Leader.

FUNDAMENTAL FACTS AND FANCIES

Compiled and Arranged by JOHN W. MAHAN

CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE—ACTIVE

The religion of Jesus the Christ, was something new and different in many respects from the old systems that preceded it. One of the most important of these was its motive spirit, which was and is, ACTIVE. Other systems were passive—their leaders said "Do not," while Jesus emphasized the other side and said "DO!" He carried out his teachings by example and demonstration in going about the country and doing good, helping those with whom he came in contact.

Teaching of Jesus in the Four Gospels

One difficulty the average person has had in the past is how to locate and learn the actual teachings of Jesus, on the fundamental foundations and facts of life. The "Red Letter" Testament gives the sayings and teachings of Jesus in his own words, as recorded by four of the disciples who were with him in his ministry. Their study will give a "Bird's Eye View" of what he sought to impress on the minds and hearts of the people who followed after and listened to him. Jewish thought, teachings and influence are apparent, though there is something above and beyond it, broader, deeper and more far-reaching in its scope. Its spirit is uplifting, ennobling and compelling. He not only spoke of and taught the higher nobler and unselfish life, but actually gave a living demonstration of his teachings, when to do so, brought opposition, persecution and finally death. "Never man spoke like this man,"—and never man so lived.

Teachings of Paul in His Epistles

The apostle Paul stands out as one of the most unique persons in all history. A finished scholar, learned at the feet of the famous teacher, Gamaliel; a Hebrew of the Hebrews, yet a Roman citizen in his own right. Clear, lucid, enlightening and compelling in his arguments; confident in his knowledge and positive in his statement of known facts. Persistent, untiring and unceasing in his efforts to plant, propagate and develop into world-wide influence and permanence, the faith to which he was so thoroughly converted and to which he gave unreservedly his whole being. To this Apostle to the Gentiles, is due more credit for the building and spreading of the Christian religion than to any one else. The study of his epistles will amply reward any one interested in the Christian faith, and be given unanswerable arguments for its acceptance and belief.

Teachings of the Other Apostles

Peter, James and Jude, all contribute to the general fund of ideas and information on the subject of the Christian doctrine, belief and practice. The study of their writings will be helpful to an earnest and interested student.

GOD—A SPIRIT

That there is a God or a Supreme Being and Creator, is the belief of even the most ignorant savage. The conception of His nature and attributes as well as His dwelling place, have been the subjects of innumerable arguments, none of which have been definitely settled or agreed upon. "God is a Spirit," is a definite statement in the Bible and is accepted as a truth here, as it coincides with present-day facts and discoveries by science.

Erroneous Ideas

In the early days of man's development, his idea of God was that of a Plan Now To Plant Oats Early Is Advice

It's never too early—but often too late—to figure on doing a good job of planting oats.

For this reason and because the best crops of oats harvested this spring were those planted early in the fall, Alabama farmers have already begun making plans to get their oats in during the early part of September. A great deal of oat seed trading is being carried on and many farmers have selected the land where their oats are to be planted. Word is that rust-resistant varieties of smut treated seed will be planted.

J. C. Frink, assistant extension agronomist, Auburn, advises farmers to give attention to their oat crop this year by resolving early to correctly plant and fertilize the crop.

literal Super-human Being, with all power and wisdom. The general belief was, that his abiding place was located high up in the heavens above the earth. That idea and belief continued on down to comparatively recent times, when it was discovered that the firmament above is only a vast expanse of space, with no foundation on which to locate and firmly fix the literal struts of gold, walls of jasper and pearly gates of our early teaching.

Imagination has always had full sway when man wished to speculate on an abiding place for the hereafter with some One to pay homage to and worship, and Heaven with his God, was the ideal of his desire.

Will Certainly Be The Man

We notice that Editor Coleman of the Greene County Democrat has this to say in regard to next year's governor's race: "We are not anticipating any revenue next year from political advertising in the governor's race. At the present it seems such a one-sided affair, there will be no need to advertise. We don't like the outlook, but there isn't anything we can do about it."

We will agree with Editor Coleman on the "one-sided" part of his statement. We believe it will be absolutely foolish for anyone to run against the "Little Colonel" with any hope of winning.

We disagree with his statement on the outlook. We believe Bibb Graves is certainly the man for governor right now. He has experience, has done more for the state in many ways than any other man that has ever lead the state, and will certainly be the man to lead the state in the uncertain times we are now experiencing and will probably experience in the future.—Sumter County Journal.

It doesn't seem to be a question of who will be the next governor, but who will get to be Bibb Graves campaign committee chairman.—Southern Democrat.

Use of Good Cockerels Boosts Egg Production

A farmer poultryman can boost egg production in his flock about eggs per hen annually by purchasing only chicks sired by Record of performance or other pedigreed cockerels, says John E. Ivey, extension poultryman.

Cockerels, too qualify for U. S. Record of Performance rating the National Poultry Improvement Plan, must be from hens laying 200 eggs a year. The NEIP is an operative effort to improve poultry flocks.

91 YEARS OF PROGRESS

A Historical Tour of the Louisville & Nashville R.R.

On April 27, 1886, the Old Reliable started to extend its lines from Corbin towards the mineral wealth of Bell and Harlan counties, Ky. Somewhat later, upon reaching Pineville in 1888, after thorough investigation and much discussion, it built a railroad through Middleboro and Cumberland Gap up through Virginia to a connection with the Norfolk and Western at what is now Norton, Va., so named in honor of L. & N. president Eckstein Norton. This line was completed on May 15, 1891, a feature of its construction being the nearly-mile-long tunnel at Cumberland Gap. The completion of the line lent impetus to the growth of Middleboro, founded a short while before as a coal, iron and steel center by English capital.

The L. & N. acquired the Kentucky Central Railway in 1891. In Alabama, the completion of its lines into the Cahaba coal fields, shortening the haul to the Gulf ports, led subsequently to the formation of the Export Coal Company in 1897, and in 1895 to that of its successor, the Gulf Transit Company. This was L. & N.-owned and its two steam freighters, The August Belmont and The E. O. Smith, carried coal to foreign ports and returned home with diversified cargoes. The formation of the Company's foreign freight department in 1899, was a direct result.

Extensive shops were completed at both Howell, Ind., and Decatur, Ala., in the early part of 1890. The Mammoth Cave Railroad, which was completed in 1886, and which for a great many years, with quiet equipment, handled the bulk of the travel to nature's subterranean wonder, connected with the L. & N. at Glasgow Junction, Ky.

Although the construction and acquisition of new lines is nowadays comparatively rare, nevertheless, the Old Reliable continues to build. Now, no less than then, it strives to render the best possible service, and to this end it constantly improves its operations and modernizes its enlarging its physical plant. It strives always to please the public by rendering safe, fast, economical and efficient service.

Farmers Are Trained To Run Terrace Lines

In an effort to help complete the terracing job in Alabama, around 250 farmers are receiving training in this work under the supervision of extension and soil conservation service personnel in every county. Those trained will be able to run terrace lines and plan water disposal systems for other farmers in their communities.

It is expected that a million acres will be terraced this fall since farmers have come to realize more the importance of terracing a soil and water conservation program and because of the help afforded them under the AAA program to carry out this practice. J. B. Wilson, extension agricultural engineer, Auburn, is urging that mules and slip scrapes, as well as tractors and plows, be used in clearing the terraces after those being trained have run the lines.

Farmers Are Warned Against Inflation

Edward A. O'Neal, president, American Farm Bureau Federation, and P. O. Davis, director, Alabama Extension Service, have issued statements warning farmers of the danger of "wild inflation" if they drive prices as high as the traffic will bear.

"I counseled farmers to stick to the reasonable demands we have made for 20 years," said President O'Neal. "We have parity, therefore let us be thankful."

"Let us not make the mistake of getting greedy and insisting on getting more out of the party just because we could possibly get higher prices during the emergency period."

Emphasizing the same idea, Director Davis said:

"Prices of farm products must be up to parity level. I do not believe that in the long run they should be much above parity. If this occurs the reaction had will almost certainly be more severe than the temporary gain. Prices too high or too low are unsound in anything."

Rev. James Wesley Reese, now 85, Ft. Payne, a superannuated Methodist minister, had the distinction of serving 14 years on one circuit and lived 13 years in one parsonage.

Larger Fall Garden Planned By Farmers

Fall gardens in Alabama are being planned on a larger scale to overcome early droughts, and to increase the amount usually canned at that season.

Where the gardens have been fallowed after spring vegetables have been harvested the land is free of weeds and should make a good crop, according to Lyle Brown, extension horticulturist, Auburn. It is better not to turn land if it is in good workable shape but to plant by disturbing the soil as little as possible.

Bunch beans, carrots, field peas, rutabagas, beets, Irish potatoes, fall cabbage and tomatoes are being planted at this time by gardeners over the State.

Woman Is Bombed So Many Times Friends Shun Her

But She Always Manages to Keep One Jump Ahead Of Raiders.

LONDON.—Mrs. Ellen Connolly, cashier in a provisors warehouse, has been jolted by German bombs eight times, but she always manages to keep one jump ahead of them.

She has had so many bombs fall close to her that her friends say: "Where do you live; we want to live somewhere else."

Her raid experiences started last September when she lived in a Bermondsey flat with her mother and three sisters. "Things got bad one night," she said. "We went to a trench shelter. There were about 150 persons there, many women and children. About 11 o'clock there was a sudden blast against the shelter door. People shouted and started running. The door jammed. Somebody cried 'Fire' and we were frightened. Finally the wardens got a trap door open and we could see the light from many fire bombs which landed in the square. We got under a railroad arch and stayed there until the raid was over about 4 a. m.

Frightened by Mouse. "A few weeks later my mother and I were visiting my sister who lives in a basement flat not far away. About 9 p. m., there were several big explosions. We thought the building was going to fall down but it didn't. A mouse ran across the floor and that really scared us. We stayed there until the raid was over in the morning. When we went out we found everything smashed, broken glass and wreckage everywhere, and people looking for their relatives. A bomb hit one of the railway arches where 200 or more were killed.

"Another time a bomb hit just across the road and killed several persons. My aunt was coming to see us and she was blown across the street. Her hair was down and her coat torn off and she was thrown on her face.

"About that time I moved to Kensington. I had had enough. But mother wouldn't move. I was going home one night after a cinema on the underground and felt a terrific jolt as we arrived at a station. The whole train shook. We got out and found glass all over the street and some people badly cut.

Bomb Crashes Nearby.

"Another time I was sitting in my flat when a bomb fell near by. Our lights went out and the roller shades snapped up. The door lock was sprung so we couldn't open it. Some people were killed by a direct hit on a block of flats.

"Later I was near Elephant and Castle when a heavy raid started. I finally found a bus and started home. It was pitch black except for the flashes. Finally we heard a bomb falling and we thought it would hit the bus. The driver 'stepped on it' and the bus was spared. It was pitch black except for the flashes. Finally we heard a bomb falling and we thought it would hit the bus. The driver 'stepped on it' and the bus was spared. It was pitch black except for the flashes. Finally we heard a bomb falling and we thought it would hit the bus. The driver 'stepped on it' and the bus was spared.

"I moved again, to a basement flat near Palace gate. About the end of January a bomb fell in the street and broke a water main. The water poured into my flat through the broken windows. Glass was everywhere. Water was underfoot when the hall porter came and got me upstairs."

Find Average Home Room Smaller Than in 1926

CHICAGO.—During the last 15 years the average American home has decreased one room in size, Mortgage Bankers Association of America free show. Eastern homes average a half room larger than homes in other American districts, according to a survey. Room averages now and 15 years ago: Eastern home is 5½ against 6½. Southern and Middle West is five against six. Western is five against "over five."

The rate of family increase in the last decade was twice the population increase rate. "But the number of persons per family has decreased," said Dean R. Hill, president of the association. Because of more and smaller families, "more but apparently smaller houses are in prospect," Hill predicted.

Signs Seem to Challenge Fort Worth Tool Thieves

FORT WORTH.—R. B. Myrick, a local painter, will tell you that there is "no humor among thieves." Recently one of the windows in Myrick's car was broken and he patched it with a board. On the board he was watching.

"This car is being watched. If you break in you'll have to trust to luck."

His challenge soon was accepted. A thief broke in and stole approximately $25 in tools. Unchagrined, Myrick repaired the window and repeated the warning.

A few days later the same, or another thief, read the sign and thought Myrick was joking. He broke in and stole more tools.

Shelby Can Grow Peaches Too

Positive proof that good peaches can be grown in the Montevallo section was presented by Mr. R. L. Woolley, Wednesday morning when he brought to town a basket of Elbertas as fine as anyone could ask for. Mr. Woolley has about 60 or 75 trees on his farm just north of town on the Siluria Road. He has had excellent production this year and has sold his entire crop locally. Montevallo need not look to other sections for good peaches. We can grow them here equal to the best—Montevallo Times.

Lauderdale county's births for June doubled the number of deaths.

Believes The World Goes Screwy

Jack Spratt, who always has an interesting anecdote, told last week a young Negro, a perfect blue specimen who could not "read and write" and so was refused for Army service. The Negro also could get a job at a sawmill because he was a fighter and was always "screwable." That seems like a heck of a policy to refuse a man in the Army who is a fighter, and refuse him a job where brawn is wanted. Because he was a fighter. We don't believe the world goes round and round—believe it goes screwy.—(Great County Democrat.)

Five thousands farmers and cultural leaders from over Alabama and adjoining states recently met in Florence to honor Edward A. O'Neal former president Lauderdale County Farm Bureau, the Alabama Farm Bureau and now president of the American Farm Bureau, to celebrate the party victory won in congress, and recognize the 20th anniversary of the Lauderdale County Farm Bureau.

Best Fish Story Is About World's Largest Trout

So Big They Cannot Ascend River to Spawn; Build Ladders for Them.

RENO, NEV.—The latest, best and true fish story is about the world's largest trout, which weigh in as high as 40½ pounds, and can't make it up river to spawn any more because they're so big.

So the federal government (this makes any fish story authentic) is building fish ladders to help the big fellows lumber upstream so they can spawn.

The Nevada Indian Irrigation works is spending $250,000 of federal money to help the trout upstream in the Truckee river, which flows by the Reno divorce courthouse, from Pyramid lake, 30 miles northeast of Reno, largest inland body of fresh water outside the Great Lakes.

The government is building fish ladders because the huge trout, which Wallace Beery, former President Herbert Hoover, Glenn "Pop" Warner, the football coach, and other prominent sportsmen have caught, are unable to get up the shallow Truckee river to spawn.

Lake Slowly Evaporating.

The Truckee is a clear mountain stream which would be called a creek in the Middle West or South. It is the only place the huge Rainbow lake trout can go to lay their eggs, but for 80 years the lake has been evaporating at the rate of 200,000 gallons a day, according to H. C. Dukes, Truckee river watermaster.

So the big trout gradually have become marooned in their lake. Of 350,000 acres of sky-blue water, with a few Indians on the banks. Springtime hasn't meant much to the huge trout and they've been evaporating the natives have been telling stories about them.

Each year a nearby dude ranch offers a prize for the smallest trout caught—so tired of hearing about big fish have the people become.

The fish ladder, the government has answered the answer. According to Walt Disney cartoons, however, should not picture a grandfather fish with a crutch and an old salt's hat trying to climb a rope ladder.

The fish ladder is to be a quarter million dollars' worth of piscatorial escalator.

It will be a sort of sportive Suez canal (on a fish scale), with many little ponds placed each above the other so the lumbering trout may make their pilgrimage in laps.

It's Life Saver.

Don C. Foster, superintendent of the Carson Indian agency, declared that the fish ladder will save the huge trout from extinction.

After negotiating the steps, or ponds, in the ladder, the fish, for the first time in 50 years, will have free access to that happy land where they have been unable even to thumb a ride for so long.

To pelicans, those wonderful birds which have a large rookery on the lake and are the divers for the birds have had a habit of waylaying the trout as they tried to negotiate the hazardous route upstream.

Indians, also, will not particularly welcome the fish ladder. It was believed, as one of the favorite Indian sports used to be to stand with spear as the fish tried to go upstream and bring home the beautiful lake trout.

But with the new ladder system, it was believed that the trout would be saved from man, beast and lack of family life, which threatened most.

The ladder is expected to be complete by next spring. The money was provided in an interior department appropriation measure passed recently.

Air Corps Recruit Finds

Time Fast in Its Flight

SALT LAKE CITY.—Time in its flight almost clipped the wings of an anxious army air corps recruit before he had even sprouted.

Henry Clair Outzen of Marysville, Utah, was still within the air corps' year age limit for cadets when he passed final army examinations, but neglected to enlist. It was more than a month later when enlisting officers, checking records, noted that one day remained before he would be 27, and too old to fly.

A hurried telephone call to Outzen's central Utah farm home and an equally frenzied dash here by auto finally salvaged the youth's flying career. He enlisted with a few hours to spare before the age deadline.

Bride Gone for 20 Years;

Husband Feels Deserted
HARTFORD, CONN.—Napoleon Soise, 45, was granted a divorce on grounds of desertion after he told Superior Court Judge Ernest C. Simpson he hasn't seen his wife since the day she left him 20 years ago on the steps of the church after marriage.

Soise said his wife turned to him when she left the Salem, Mass., church and remarked:
"I'll be seeing you! The court the woman's family hasn't heard from in 20 years either."

PLAN FOR A BOMBPROOF ALABAMA

FOR BOMBPROOF ALABAMA—Principle in conference at which this mapped. Left to right: Maj. O. H. state's aircraft warning system was Kyster, anti-aircraft officer, 3rd Interceptor Command, Tampa, Fla.

Montgomery, Ala.—In the office of Gov. Frank M. Dixon, members of the Alabama State Defense Council met last week to hear and discuss plans for setting up by September 1 an aircraft warning service in Alabama modeled after the efficient method now operating in England.

According to the plan outlined by Maj. O. H. Kyster, anti-aircraft officer with the Third Interceptor Command based at Tampa, Fla., the Aircraft Warning Service will proceed immediately to man 710 posts throughout the State with 14,000 volunteers who will serve without compensation except, perhaps, in the event of actual war. During practice periods and in case of emergency the posts will be in operation 24 hours a day with two men at a time working short shifts.

Maj. Kyster explained the ideal post will be composed of a chief observer, an assistant chief observer, 12 "spotters" and six substitutes.

The volunteers will be trained by tactical exercises in airplane maneuvers and by Army intelligence officers travelling from post to post in mobile units similar to traveling circus. Instruction will be given in ways of determining the number, height, type and direction of enemy airplanes, and how to telephone this information to the nearest "filter" station.

Maj. Kyster suggested that all deferred selective service registrants make themselves available for the Aircraft Warning Service. He pointed out that no volunteer would be asked to serve more than four consecutive hours, and that women as well as men, and educated negroes as well as white people, are eligible for service.

The Defense Council also heard Lieut. Col. Richard Gimbel, Intelligence and Public Relations Officer of the Third Interceptor Command, describe a plan to place one warning post every six miles in the State, in such a manner that no post will be more than 15 seconds from a telephone, and located high enough for airplanes to be easily spotted.

Gov. Dixon assured the officers that Alabama will cooperate with the Aircraft Warning Service in every respect and will have the list of 14,000 volunteers filled within the time specified.

Maj. Joseph E. Dickinson, Executive Secretary of the State Defense Council, in charge of organizing the Warning Service, said plans are now under way to set up the various observation posts, with personnel selected from residents in the vicinity of each post.

Following the selection of personnel, a three-weeks training period will be instituted to equip the "observers."

ers" for their jobs, duties of which will be to watch from hilltops, roofs and trees for enemy planes, and to telephone information to a central "filter station" where it will be plotted and evaluated by a trained personnel and transmitted in turn to an "information center." It is from the "information center" that warnings will be broadcast to the populace in time for them to take shelter and to train anti-aircraft guns in the direction of the attack. The number of observation posts to be established in each county follows:

Letter To The Editor

Chilton County News,
Dear Editor:

I have heard so much about the Apriut Farm. I counted 170 of this fruit on a three and one-half foot limb. If you can beat this you can take the cake. P. S. I never poisoned a stalk of cotton in my life. I was the first one in my neck of the woods to raise a bale of cotton to the acre. I had rather have the weeds and grass out than to have the poison.

Snake in Box Worries

Checkroom Attendant

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.—The checkroom attendant at the Soldiers Service Center here heard a harmless-looking box that had been checked with him emitting peculiar noises. Upon investigation he found a note on the lid. It read:

"Beware—a snake inside. I will be back tomorrow to get it. Treat it nice and it won't bite you and even if it does, it won't hurt."

The attendant opened the box and there was a snake and a piece of bologna.

The snake was kept for the owner, but it was a skittish night for the checkroom operator.

Little Girl Grabs Cow

Catcher, Saves Her Life

NILES, OHIO.—Eight-year-old Rebecca Villio is in a hospital with a broken leg, but relatives and friends say it was only her presence of mind which saved her from instant death under a fast freight train.

The little girl was going to church with a brother, two sisters and a friend when she was hit by the train while crossing the Pennsylvania railroad tracks.

Rebecca grabbed the cow catcher of the engine and she was carried 200 feet down the track before the engineer could stop the train.

When trainmen reached her Rebecca located her grip and fell to the ground. Her right leg had been broken and her left leg bruised—but that was all.

18 MONTHS FOR DRAFTEES?

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The administration scored a victory of unexpectedly overwhelming proportions in the Senate today with the rejection of a badly argued proposal that any extension of the service period of draftees, National Guardsmen, reservists and Army enlisted men be limited to twelve months.

The result was that all factions were predicting the approval tomorrow of an eighteen-month limitation offered as a compromise by the military committee, and backed by Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, the Democratic floor leader.

JIM MARVIN GETS A DEFENSE JOB

1. Jim Marvin knows that a lot of skilled workers will be needed in building tanks, trucks, ships, guns, and other material needed for national defense. So he goes to his local State employment office, where, at no cost, he can register for a job.

2. For 2 years Marvin has been clerking in a grocery store, but he wants to get back at his trade as a machinist, where his training and experience will be useful in the defense program. The employment office makes a record of the places he has worked and the kinds of work he has done, and checks his knowledge of his trade.

3. A week later the employment office has a call from a local machine shop for a machinist. The card on Jim Marvin shows that he has the required experience. He is told about the opening, and the machine shop is notified that he will apply for the job.

4. Jim Marvin got the job. His place in the grocery store has been filled by the employment office. Jim is glad to be working at his trade again and to have a direct part in the Nation's preparation for defense.

Dusting Needed To Control Boll Weevils

Farmers having made the first three calcium arsenate dustings, must now prepare to apply two additional applications during the first weeks in August.

These two final dustings, according to W. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist, are of extreme importance in keeping the migrating boll weevils from puncturing tender bolls and full pounds of calcium arsenate per acre grown squares. Apply six to eight at five to seven day intervals, repeating any dustings removed by rain within 24 hours after application.

MATERIALS

The OPM Production Division formed a defense advisory committee of the pulp and paper products industry and said defense requirements will increase consumption of the industry's products by 2,000,000 tons this year and an additional 2,000,000 tons next year.

OPM announced plans to increase the scrapping of worn-out automobiles by 1,000,000 tons a year, and said one

Time To Set Out Fall Gardens

Now is the time for all good farmers to set out fall gardens and come to the aid of themselves and their country. Marvin Durbin, supervisor of the Farm Security Administration for Chilton County said today:

In this day of rising prices, the farmer has an opportunity as never before to prove his value to his country—and it all comes down to the matter of planting fall gardens and living at home, Mr. Durbin said.

The low-income farmer has in his hands the chance of helping his country not only in the world crisis, but also in a dangerous situation at home," the FSA supervisor pointed out.

Prices are rising. The country is alarmed by the danger of inflation. And the farmer adds to this danger every time he spends money to buy things he should produce for himself. "From July 1, 1940 to July 1, 1941, the price of fat back meat went from 9 to 15 cents, bacon from 20 to 30 cents, eggs from 19 to 33 cents, lard from 7 to 11 cents, butter from 28 to 38 cents. The farmer should produce these things and other foodstuffs for car provides enough scrap for a light cannon, and 20 cars, enough for a tank. OPM asked zinc producers to set aside 27 per cent of their June production during August for an emergency pool, and said the supply of fabricated alloy steel for aircraft manufacture will be tripled before the end of next year.

LABOR AND EMPLOYMENT

Labor Secretary Perkins reported non-agricultural employment increased by 484,000 during June to reach a new all-time high of 38,799,000—an increase of 3,365,000 since June, 1940, and 1,900,000 more than the June, 1929 record. WPA employment dropped 77,000 and NYA, 96,000 she said. OPM Associate Director Hillman asked airplane companies to employ and train women in defense jobs without lowering wages or working standards.

The Navy, War and Commerce Departments jointly proposed the 60,000-000 Americans born in this country but without documentary proof of citizenship apply to State bureaus of vital statistics and similar agencies for "delayed birth certificates" to break the bottleneck by which native-born workers are barred from jobs in defense plants for lack of such proof of citizenship.

himself, and every time he does not do so, but goes into the market to buy them, he penalizes himself and his family and adds to the demand which in the end will force the prices still higher.

"Living at home on the part of every person who can do so becomes to day therefore a matter of national obligation. It makes available more foodstuffs for national defense and defense of the democratic countries. And it is also a boost for the general welfare, by helping stop the rising spiral of prices that hold so great a danger to everybody.

"Practically everything that the farmer has asked has been done. He is to get parity prices for cotton, which means 15 to 16 cents. Farm Security Families have obtained loans to buy livestock and chickens to feed themselves, to sell and to add to the defense requirements. The farmer is helped to pay for improving his soil.

"And now the gate is open for him to help himself and at the same time to help his country in return for all these benefits. Now is the time for him to prove his own resourcefulness and courage, to prove that living at home can be done and to laugh at high prices."

The time has come, Mr. Durbin said, to plant fall gardens, rain and weather having come to the farmer's aid in this respect.

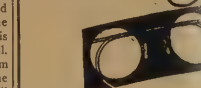

"If FSA families, and other farmers as well, take advantage of all these opportunities," he said, "we shall see in this State and the South a decree of security on the farm that was never reached before."

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. White, Suggs-ville, Clarke county, live on a 378-acre farm. They decided on turkeys to supplement their money crops. Last Christmas they sold 320 turkeys and hope to sell 400 next Christmas.

Supple Treatment For Face Brims

Pleated and Ruffled Brims Are Interesting.

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Milliners are in a mood to make a plaything of face-framing brims. It is a dramatic play, carried on with a resourcefulness of ideas and an artistry that is eye-appealing. The outstanding characteristic of current millinery design apparently is to manipulate brims into soft "pretty" effects rather than tailored lines. Even the hitherto conservative conventional felt hat has yielded to the new supple treatment in ruffled ribbon edges or undulating fabric flares or designful hand-crochet edgings. Then, too, many of the best looking hats are made of lightweight felt cloth, with pleated and ruffled brims. When it comes to the dresser modes, ruffles of net or lace or rose-pleated frayed taffeta beautify brims in endless ways. Hats made of layers-on-layer of net give the soft effect the more so when the hat is of all-over shirred net. The tendency is to reach out to enormous width in brims, sometimes with lace extensions to straw or fabric hats or wide bias folds of pique (especially smart on black hats) or a border of lace, stiff, almost transparent horsehair braid. Often these borders are finished off with a piping of black velvet, for touches of black velvet on hats is making important millinery news this summer. Smart indeed are the brims that develop a double effect at the edge wherein a row of white or tiny colorful flowers is nestled in a manner most flattering. The soft manipulation of hats in either felt or fabric is a trend that will continue into the fall millinery program.

In Black and White

Plan to wear lots of smart black and white this summer, and be sure to frost it with summery jewelry. Brilliant as sparkling snow to help you look cool when the thermometer registers high, the earclips and bracelets Monet creates in smart lines of regimental precision are beautiful. It is the tailored nicety of these white jewelry units that makes such a big appeal, as jewelry of the type worn by the ladies of fashion fits into the picture of any casual or dressy costume. The chic lady pictured at the top has carried out the black-and-white tradition in every detail of her stunning midsummer outfit. The black and white print of her frock, the pose of her striking black chapeau, plus the icy whiteness of her Monet jewelry all combine to create the color in a fashion sophisticated. Irresistibly lovely is the young socialite also pictured here in a new-fashion adorable stiffly starched lingerie Dutch bonnet. Her accessories are as cool and refreshing as an ice cream cone. Here earclips, bracelet and initials on her white bag by Monocraft lend the sophisticated touch.

Fads and Fancies

Buttons as important as jewels is the forecast for fall. So much so will buttons feature in the new fashions, an ingenious designer has been inspired to contrive a type of buttons that snap off and on. The idea is to interchange buttons so that they will match the color scheme of accompanying accessories. If you are looking for something different in hosiery, this season offers many new trends. By all means ask to see the new luxuriously sheer Nylon navy hose. They are ever so swank and are a perfect complement to smart city navy outfits and with summery navy sheer dresses. Latest fad in accessories made of gay print is the hat-and-glove twosome recently brought out. You can get long mosquitoesire gloves made of gay printed fabric together with a chic draped turban made of the same print.

Black and White Summer Fashion

No 'Blackout' in U. S. Smart Style Centers.

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Fashion is playing "summer white" against "summer black" in a dramatic play, carried on with a resourcefulness of ideas and an artistry that is eye-appealing. The outstanding characteristic of current millinery design apparently is to manipulate brims into soft "pretty" effects rather than tailored lines. Even the hitherto conservative conventional felt hat has yielded to the new supple treatment in ruffled ribbon edges or undulating fabric flares or designful hand-crochet edgings. Then, too, many of the best looking hats are made of lightweight felt cloth, with pleated and ruffled brims. When it comes to the dresser modes, ruffles of net or lace or rose-pleated frayed taffeta beautify brims in endless ways. Smart indeed are the brims that develop a double effect at the edge wherein a row of white or tiny colorful flowers is nestled in a manner most flattering. The soft manipulation of hats in either felt or fabric is a trend that will continue into the fall millinery program.

Voguish Tri-Color

Three colors and two fabrics are combined in this attractive two-piece spectator sports dress, following the South American trend in matter of color technique that is as fascinating as it is bizarre. Coral is the color of the Celanese rayon jersey sleeves, attached to a bodice with a dark brown skirt of sharkskin. The sharkskin jerkin is a luscious lime green. A burnoose turban of novelty handmade natural straw is draped in brown and beige jersey scarves.

Style Notes

Pretty pumps are footwear favorites. Color is expected to outsell black this fall. Capes in all lengths is big news in fashion-first autumn fads. Newest silhouettes "say it" via tunics, tiers and peplums. Vivid flowery chintz jackets are worn with white frocks. Carrying chintz parols, too! Broadening horizontal shoulder stripes, with whitening vertical stripes prove the stripe is quicker than the eye when it comes to actually whitening down the figure. This optical-illusioner it comes in brown and blue, navy and white, also gray and white. A flaring brimmed hat and gauntlet gloves complete this outfit.

Enchanting Party Frocks of All-White for Evening Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

DO YOU believe in the magic of fairy wands? Unless it be at the touch of a fairy wand how could such visions of loveliness as the trio pictured ever come into being? It is just such lady, beguiling sheer and lovely gowns as these that women who yearn for pretty clothes envision their dreams of "what to wear" when they go dancing on a gay summer night. So be as sentimental, as blithely romantic as you will in choosing your midsummer night's festive gowns, keeping in mind that fashion particularly favors exquisitely fragile sheer media this season, with the emphasis definitely on all white for evening wear.

The all-white lace dress as pictured to the left is making its appearance again and again on best-dressed women who are attending fashionable night clubs or formal events at important summer resort hotels. It adds to the lure of this lace that it is American made. It is as exquisite and beautiful as it is surprisingly inexpensive. Crisp, white and delicate, the new laces make you look your prettiest with their lure and charm. The dress has its own rayon taffeta slip. The South American influence is very prominent in the white cotton lace evening gown shown centered in the group. The four flounces on the skirt are reminiscent of the Spanish dancer's costume. The deep capelike collar opens at the back. With the return of the "gracious lady" period, the call for handsome lace such as fashions this distinguished frock is outstanding. Nothing in the way of sheer cottons surpasses organza and when it is elaborately eyeleted as in the organza used for the "picture" gown on the fair socialite portrayed here, the effect is most eye-appealing. The introduction of black jersey in the bodice is in keeping with the present trend. This touch of black gives a sophisticated look to an otherwise airy, fairy ingenuer frock. The wing-sleeved bolero and the very full over-skirt effect are high-style details. This matter of sheer airy-fairy fabrics for the party dress carries all the way through the program of the "pretty" frocks fashion so definitely favored this season. Often yards and yards of billowy tulle or stiffened chiffon or thinnest of trimmings, gold or silver, are used to make up the full skirt with its quaint little fitted bodice.

A new vogue this season is that of enormous florals handpainted on either most diaphanous filmy white sheers or these flower paintings are done on white jersey likewise white shirred in dazzling color glory. Most of the new white dresses of rayon jersey (with a dull finish) or rayon crepe are made very simply. They are, however, given a look of distinction and importance by intriguing touches such as gold trimmings, gold or silver, are used to make up the full skirt with its quaint little fitted bodice. Watch buttons! They promise to be as important as jewelry in the evening mode, and they are serving conspicuously so as to call attention to their intricate design. Huger flower buttons add infinite charm to the otherwise all-white frock. Immense mother-of-pearl buttons are fashion highlights. Some of the pearl buttons are made up with a filigree design worked out in gold or silver. You can get buttons that snap on and off and thus change the entire aspect and color scheme of a dress. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

able little hat and matching pique, patterned with this darling design. The gay pony hair thing for the making of a matchless vision.

City Cottons Go 'Tops' In Summer Fashions

Ladies who "know their fashions" dress in gingham, seersucker, chambray, tissue-crinkle organza, dark boucles and other smart "city cottons." It is a picture that fashion paints for summer, most refreshing and one that goes keen on chic and charm. For downright practicality the jacket suit tailored to a nicety of dark check crinkle seersucker, of plaid gingham or striped chambray takes first prize this summer. Women of discriminating tastes have yielded wholeheartedly to the new cotton vogue, a fact impressed on one throughout the summer style parade all along the highways and byways of fashion.

Sweaters for Evening

Evening sweaters continue to be a smart fashion. The latest arrival in formal sweaters reflects the bra influence in a most attractive way. It is knitted of pastel wool, comes just below the bust neckline where it ties with velvet ribbon drawn through a deep scalloped V-neckline. Sleeves are short and for an evening fantasy this is one of the prettiest sweaters imaginable.

Dye White Venice Lace To Match Your Fabrics

The use of stark white stiffened Venice lace is outstanding in the summer mode. So successful has this adventure in lace proved, designers are planning to dye monochrome frocks this fall in handsome Venice lace dyed to match the fabric that teams with it.

Gay Handkerchiefs

Carry out a summer look for your costume by flirtatiously flaunting a gaily flowered handkerchief. You can get perfectly fascinating "hankies" with realistically colorful life-size roses printed to look as if they were artfully hand-painted. Others are patterned with huge poppies, and the ones with big clusters of natural looking violets are lovely with the new and now-fashionable costumes in purple tones.

Vacation Outfit

You can bank on this simple rayon sheer striped dress no matter where you vacation, for simplicity is America's fashion this summer from coast to coast. Broadening horizontal shoulder stripes, with whitening vertical stripes prove the stripe is quicker than the eye when it comes to actually whitening down the figure. This optical-illusioner it comes in brown and blue, navy and white, also gray and white. A flaring brimmed hat and gauntlet gloves complete this outfit.

Chic Fur Capes Are on Fashion's New Calendar

Keep on the lookout for fur capes. They're on their way! They are available in any length from shoulder to waist depth and longer. If you have a fur cape, take a look at its time go to your favorite furrier without delay and have him transform it into a latest-model cape. If you are buying out-and-out new furs, before you invest take a look at the stunning cape fashions that definitely will carry the "new" look from now on. These are the final word in chic.

Linen Dresses and Suits Season's Smart Styles

Women of assured fashion intuition regard suits in black or brown, navy, or dark green linen as the best-looking costume of the season for town wear. These are meticulously tailored and given charm and femininity via lovely white lingerie accents. One-piece dresses of low-wrinkle linen are very popular this summer. They are made with all the fine dressmaker details such as enhance chic models in crepe or thin wool. There are such highlights touches as braided trim, odd huge buttons and so on. The dress that looks like a suit, also princess types, are popular in linen. Print Lingerie Enthusiasm for lingerie and negligee apparel that is fashioned of either cotton or silk prints, or patterned with luscious looking strawberries is running high. You will love the new rose-motif prints, too.

THE SMOKY YEARS

By ALAN LE MAY

W.N.U. Release

Dusty King and Lew Gordon were joint owners of the vast King-Gordon range which stretched from Texas to Montana. When suddenly they decided to fight the unscrupulous Ben Thorpe. He rivaled King-Gordon in wealth.

CHAPTER VII

These men who Roper now gathered about him hated a particular man, not only as lawless as themselves, but a man who was more than one man. Ben Thorpe was a thousand men; operating under the name of Ben Thorpe, he had picked men of personal grudge. Most of them had first been outlived because they had not suited a single organization — the organization of Ben Thorpe.

Up and down and across half of Texas, constantly in the saddle, Bill Roper threaded his new organization. Sometimes Dry Camp Pierce was with him, sometimes he traveled alone. These famous gunfighters and outlaws men whom Roper gathered were just youngsters, mostly. Some of them were true killers; some merely reckless kids who had got off on the wrong foot. All of them were badly wanted by what little law there was.

One night in early June, Dry Camp Pierce and Bill Roper sat in the back room of a saloon, deep in Texas.

"Look," Dry Camp Pierce said. "I've stole cows until I could pave my way to hell with their hides. I don't know—stole cows for Dusty's kid—"

Bill Roper's teeth flashed clean in his grin. "Whose cows?"

"I've stole cows—"

"You're going to steal cows that belong to me now."

"I'm half of King-Gordon, now split. I've taken out of King-Gordon, seven camps without cows; now I'm claiming the cows that Thorpe stole from Dusty King. And he's got more other men that we're going to lend a hand to, pretty soon."

Dry Camp Pierce—he was called that because he hated to camp too near to water—went to work for Bill Roper as he had never worked before; and the brand changer extraordinary, for once aligned on the side of the law.

Ten rustlers' camps hooked into Thorpe-Tanner territory . . .

But Dry Camp also helped in other ways.

A hot June dusk, five days after the meeting at Whittier Forks, found Bill Roper at the Dry Saddle Crossing, where he was to meet Lee Harnish; and this meeting, too, was arranged by Dry Camp Pierce, though by this time Pierce was already far away.

Here ran the broad, many-channeled river, dividing two countries—a river whose split wanderings made two miles of intermittent shallows. At this border of a vast, imperceptibly rolling prairie stood a narrow string of adobe shacks. That was the Dry Saddle Crossing.

Two men—Bill Roper and Lee Harnish—sat in front of one of those abandoned shacks, and tried to get together.

"I've always understood," Roper said, "that you were acquainted some, below the line."

Harnish's hard eyes studied Roper, and for a little while nothing could be heard except the mourning of doves in the willow scrub by the water. Next to Dry Camp Pierce, Lee Harnish was the oldest of those to join Roper; he was twenty-eight. He was tall and lank, sun-baked almost to the color of an Indian; his green eyes were curiously blank, imperturbable, and like to look his man in the eye with the peculiar fixity seen in the gaze of hawks.

"I've been down there some," he admitted. "I've made a few drives into Chihuahua; one drive to Mexico City."

"If you had a big wet herd run to you just below the line, would you know how to get rid of it?"

"I can't make out your hand," Harnish said. "King-Gordon never swung a long rope yet, that I heard of."

"I'm not King-Gordon now. My stunt is to smash Lee Tanner; and I don't care what it costs."

"What's wrong with backing him into a shoot-out, if that's what you want?"

"That comes later. If I bust Tanner I can bust Thorpe. But if Tanner is gunned before he busts, Thorpe will take over in Texas, and the chance to break up his Texas layout will be gone."

"You ain't going to bust him by running off a few head of cattle. This river crossing is slow work, kid."

"I figure to cross five thousand head within the next three months," Roper told him.

The thousand head won't even scratch the hide of Thorpe and Tanner, son."

"I know that as well as you. What I'll do, I'll draw Tanner to throw his arrows onto the border. That's what I want. Because by then I'll be working somewhere else."

INSTALLMENT 5

THE STORY SO FAR:

and power, but had gained his position through wholesale cattle rustling and gunplay. One afternoon King was killed by Thorpe and his two assistants, Clevie Tanner and Walk Lasham. King's adopted son, Bill Roper, decided to start a cattle war.

"And you want me to take 'em on the other side—that the idea?"

"I want three dollars a head, American gold, paid off as the cattle come out of the water . . ."

Roper's ways of gathering his wild bunch were diverse, as diverse as the saddle men he gathered. One way or another, picking up a man here, three more there, he got all he needed, and more.

But certain other things had to be done, in order that the wild bunch would have work to do, planned in such a way that something would be accomplished that would stay accomplished.

On a steamy afternoon early in July, Bill Roper sat in Fred Maxim's San Antonio law office. Maxim was an attorney who, some thought, had worked under a different name, somewhere before; and Roper, assuredly he was in no one's pay.

"I'm not asking the likes of you what's what," Bill Roper said. "I want to know who actually owns range rights on the Graham stand."

Roper's ways of gathering his wild bunch were diverse.

The hard-bitten little man across the desk from Roper was still cadgy.

"When it comes to ousting a man from possession . . ."

"You know who 'ousts' Bob Graham and his family from possession. Clevie Tanner took over that outfit by main horse-and-gun power, without decent cause or reason. Everybody knows that. I'm asking you now—"

"Taylor and Graves are already doing everything that can be done to regain possession of Graham's outfit," Maxim said, smiling.

It was the smile that Roper liked. "Suppose I told the Bob Graham lands, and Bob Graham's family are living on it."

"Bob Graham hasn't got possession," Maxim said.

"Suppose he did have?"

"Never could happen. Ben Thorpe."

"Think up a minute," Roper said. "I'm not asking you to put Graham back in possession of his range. I'm not asking you to save him from being put off again in the way he was before. What I want to know is, can you head off some cooked-up legal interference with Graham, after he's in possession again?"

Fred Maxim thought it over. "I can only promise you that I can cause considerable delay," he said.

"Months of delay?"

"Providing you can show possession—I'll keep you clear until hell freezes."

"That's all I want . . ."

Still July, at Willow Creek—

A barren range of hills, sand hills; golden in the dawn, purple in the twilight, barren always. Beneath them had been the Willow Creek camp of the old King-Gordon. In the bunkhouse nearest the river, five men lounging around a little room.

"Right, you hard guys," Bill Roper said. "You know who told you to come here. Dry Camp Pierce told you to come here. Maybe he told you what you could look for here, huh?"

These four gunfighters who met Roper here were none of them older than Bill; yet each was famous as a killer in his own right. Of them all Bill Roper alone had no name, no reputation. Yet, in respect for the name of Dusty King, they had come to hear him out.

Nate Liggett, a round-faced kid with eyelashes that looked as if they had been powdered with white dust said, "Well, what seems to be your offer?"

against Thorpe in Texas. He made this decision against the strong opposition of his partner, Lew Gordon. Bill's sweetheart, Josie, pleaded frantically with him to turn back, but could not change his grim determination.

"I guess you already know Bob Graham," Roper said to offer you a warrior gang of Clevie Tanner's jammed down on him, on some thin excuse, and run him off his range. They even took over his house and his windmill and his corral. Now, I aim to hand back that range to Bob Graham; he's waiting in Bisping for the word. Your part of the job is simple enough—you just go and take it away from the Tanner bunch."

"Simple, huh? Just how do you figure this simple trick is to be done?"

A lawyer in San Antonio kept the Rangers off when Tanner jumped Graham. Now we've got another better lawyer in San Antonio to keep them off when Graham jumps Tanner. The only question, who's got enough salt to grab that range—and then hang onto it?"

"And what do we get out of all this?"

"Graham takes over the outfit and runs it. You hang around and help him, and see that he doesn't get run off again. For that you get a half interest in the outfit. You split it among you any way you see fit. I'll back Graham with my cattle, and what other stuff he needs."

Nate Liggett said, "Bill, I don't see where we come in for no advantage."

"If you're satisfied with the lone wolf stuff you've been pulling, I'll let you get out and go to work. Roper admitted, "But I'll tell you this—the boys that string with me now will see the day when they'll run Texas; and Clevie Tanner, and Ben Thorpe, too, will be busted up and forgot!"

"It's a hefty order!"

"Maybe it is. This Graham business is a kind of experiment; it'll work if you make it work. But if it goes through okay—it's only the beginning, you hear me? You string with me a little while; and maybe, by God, we'll show a couple of people something . . ."

CHAPTER VIII

Hot, dry days of early August—

As the first sun struck with a red heat across the plains, the Tanner men who held the Graham ranges were already saddling. All over Texas, cowmen were throwing together the last trail herds of the year; it was time for these Tanner men to roll their chuck wagons again, to round up the last of the trail-lick stock that remained in the herds which had belonged to Bob Graham.

Out from what had been the Graham corral, three riders swept through the dusty dawn; but they had hardly left the pole fences before when six other riders confronted them rising into their saddles like Comanches, out of the brush. The strangers closed in a semi-circle, unhurriedly, their carbines in their hands. In another minute or two the three Tanner riders were grouped in a defensive knot, while from the semi-circle of the raiders Nate Liggett jogged forward to talk it over.

"I don't think you want to go on," he said. "I don't even think you want to work for this outfit any more."

Two nights later, one hundred and fifty miles away—

With the approach of dusk, a peculiar light lay upon the valley of the Potreritos. In a reach of open grass a herd of five hundred head bunched loosely—tame, heavy cattle, already well removed by breeding from the old, wild, long-horn strain. But they had not bunched voluntarily. They shuffled restlessly, watching the brush; something was happening around them that they did not understand.

As the light faded, the figures of horsemen emerged from the brush, cutting mile-long shadows into the flat rays of sunset; the huge, heavy-shouldered man who signaled to his spread-out cowboys by turning his horse this way or that, in Indian horse language, was Dave Shannon.

These the cattle. Only, between sunset and the next daylight, no cow took a step other than in the direction of the Mexican border . . .

Dry-grass season; Texas scorched by the hot winds—

All across the southern ranges a peculiar thing was happening. As word spread first from point to point, disturbance, certain of the older cattlemen began to sense that there was a curious, almost systematic order to what in itself seemed a widespread disruption. All over the Big Bend country, eastward almost to the well settled Pecos, westward beyond the barren Neeces, northward to the fever line, was breaking a spot wave of raids of an unparalleled boldness. Far apart, but almost simultaneously, hell had busted loose in a great number of places, covering more than half of Texas.

Shelby Has The Man For Lieut. Governor

Next year the people of Alabama will have the responsibility of choosing a Lieutenant Governor. The Lieutenant Governor presides over the Senate and appoints the Senate committees. If the right man is chosen, he will have a great deal of influence in the work of the law making body. Should there be a vacancy in the office of Governor the Lieutenant Governor would succeed to that office. It is a very important office.

It will be the privilege of Shelby County to present for this high office the man who in our opinion will make an ideal Lieutenant Governor. He is L. H. Ellis, twice representative from Shelby county, a former state senator, a member of the State Board of Education, and one of this section of Alabama.

We believe he has every qualification. We believe too that it will be the best interest of Alabama to have Mr. Ellis in service in this place.

Mr. Ellis knows Alabama as but few men in the state. He believes in Alabama. He knows our state's people; he knows the needs as well. He is able and conscientious. He will give to his state his best service. And he is qualified to serve well.

To those who may not know him, Mr. Ellis would like to be presented, first, we believe, as a friend of schools; a friend of education; and then, as a friend of honest, hard work, and in the willingness to work. It is a definite conviction with Mr. Ellis that democratic life and ways can be raised to higher level in Alabama. Only as we train and teach our young people in the schools, and equip them to make higher and yet higher contributions to the life of their state. He sees life in Alabama as a whole and he sees passing through our schools each year and into the life of our state a steady and growing stream of young life, fresh, vigorous and trained; equipped with the standards of living and the standards of life.

It is a firm conviction; this unflinching faith in the power of schools for good, together with his unquestioned ability, that have gained for Mr. Ellis his place of recognized leadership among those who strive to build in Alabama a still better system of schools and colleges for the training of the young people in our state.

Mr. Ellis is as democratic as Thomas Jefferson. He believes in the people. He believes that whatever contribution our nation has made to the establishment of better forms of government and better ways of living has been made because of the people, and has been since the days of Jefferson, a government by and for the people. He is also a Democrat, that is he adheres to, and believes in, the principles of the Democratic party. But he is not a partisan. He sees in the record of the Democratic party, more than in that of any other party in the history of this country, a record of consistent service in behalf of the common people.

As presiding officer of the state senate, Mr. Ellis would be fair and impartial. He knows no other rule than that of fair dealing. Because of his knowledge of legislative processes and because of his comprehensive understanding of the needs of Alabama, he would be able to make a definite contribution to the work of the law making body in the trying days, that lie ahead for the next administration.

The Reporter feels that it is a high privilege for the people of Shelby County to be able to offer for service to the state a man so brilliantly gifted, so well qualified, as their own friend and neighbor, Handy Ellis. It is also our privilege and our responsibility to help the people in other counties to know Mr. Ellis as we know him. If we can do that, there will be but one choice next year for the high office of Lieutenant Governor—Shelby County Reporter.

COOSA RIVER

lar work was done on the Alabama River which was made navigable for light draft boats.

For half a century regular boat service was maintained between Rome, Ga., and Gadsden, Ala., and for a longer period on the Alabama between Montgomery and Mobile.

In 1930 Theodore Brent, traffic manager of the inland Waterway, operating agent for the Mississippi-Warrior barge service, made a survey of the Coosa-Alabama waterway to ascertain the possible tonnage available for shipment by this route if a nine-foot channel from Rome to Mobile were provided.

In his report Mr. Brent said a nine-foot channel will be justified between Rome and its junction with the Mobile River.

Billions of dollars are being spent by the federal government for production of defense materials and in training and equipping its man-power. Plants to make powder, guns, tanks, airplanes and chemicals are being built and, these, the Coosa Valley is getting a fair share.

Plants for tooling shells at Gadsden, a powder plant at Childersburg, a machine plant at Talladega and storage plants at Gadsden and Birmingham are on the edge of the valley.

These industries require power, none of which is produced in the territory adjacent to the Coosa Valley. Army engineers have recommended improvement of the Coosa-Alabama Waterway for navigation and power production, and legislation authorizing the work soon will be before Congress. It is estimated it will cost between $50,000,000 and $70,000,000.

The cities of Gadsden, Montgomery and Selma would be served directly, and with short rail or truck hauls, Birmingham, Anniston and Talladega in addition to the terminal cities of Rome and Mobile.

The territory served by the two rivers is comparatively populous, the cities alone in the Coosa Valley area having increased their population from 138,486 in 1900 to 528,115 in 1940.

There are approximately 650 river miles. The most serious obstacles to overcome in providing a navigable stream are the shoals and rapids below the Southern Railway.

Poultrymen In Drive On Pullorum Disease

Farm poultrymen have been assured chicks they buy will be more and more by the nation's breeders and hatcheries—cooperating under the National Poultry Improvement Plan—that the free from pullorum disease, says John Ivey, poultryman for the Alabama Extension Service.

TheNPIP voted that beginning this fall reactors in U. S. Pullorum-Tested flocks must be less than 9 per cent. The number of reactors allowed decreases 1 per cent each year until 1945-46, when only flocks with less than 5 per cent reactors will be recognized. In addition, a second class—U. S. Pullorum-Controlled—was set up for flocks with less than 2 percent of reactors. The third class is U. S. Pullorum-Passed (no reactors on one test), and fourth U. S. Pullorum-Clean (no reactors on two tests).

CARD OF THANKS

Please allow us space for a few words in your paper. We wish to express our appreciation to our many friends for the acts of kindness and sympathy extended us during our recent sad bereavement. Our anguish has been greatly lightened on account of the words of sympathy and understanding that have been spoken as well as by the unselfish assistance lent us at a time when sympathy was most appreciated. We wish especially to mention the kind words spoken by Rev. Langston and Mrs. Langston, also the singing by the quartet. The many beautiful flowers were a living tribute to the thoughtfulness and esteem of many kind friends.

May the Lord richly bless you all, in our ardent prayer. —J. Walter Teel and family.

QUEEN OF CLANTON LIONS MAKES HIT

Following is a letter to the Clanton Lions Club from Secretary of the Lions Club in Calais, Maine. The letter is self explanatory: Clanton Lions Club, Clanton, Ala.

Attention Past President Heflin. Dear Mr. Heflin:

This is to inform you that I had the pleasure of meeting today a very lovely girl from your town and one whom I believe did a lot toward helping your club in its raffle last November. Her name is Miss Smith and her picture I believe appears in the March issue of the Lions Magazine.

Miss Smith has also helped the Lions Club in this town and after talking with her I certainly believe she is entitled to the honorary membership which I believe your club has given her. She is connected with a studio which is taking photos in this town. One of our members works at the Hotel where she is stopping and through conversing with Miss Smith they got the idea that it would be a good idea for the Lions club which is making a drive for funds for a public playground to sponsor their solicitations for appointments and by so doing this we have added quite a sum to our collections. They gave us $50 per cent of their share of the charge for every sitting.

This town is located on the Canadian Border and is only thirty miles from the most eastern city in the U. S. (Eastport). We have a population of 5,000, which according to Miss Smith is about the size of your city. From what I gathered from Miss Smith you must have a very active club and if Miss Smith is a fair representative of the people of your town I would certainly like to visit there. When you have the occasion to meet Miss Smith I wish you would pass on to her our appreciation and thanks.

Hoping that your club may continue to be successful. I remain, Yours in Lionism, FRANK W. FROST Sec.Treas.

ALABAMA WEEKLY WEATHER AND CROP REPORT

Over an area of considerable size in the upper Black Warrior and Cahaba River Watersheds heavy washing and flooding rains fell Thursday and Friday. A few heavy local showers occurred at stations outside this area but for the most part the rainfall elsewhere over the State was light to locally moderate. Twelve of the 25 reporting stations in the State had less than a half inch of rain, Eufrasia and Dothan reporting none at all. In the wet section rainfall exceeded 4.00 inches at all stations. Tuscaloosa had 8.2 inches for the week and Cullman 6.18 inches.

Temperatures were rather high but not excessively so during the first few days and near normal the remainder of the week.

Little progress in farm work was made during the week. As usual at this season of the year, most crops have been "laid by" and harvesting of fall crops has not yet begun except in a very limited way.

Home gardens have shown considerable improvement. Growth has been good and condition is reported as mostly fair. Vegetables are now generally in good supply and adequate for current needs. Fruits are abundant in all parts of the State. This is making it possible for considerable home canning which is being done. Conservation is being encouraged both for the good of the individual and for national defense.

Cotton continues to make good growth and fruiting is generally satisfactory. Boll weevils are reported in all areas and doing damage, but some poisoning is being done. Future weather conditions will largely determine the degree of damage.

Progress continues to be made in corn which is expected to yield a good deal better than usual. Peanuts have continued to make good growth, but in some areas fields are grassy due to the rains in July. Other crops, though grassy in some instances, should not suffer greatly because of advanced maturity.

Cattle are still making good progress. Pastures are green and supplies of grain and hay are generally adequate for livestock needs.

Muscle Shoals has 250 new houses for defense workers.

Female (Driver) of the Species Not So Deadly

Any wife who wants to challenge hubby's comments that the women cause all the accidents has only to refer to "Here Today," a safety booklet published recently by The Travelers Insurance Company. She will find in it facts which prove that 92.6 per cent of all fatal accidents last year were caused by male drivers and only 7.4 per cent by women. In non-fatal accidents, 90.3 per cent involved men, with women involved in but 9.7 per cent.

Some of the sting in these statistics will be removed when it is considered that there are many more men driving than women, but the record is still one for men to be ashamed of.

An analysis of underlying causes might reveal that the beligerency of the men leads them into trouble whereas the timidity of women keeps them safe, but such an analysis has yet to be made.

The statistics seem to indicate that unless men soon mend their driving ways, it will be a woman's world in more ways than one—she may have Old Mother Earth all to herself if male drivers continue to sacrifice their lives with reckless driving on the nation's highways.

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

Mr. J. K. Thompson, of Scottsboro in the News office Saturday night pay his respects. . . we knew him when we were a small boy and lived in the Tennessee Valley at Scottsboro. Mr. Thompson says that there is not another town in the South as big as Scottsboro, unless it is Clanton. . . when told that the road on the streets Saturday night was not as good as usual, Mr. Thompson gave us the horse laugh and remarked, "I just don't see how it could be any better, where would he put them?"

Alex Arnold came in to see us the other day and gave us the down on what soldiers eat. . . you know, it is in the Quartermaster Corps, at Camp Davis, N. C., and the guy who dishes out the food from the Refrigeration plant. . . he says that they measure food up there on the truck load and eggs by the bushels. . . Alex is liking it fine here and he looks it.

We understand that Willie Mims is just about wearing pajamas. . . of course, we don't know. . . it's just what we heard it. . . but Willie went to Florida last week on his vacation. . . about three o'clock in the morning they started hunting Willie and he beheld they found him down in Panama City. . . Willie, pajamas and a Boy that's the strongest water man there on the coast.

A peach tree that just wouldn't . . . that seems to be the case with the one owned by C. B. Stroud, Arbena, Alabama Route one. . . Mr. Stroud brought into the News office a branch of the tree with every size peach from the size of your little finger nail to large beautiful red ripe ones. . . Mr. Stroud, who owns 1,000 acres, says it is the first time he has seen anything like it.

Have you been down and seen the cemetery lately. . . you should have. . . the Mayor and city Councilmen are paying a fine job down there and it is fitting to look like a small city cemetery should. . . Mayor Stapp says that someone had better come to the aid of the cemetery fund though. . . it's nothing mighty low.

And while we're talking about the City Government lets compliment them on the street work that they're doing. . . the streets are looking a lot better and guess what. . . Second Avenue paving has been completed. . . that street is going to see a lot of traffic from out Maplesville way

Thanks to our friends Gertie (Figue) Towns, of Biloxi, Miss., for one of the most interesting letters we have read in a long time. . . "Interesting Facts About Biloxi," is the substance of the letter and it is all that the world implies. . . would that we could run it but there are so many interesting facts contained in it that we would run us right out of the bottom of this column.

Charlie Burnett, who runs Burnett's Garage at the intersection of Main Road and the Birmingham Highway is mighty accommodating when it comes to lending his car while it is repairing yours. . . the other day he was working on Vic Heard's car and Vic wanted to go to dinner. . . Mr. Burnett at the same time it seems Mr. Joe Maddox was in the mood to dine so he borrowed Charlie's sedan and Mr. Maddox borrowed his pick-up truck. . . everything was fixed, so Charlie thought, and it was until the two gentlemen who had borrowed cars returned from lunch. . . they had car trouble somewhere out on the Selma Highway and banged up both cars. . . both cars being Charlie's.

Virginia, we're sorry. . . it won't happen again. . . the next time you go to your mother in Mississippi we'll let you know about it.

County Agent Smith Writes Regarding Status Of Cotton Placed In Loan

Information has just been received relative to the cotton placed in the loan in 1938, 1939 and 1940. The Commodity Credit Corporation DID NOT take over the cotton on July 31. Producers have until October 1, 1941 to redeem this cotton. After this date, the cotton will be handled according to the following plan:

All cotton not redeemed October 1, 1941, will be placed in pools, as provided in the loan agreement, and sold in an orderly manner by Commodity Credit Corporation. Under this plan unredeemed loan cotton from each crop will be placed in a separate pool, with the producer retaining title to the cotton.

On final liquidation of all cotton in each pool, the net proceeds, if any after deduction of all advances and accrued costs, including storage, insurance, and handling charges, will be distributed among producers whose cotton has been placed in the pool, in proportion to their interest. No payment will be made to the producer at the time the cotton is placed in the pool and individual producers will not be entitled to order the sale of the particular cotton which they placed in the pool. No sales of these pooled stocks will be made prior to March 1, 1942.

Many farmers have been advised that they would be paid the difference between the average price of cotton on the day it was taken over and the loan plus carrying charges. The above instructions changes this because the Commodity Credit Corporation does not take title to the cotton. Producers could not realize any possible cash from this loan cotton until after March 1, 1942.

For further information on the above see or write your County Agent

Ginners Meet At County Agent's Office

Chilton County Ginners met at the office of County Agent Pat Smith Tuesday to discuss the outlook on Fall business. Seven of the eleven gins in the County were represented at the meeting and a standard cotton Ticket was adopted for making personal records and records for semi-monthly reports.

The new law also discussed which penalizes producers who raise more than their marketing quota, this penalty having jumped from 3c per pound to 7c this year. This coming under their quotas, of course, will not be affected.

Those attending the meeting were: John Deramus, J. N. Dennis, Ed Edwards, W. J. Billingsley, Wm. Easterling, S. P. Shaw, Earl O'Neal and Huey Taylor.

They were employed in a variety of tasks ranging from improving and beautifying school grounds to helping teachers in libraries, laboratories and school offices.

In Chilton County 20 schools participated in the school work during the 1940-41 school year. Of these schools, 15 were white and 5 were Negro. Students who participated in the program totaled 116. ALABAMA WEEKLY WEATHER AND CROP REPORT

Over the northern half of the State showers during the week were infrequent and mostly light. In the southern half light to moderately heavy showers fell almost daily at most stations. The greatest amount of rainfall at any of the 23 regularly reporting stations was 4.96 inches at Greenville, with Ozark reporting almost as much, 4.56. Gadsden, Cullman and Fayette each two degrees above normal, excessively high thermometer readings were the exception. Muscle Shoals and Decatur had the highest, 100 degrees, on Sunday.

Hand Reunion Held At Poplar Springs

The annual reunion of the Hand family was held at Poplar Springs last Sunday with about one hundred relatives and friends assembled. In the morning a gospel message was brought by Rev. J. D. Hughes, and in the afternoon Rev. Clark Burkhalter delivered a most interesting and inspiring message. Several quartet numbers were sung by Prof. W. M. Devaughn, his two daughters and Mr. Campbell of Sylacauga. A solo was sung by Miss Annie Laurie Devaughn.

Serving as chairman of the day was Rev. Joe L. Hand of Climax, Ga. Rev. Hand is a very apt and interesting master of ceremonies, who has always got something interesting to say or is having someone else to be entertaining the audience. Rev. Hand has hundreds of close friends in this county, where he has been preaching in revivals at Churches all over the county. The family is a large and respectable one among the wide circle of friends who know them.

Another reunion of the family was announced at the same place and at the same time next year, the chairman announcing that Rev. J. D. Hughes would bring the message again that Sunday morning. Bro. Hughes consented by saying: "If I am not here at this reunion next year, all you good people will know where I am."

The gathering closed with a hearty hand shaking of everyone present with preachers, and other close friends and relatives.

same communities. Cotton made good plant growth, but complaints of poor fruiting are numerous. Boll weevil infestation is high and continues to be a major threat to the cotton crop. Recent weather has favored weevil activity. Peanut vines made good growth but some fields have become quite grassy, especially of the later plantings.

Hay crops continued to make good growth though harvesting of some types was interfered with by the weather in central and southern sections. Legume hays made excellent progress.

Farming activity has been about normal for the season. Practically all cultivation is completed. Some poisoning of cotton has been done over the State. In southern communities, the picking of cotton has begun. Ginning is not generally under way but a few gins have started operations.

Cattle are making good gains and are reported in fair to good condition. Ample pasturage and feed supplies of hay and grain should assure adequate feeding for beef cattle and milk cows.

F.S.A. Aids School Attendance Record

Stronger Community Ties Result of Longer Leases

With the new school year approaching, the time is ripe, says Marvin Durbin Security Administration farm supervisor for Chilton County, to review the record of improved attendance which are one of the main goals of FSA.

It has been found that with longer leases, farm families move less frequently and thus have opportunity to make stronger community ties.

Farm Security Administration records to date show that where longer leases are arranged, school attendance by children of FSA families in increased in most cases. One large group which was studied showed that where 60 per cent of the children went to school under the old living arrangements with a two-year lease, and moving every year, 90 per cent were found to attend when longer leases were arranged.

"It has been proved to us," said Supervisor Durbin "that where leases of five years or more are obtained, there is more incentive to improve farm practices as well as home life."

"And here is a point which ought to be understood: 'The Farm Security Administration is aware that the landowner who grants a long written lease to a tenant has rights which must be protected.'

The Farm Security Administration feels that it has an obligation to the landowner as well as to the tenant, and that its supervision is of service to both parties.

"Careful farm and home plans make the tenant better able to fulfill his obligations to conserve the land, make the home more attractive and actually add to the value of the farm. Only in this way can we justify the longer lease, and only in this way can the landowner have assurance that a written lease for a long term a good bargain for him."

Pres. L. N. Duncan, of Auburn, says he has "no immediate plans" for retiring.

Youth Killed In Motorcycle Crash

Decatur Youth Fatally Injured Near Calera

Sidney Anton Neher, of Decatur, was almost instantly killed Friday afternoon about 4:00 o'clock on U. S. 31, 20 miles north of Clanton, when the motorcycle he was riding hit a bad place in the pavement and went out of control. Martins Ambulance answered the call and brought the injured man to Central Alabama Hospital where he died only a short time later.

The son of W. B. Neher of Decatur where he was interested in the Brick and Tile business with his father, he had gone to Camp Claiborne, La., to return the motorcycle home after a younger brother had been transferred to a camp in Alaska and been unable to take the machine with him. His father and mother came to Clanton late Friday night and made arrangements with Martin and Sons for shipping the body back to Decatur where it was buried.

Mark Remarks:

The Bob Vails of Baldwin County and Washington, spent a few hours Sunday visiting the Mark Tuckers in Clanton. Bob who holds a responsible secretarial position with Congressman George Grant, was on his way back to Baldwin to arrange for moving the family to Washington, as soon as Mrs. Vail is relieved of her duties as acting postmaster of Bay Minette. Bob says he finds a more pronounced spirit of patriotism prevailing in the South than is evident in the North.

Alabama Country Weekly Newspaper look are a whole lot more interesting now in how to get the eat out of dead beats, than they are in whether or not the women are going to be able to get any more silk stockings.

For no other reason than to make me feel bad Mark Polk sends the News a pretty post card from Panama City, saying, "The fishing is fair." And, in order to rub it in, adds: "Why is it we have to be so d--n poor that we cannot spend a month here instead of a week?"

Mildred of America is far more interested in the "run" in her hose, than she is in Hitler's run for Moscow.

Down on Goat Hill they are working about a surplus in the treasury. Nobody seems to know what to do with it. It is bad enough to pay taxes for support of the Government; but to pay taxes for nobody seems to know what, is a d--d shame.

Speaking of "releases," if somebody would handcuff the propagandists and "release" 'em, it would please us immensely.

Sorry, indeed, to hear of the death of Judge T. Pointer, of Florence, first judge of Judge Sam C. Pointer, former judge of "our" Jefferson County Court of Common Claims.

Billy Corning and John Pharr of Birmingham stopped by Tuesday and saw "Old Mark" a cold drink. They came to see a little at politics, and I have a strong notion that they were coming to Montgomery to sit in on the political pow-wow. They were disappointed in the price of advertising in the Chilton County News.

For a dollar, ninety days ago the farmers of Baldwin county were throwing truck loads of them into the gullies because they could not sell them at any price. Hitler is not responsible for this state of affairs; but somebody right here in America is responsible--and, sooner or later will have to make an accounting to Old Man American People.

MORE KIND WORDS FOR "OLD MARK"

We bow as gracefully as we can--at the age of 70 plus--The Chilton County News.

Our sincere congratulations, Mr. Tucker, on your birthday, and may you be spared for many more of them so you can continue to give your readers a good newspaper each week. We always look forward to our issue--The Lowndes Sentinel.

A Good Farmer

Says The Greenville Advocate:

A good farmer can sit down to a meal of roastin' ears, field peas, turnbeans, okra, squash, eggplant, sweet potatoes, corn bread, ham, eggs, peaches and cream; and have watermelon, fig, scuppernongs, and various fruits, melons, etc., to eat between meals. All this with out going off his own place, except to have the corn ground into meal. Good farmers have such meals every day at this season. And at every other season they have about the same, because the art of canning is no longer a hit-or-miss proposition.

Is The War To End?

Says The Anniston Times:

It is reported from London that Stock Exchange odds there against the war ending in 1941 have fallen from 10 to 1 down to 3 to 1 in the last three weeks.

That is a big drop. And from the news we've seen, the odds should be lengthening the other way.

But the boys who set the odds usually know what they are doing. In this case they obviously know more than we in America know.

Who Is Causing High Prices?

From the Blount County Messenger:

We notice that some of our national leaders are urging the farmers not to ask for higher prices as it will cause prices of many articles of the cost of living to advance. In short, they say: 'Mr. Farmer, it is all right for mill workers, auto workers, and steel workers to strike for the price of anything to go up, but if you even just ask for more than you're getting, you are going to ruin the nation.' We have just one answer to such suggestions, and that is this: The farmer will realize less clear profit out of the defense program and the rise in prices than any other branch of industry.

What the America farmer needs is a John L. Lewis of Agriculture. Not that we endorse Mr. Lewis and all his philosophy and ideals, but we do endorse his organizing ability, and his ability to get things done. What the farmers need is organization and strength so that they not only could ask for parity, but demand and get it.

It has always been a question in our minds why the farming people who are a majority of the people in the United States, would continually be given the little end of the deal.

Clyde Judah and Roy Conner, Dale county, killed a 9-buttoned rattler, as it crawled from under the latter's wagon, near his mule.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

On the Fourth of July I was walking along in front of a barroom in Panama City, and from the inside I heard sweet music. I stopped to listen and to my astonishment I heard that song "God Bless America." I looked at the display of whiskey in the windows as I listened and my heart sank within me. Evidently a Radio within me was fingering out of the air that song that we love so well, "God Bless America" and its notes went filtering through the air and the whiskey bottles and to me it was the height of blasphemy. In all of my born days I never heard anything so out of place. If I were low enough to sell whiskey to my fellowmen, never would I allow that song to be played in my place of business. I would not say "God Bless America" when I was engaged in the business that is doing more to damn America than anything in all of American life.

In the olden days Jewish parents thought themselves cursed of God if they were not favored with many sons and daughters. To be childless was a disgrace. In our day it is quite different. As we look at the ways of young men and women and consider what they are, doing, we are almost made to say, "Blessed is that couple that has no children. There is no greater responsibility in all the world than to be a father, a mother. In this day of temptation, in this time of liberal living, there is too much at stake for anyone to crave the position of parent hood. To be a parent and then fall in that position, is not to be desired. A cultured, intelligent person remarked in my hearing, "I shall never cease to thank God that I am not called upon to raise a family in this day of loose ideals."

On the Fourth of July we were in the eating place at the noon hour. We saw only what was taking place in thousands of other eating places throughout the nation. Young men and women crowded the place clad in bathing suits and they smoked and drank and embraced etc. They would consume a large bottle of liquor at their table and then stagger out to enter a car and drive away. They were merely high school boys and girls away from home on a whoopee. It would have appeared nicer if I could say that the boys were more boisterous than the girls. In all that state of revelry some one dropped a coin in a machine and, "God Bless America," was played. While the music drowned the revelry, I had this thought, "If parents do not get on their job, there will be no use in God Blessing America, for we will be a nation of hopeless sinners. Still I pray "God Have Mercy Upon Us."

Cuthrie tells us that one day a friend of his was strolling along a rocky shore at low tide, when his foot slipped and his ankle was wedged between two great rocks. Imagine his horror as he realized that it was impossible for him to release his imprisoned foot. There he sat with his back to the shore and his face to the sea. He shouted to the distant boats but they could not hear him and sailed away. He screamed at the flying pelicans but they knew not his language. The tide was coming in and at last he lost hope of help from man, and then he turned his eyes heavenward and called upon God to have mercy on his soul. The waves came higher, in a few hours they washed the last prayer from his lips and he was gone. My young friends, have you let your foot slip in between the boulders of sin? Bad habits may have bound you secure to a low way of living. The tide of time is sweeping in. Better look out, soon you will be crying to God to have mercy on your soul. Beware of bad company. Beware of whoopee parties and trips.

We are told that there is an old bridge in the Highlands of Scotland that was built by General Wade to connect the Lowlands with the Highlands. It was a massive structure, rising high above the cleft over which it stretched and for years it took care of the traffic. One day it was pronounced unsafe and none was allowed to cross the bridge. Many years before a tiny birch-seed had fallen into a tiny opening on top of the key stone. It sank into the moldy lime and germinated. At first it was so small that a baby hand could have plucked it from its growing place. For years it could have been removed by the passerby with ease, but no one thought to do so. Now, this birch-tree has strong roots and they have wrenched the solid masonry apart, and the bridge is unsafe. It will not be long now until the bridge will come tumbling down. A tiny birch seed did it. You may adopt a bad habit and let it germinate in your character and think but little of its presence and power, but you had better watch out. That one bad habit can send sinful practice into your living that will break up the solid masonry of character and bring you down in ruin.

Thanks To Their Own Efforts, Farmers' Conditions are Improved

Says the Shelby County Reporter:

In our great democracy, fine as it is in many ways, there have been some things that all of us knew were not as they ought to be. One of these shortcomings that cried to high heaven for improvement and adjustment, was the condition of the farmer--the way of living and making a living on the farm. It is sufficient confirmation and commentary just to think of the large number of fine boys and girls, who through the years, have been leaving the farm at the first opportunity, who might have stayed on the farm to their country's lasting good. There is now reason to hope that a change is being made. There is now reason to hope that the farmer's just claim to a larger share of the abundance of wealth he produces is being recognized and that in the future this claim may be more generously recognized.

Faith in this ideal of a better, happier life on the farm was strengthened for us by hearing the address of Edward O'Neal, noted farm leader and president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, at the big farmers' meeting at Florence last week. Faith in the ability of the farmer, himself to find a way out of his difficulties was strengthened also by hearing Mr. O'Neal's recital of what organized farmers have been able to do for themselves already and by just seeing the thousands of sturdy farm men and women who gathered at Florence that day to do honor to Mr. O'Neal as their leader.

A few years ago, Mr. O'Neal well said, there was no farm program. Today there is a farm program, a well recognized farm program. Because there is a farm program the farmer sees himself already receiving more nearly his share of the wealth he gives to the world. For the first time in history the farmer may have at planting time some idea of what price he may receive for his crops at harvest. And it is through the organized efforts of the farmers themselves, following the leadership of Mr. O'Neal and of many others associated with him, that they are thus beginning at long last to gain recognition of their just claims. Every farmer and the whole country owe a great debt to patriotic service.

It goes without saying, we might these farm leaders for their faithful, add, that those who have not joined the Farm Bureau should do so now, not only for the hope of increased benefits in the future, but as an expression of gratitude and appreciation for what has already been done for them.

REVIEWS and PREVIEWS By IRVIN LANDE

MIAMI AND THE WAR

It has been said repeatedly that this war is a battle of ideologies; that is a battle between the conflicting ideas of democracy and dictatorship. But, having just returned from Miami, Florida, with the white sand still in my shoes, and the Miami spirit still in my mind, have come to believe, as we all inevitably must, that this war is something more than merely the battle of ideas, thoughts and ideologies.

Here in Miami, we find the exemplar of America as a whole. As H. Bond Bliss, the Miami Herald's political writer, said to me, "Miami is a combined natural and artificial paradise". What is America, if it is not that same thing, except on a vastly larger scale? Here in America, we have everything a nation could ask for. The rest of America, like Miami, has tropical parks, whether they are for horse racing, like, Hialeah, or for flowers and birds, like Bayfront Park on Biscayne Bay. The rest of America is in the same shoes as Miami is, when we say that it is on a wild building boom. Miami is only an example, too, when we mention the beautiful swimming pools, tropical patios, immense golf courses, glittering theatres--all means for pleasure.

Not only in physical appearance, but in the minds of men, Miami is really a melting pot of America. For here, as one young man told me: "It's hard to get a job here and after you get it there are people struggling to get jobs you can hardly work at it." But there are also men and women, who sit around and watch their incomes whose property bring them the money they need. There are people satisfied with their positions; there are people who are dissatisfied and unhappy. There are those who are willing to continue to live in their same position for the rest of their lives; who are content with their lives, their pride, and their private fortunes. There are those who want more than that; who want to work assiduously for their nation and for the ideal for which their country stands. There are Republicans and there are Democrats. There are honest men and there are dishonest men.

Miami with all its classes of people, with all its types of institutions, is really a classic example of America as a whole. For America, like Miami, has been endowed by nature with all the natural conditions to be a great success; and has been built up by the hands of men to be an even greater success.

And above all the minor details of living, floats a covering which says that, all in all, Miami, like the rest of America, is really profoundly happy, and wishes to be left alone with the rest of the world, so that it can work out its own problems and solve its own difficulties.

Where else in the world can we find a nation so naturally rich, so politically progressive? Where else the world can we find a nation so satisfied with itself, and so determined that it wants to be allowed to conclude its own destiny?

Nowhere else in the world does there exist a power that is so powerful because of its peaceful activities. Everywhere else in the world the nations are overworked, over-exploited, over-exaggerated.

No other nation has the power in itself to carry out its destiny. Destruction, tyranny, are the only way one nation to gain control of the world to realize its own ambition. America stands, alone with developing resources and perfected machinery, carry out its future. The rest of the world is pitifully unhappy, insecure. Afraid of the consequences of its own misfortune, the nations of Europe have resorted to fighting a battle, to try to gain some measure of satisfaction for themselves from the tragic pages of world history. The nations of Europe, depressed by a long war, twenty-five years ago, are trying to regain their lost prestige, to build their lost frontiers.

But in trying to do so, they are giantstepping on the toes of a slumbering giant, who it already considers already self-satisfied with his inevitable future, his invincible destiny. The unhappy nations of Europe are spiritually, if not materially, invading the territory of the happy nation of Western Hemisphere.

For that reason, I submit, this is more than a battle of ideas. It is a real, live battle between the actual developments of the past three decades. It is an actual conflict between the who have what they want and the who do not have what they want.

For, in truth, the second world war is a horrible, destructive struggle between the adjusted and the unadjusted.

Sunday School and preaching were attended Sunday, with large attendance. Rev. Allen Ruff of Clanton was a fine message which was enjoyed by all. Bro. Dykes preached Monday and we are having a wonderful revival, those who are not coming are really missing some good messages and fine preaching. We pray that many may be saved during this revival and that many who have been saved will be revived all over again, and do the Lord's work as they never do before. Our prayer services are really fine services, the Lord is not wasted as there are many who are eager to tell what the Lord has done for them and to ask for prayers for their friends and loved ones, whom they want to see saved. We invite every one to attend our services and come each Sunday for Sunday School.

Producers Granted Sixty Days Repay Cotton Loans

The Department of Agriculture has announced that Commodity Credit Corporation will allow producers until October 1, 1941 to repay outstanding loans and redeem cotton pledged under the 1938, 1939, and 1940 loan program.

The Department also announced that all of this cotton not redeemed by October 1, 1941, will be placed in pools, as provided in the loan agreement, and sold in an orderly manner by Commodity Credit Corporation. Under this plan unredeemed loan cotton from each crop will be placed in a separate pool, with the producer retaining title to the cotton.

On final liquidation of all cotton in each pool the net proceeds, if any, after deduction of all advances and accrued costs, including storage, insurance, and handling charges, will be distributed among producers whose cotton has been placed in the pool, in proportion to their interest. No sales of these pooled stocks will be made prior to March 1, 1942.

approximately 175,000 silk industry workers being forced out of work by the raw silk shortage. The Department of Agriculture reported more than 150 different cotton stocking designs are available to the hosiery industry, and stated 89 per cent of the 16,000 knitting machines can knit cotton as well as silk.

ARMY

The War Department announced a campaign to convert to armament production thousands of consumer-goods factories facing eventual shutdown because of diversion of raw materials to other defense program, and said it already has a list of 500 such plants.

The Department expanded its officer candidate school to provide opportunities for one in each 100 soldiers to receive a commission. Advancement during the first year will be available to about 58 per cent of all trainees, the Department said. It reported 100 Canadian officers and 65 junior officers from the Latin American Republics are now enrolled in various courses with the U. S. Army.

The Senate passed legislation authorizing extension of service of Selectees, Guardsmen and Reservists from 12 months to 30 months, and of enlisted men from three to four and a half years. The legislation provides for a salary increase of $10 a month for every month served in excess of one year. Congress also approved legislation deferring from military service all men who had reached their 28th birthday July 1, and authorizing resignation of men already inducted who became 28 before July 1 and whose discharge is not found contrary to the best interests of the Army.

OIL

Petroleum Coordinator Ickes said he was satisfied with first results of the nightly blackout of East Coast gasoline stations, but asked motorists to redouble efforts to cut motor fuel consumption voluntarily. He made recommendations for operators of commercial vehicles which he said would cut gas consumption about 30 per cent, and announced the oil industry will give its patrons windshield stickers pledging the use of one-third less gasoline than usual. He said 82 insurance companies have contributed to the "share-your car-campaign" by revising underwriting rules to enable motorists to carry paying passengers to and from work.

Federal Security Administrator McNutt urged immediate registration at State employment offices of all automobile service station workers who lose their jobs as a result of the drive to cut gasoline consumption, in order that they may "be transferred as rapidly as possible to other work."

POWER

Consumer Administrator Harriet Elliott issued a list of suggestions to housewives for the conservation of power for defense by cutting electric bills, and said "The practice of careful consumption habits now is the best preparation for the future." Miss Elliott recommended economies be practiced particularly in parts of the country where power shortages are threatened.

LABOR SUPPLY

The OPM said railroad labor and management will help meet skilled labor shortages in defense industries out of the available supply of railroad workers, which includes 20,000 skilled mechanics now unemployed and 80,000 apprentices who could be promoted to release other workers. The OPM also announced 21 Gulf Coast shipyards have put into effect zone labor standards prohibiting strikes and stabilizing wages during the next two years. Federal Security Administrator McNutt said 2,500,000 jobs were filled by State Employment Services during the first six months of 1941, a gain of 52 per cent over the same period in 1940.

DEFENSE HOUSING

FWA Administrator Carmody said nearly 8,000 homes for defense workers—an average of 256 houses, a day—were constructed during July, 16 more houses a day than in June. Mr. Carmody said 16,107 homes were completed as of August 1, of the 90,465 approved for construction. Contracts have been let for 60,835 more, he said.

AGRICULTURE

Assistant Price Administrator Galbraith, speaking during the annual Farm & Home Week, said "farmers... must be the natural leaders in the fight against inflation. If they take the leadership then stability is assured. ... To stop this price increase... we need the willingness to see price advances stopped and stopped firmly." He said prices today are more favorable to farmers than in years, but it took 20 years "to rebuild agriculture out of the wreckage left by the inflation of the last war."

PRICES

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported retail food prices increased 1.5 per cent during the last two weeks of July to a level almost 16 per cent above August, 1939. The Federal Reserve Board said national income payments by last June had reached about $88 billion a year—19 per cent above May, 1940—and said unless an unusually large part of consumer income is saved or paid out in taxes, price inflation will grow.

WORLD AFFAIRS

Secretary of State Hull, returning to his desk after a six-weeks absence, said "During the weeks of my absence the most clinching demonstration has been given... (hat) there is a world movement of conquest by force, accompanied by methods of governing the conquered people that are rooted mainly in savagery and barbarism." Secretary Hull said "with full effort and ever-increasing production and preparation for defense... a successful resistance to the present world movement... will be made."

Oats—A rust resistant variety such as Red Rust Proof, Apples, Hastings 100 bushel, and Nortex; barley—Mar-norab and Tennessee Winter Barley wheat—Alabama Blue Stem, Gasta, and Sandford; and rye—Abruzzi.

Producers May Sell Oats To Farmers Without Test

Oats for planting purposes that do not come quite up to the standard of one variety may be sold directly by producers within their neighborhood to other farmers without being officially tested and labeled, Haygood Paterson, commissioner of agriculture has advised P. O. Davis, director of the Alabama Extension Service.

"We feel, however, that the requirements for seed oats from commercial establishments should not be lowered and that the farmer buying oats from these sources should be protected as to their purity and variety", advises Paterson.

Conditions Favorable For Pasture Planting

Two things are causing Alabama Farmers to plan on planting more permanent pasture this fall:
1. An abundance of white Dutch clover seed were saved this season and prospects are for a bumper harvest of Dallis grass seed.
2. The AAA has recently ruled that white Dutch clover and Dallis, seeded before November 30 will entitle farmers to earn credits under the Alabama five-year farm Annual Leased-acre, the third plant required under the AAA requirements for establishing a permanent pasture may be planted in the spring, thereby completing the soil building practice for establishing permanent pasture in 1942. (Formerly, these three plants had to be seeded within the current year before credit was allowed.)

Weather Note: Clear Today; Drive Safely

Accident analysts have about decided that "making hay while the sun shines" applies as much to garage repairmen as it does to farmers, since fine weather always produces a bumper crop of smashups.
Maybe it's because drivers make too much "hey-hey" when the sun shines!
At any rate, almost 88 per cent of all fatal motor crashes in 1940 occurred when the weather was clear. Only 2.1 per cent occurred during fog, 2.4 per cent during snow and 9.7 per cent when it was raining.
These pertinent facts are revealed in a booklet entitled "Here Today—" just published by The Travelers Insurance Company.

Increased Production Aim Of Dairy Farmers

Increased demand for cheese and condensed milk for home use and for export to Great Britain is causing Alabama dairy farmers to try to cut cost of production and at the same time raise output.

In an effort to help with this work F. W. Burns, extension dairyman, Auburn, offers the following suggestions:

1. Mow pastures to control weeds. Tender grazing will result in increased production and pay for labor cost for this practice.

2. Turn fall freshening cows dry now as they need a rest period of six to eight weeks, to produce most economically during the next lactation period.

3. Have cows in good condition at calving time even though it is necessary to feed some grain on pasture.

4. Plan now to have two tons of hay or three tons of silage and one ton of hay for each cow to be kept this winter.

5. Plan to plant at least one acre of small grain for each dairy cow as this will not only furnish early spring grazing but give additional grain next summer.

6. Milk into clean buckets; strain carefully and cool the milk immediately, using at least four times as much cool water as milk.

ISABELLA FFA TAKES TRIP

On Monday, August 4, 19 Isabella F. F. A. boys and teacher J. H. Camp and Isabella Coach Lawrence McPherson, left for a tour of Florida, Georgia and Alabama. Left Isabella at 7:45 a. m. headed for Montgomery, stopping at places of interest at Capitol, Jefferson Davis home and Department of Archives, then left for Panama City. After spending the night there started for Wakulla Springs. Left Wakulla and spent the night at Tallahassee. Went through the Marine Studios, one of the most interesting places of our trip, seeing fish we had never thought of. Spent the night at Jacksonville Beach where we enjoyed the amusements. On our last night spent the night in Albany, Ga., then we headed for home where we stop and watch a tobacco auctioneer, then stop in Auburn, Ala., from there home. After six days of fun and cooking, eating and sleeping in the open, it was a tour of 1300 miles. Boys who made the trip are as follows:

Alabama Autoists Soon Must Buy New Drivers' Licenses

Applications for 1942-43 Alabama drivers' licenses will be accepted by all judges of probate beginning on Oct. 1, 1941. It was announced yesterday by Director James P. Brawner of the State Department of Public Safety.

In some counties, however, where probate judges wish to begin the issuance of these licenses prior to that date, the director added, applications will be accepted as early as Sept. 1, 1941. The fee required for a new driver's license will be $1.10.

Each applicant must produce his 1940-41 driver's license, or his temporary driving permit, Harold T. Purdy, chief clerk of the drivers' license division, said, or he will have to pass the drivers' license test before a 1942-43 drivers' license can be issued to him.

Any licensee who has lost his current or 1940-41 license, may obtain a duplicate by applying to the drivers' license division of the Department of Public Safety, P. O. Box 1471, Montgomery, Ala., giving his full name, address and the date of his birth. The fee for a duplicate license is 35 cents.

To date, during the 1940-41 licensing period, 550,000 motorists have been licensed in Alabama, Director Brawner said. In connection with the issuing of these licenses he added, more than 90,000 examinations have been given to applicants, for licenses; and the Department has suspended, revoked, cancelled, or denied the driving privilege of 3,370 motorists. All funds received from the issuance of drivers' licenses are expended exclusively in the maintenance of the Highway Patrol and the drivers' license division.

JAMES F. BRAWNER

FUNDAMENTAL FACTS AND FANCIES

Compiled and Arranged by JOHN W. MAHAN

Christian Dogma

The creeds of some of the Christian churches emphasize the idea of the Creator-Father-Ruler, seated on his throne, high up in the heavens, with Jesus the Christ seated on his right hand, and millions of faithful members have been accustomed to recite it in assuming vows and obligations of membership. To say the least, this is erroneous and misleading, in the light of present day knowledge and information, and a revision and restatement would seem to be desirable and in order.

Science and Reason

Astronomy is the science that has led the way out of the fog and haziness of ignorance and superstition in which mankind has floundered throughout the centuries. As the truth of the situation gradually dawned and mapped the heavens and ed in the minds of those who have they passed it on to us, we have lost confidence and faith in those systems of belief taught us in the past and we are looking forward to the finding of some more reasonable teaching to which we can pin our faith. It is the candid belief of a great number of people that a new era has dawned upon the earth, and with the white light of truth to guide us, we shall be able to revise and restate our beliefs to conform more with enlightened reason. "God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him should worship Him in spirit and truth."

THE SPIRIT REALM

That there is a realm where the spirit of man can dwell throughout eternity, is the belief of every sane person who has given it much thought. Because the average person accepts, without much question, the teachings of those who are the regularly constituted leaders and teachers of the different systems of religious belief, mankind has been slow to make changes in the customary order of belief and worship. However, in recent years there has been a tendency to break away and do independent thinking. The change in the conception of God's nature, from physical Super-human to that of spiritual, has necessitated a different location for His, "The Great Spirit's" home.

Its Probable Location

We have already seen that the old idea of a literal and material heaven high up in the skies, is out of the question, because there is no place to lay its foundations. At the same time we have had it suggested that man's whole life and work has to do with the earth and its surroundings. Therefore, since God is a spirit and we are His offspring, we too, are spirits and need a Spirit Realm for our spirits to abide in, near-by to our place of work. The logical and reasonable location for that realm is in the atmosphere and stratosphere surrounding the earth. This is, of course, theory—but reasonable.

Its Length and Breadth

The earth is enveloped in a layer of atmosphere which surrounds it; the length being the distance around the earth, which has something like twenty five thousand miles. The breadth of it reaches from the North Pole to the South Pole, with a depth of something like five miles. This is, probably, the length, breadth and depth of the Spirit Realm.

Heaven and Hell

Heaven is the abiding place for the spirits of those who have been faithful to and considerate of others in this life, and is probably located in the Spirit Realm, surrounding the earth. Hell is probably the abiding place of the spirits of those who have been unfaithful to and inconsiderate of others in this life, and its location is also probably in the Spirit Realm, surrounding the earth; but we should imagine its being located in a different part, separate and apart from the "Green Pastures" of those who were faithful during life.

Thorsby Baptist Church News

Revival services of the Thorsby Baptist Church will begin with the morning service Sunday August 17th, and will continue daily through Wednesday August 27, both morning and evening. The morning service will begin promptly at 7:00 a. m. Central Daylight Saving Time (Weekdays only). Sundays at regular time.

The evening service will begin at 8:00 p. m. with a 30 minute song service preceding the preaching service, which will start promptly at 8:30 p. m. Central Daylight Saving Time. Rev. J. Titus Aldridge, pastor of the Thorsby Baptist Church who is this week conducting a revival at Collins Chapel church, will preach at both services.

The church cordially invites and urges all who will, to attend each and every service.

In beginning the morning services at 7:00 a. m., the Church is innovating a different idea in this section for the early service. It has proven very successful in other sections of the state, and the church voted last Sunday evening to give it a trial in this community.

It is felt that by having the services begin at this time it will give many people an opportunity to attend that otherwise could not. Too, it will not break into the general routine of the day and will also be cooler in the church house. Anyone who has ever attended an early morning or a sunrise service can appreciate the blessings and spirit that prevails then.

Last week marked an epoch in the history of the Thorsby Baptist church. For many years the members have felt a need for a church pastorage, and last week saw the fruition of this dream. Dr. Ezell, former pastor of the Clanton Baptist church for many years, and who is well known to the people of this county and of the state as well, and who is now connected with the State Baptist Convention, together with the church in its regular monthly business session and the church voted to purchase the former Bentley residence for a pastorage. Dr. Ezell remained in Thorsby during Thursday and Friday and with the help of several of the church members, raised the funds necessary for the initial down payment together with pledges for the monthly payment to retire the balance of the cost. Very inspiring messages were given by Dr. Ezell Wednesday and Thursday evenings and on Friday evening a chicken supper and general fellowship hour was held at the church. Church members and friends from Thorsby and surrounding communities and also Clanton attended. Short talks "The Church and the Future" were given by several members and friends of the church. After this, the congregation retired to the basement of the church where ice-cold watermelon was served.

The church wishes to thank God and every one who contributed in any way to this great cause, and again invite all who will to attend the revival services.

THE SMOKY YEARS

INSTALLMENT 6
THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon had built up a vast string of ranches which stretched from the Gulf of Mexico to Montana. King was the powerful and unscrupulous competitor, Ben Thorpe, Bill Roper, King's adopted son, undertook to outdo Thorpe. Thorpe's men were now almost open-

Presently it began to appear that the tough, notoriously trouble-making outfits under Cleave Tanner were not holding together as they always had before. Here and there men were beginning to desert the Tanner outfits—sometimes first because they had failed, sometimes voluntarily deserting to the ranks of the raiders who were now almost openly punishing the Thorpe-Tanner holdings.

Mid-August, in the season of driest weather, the Potosis, by a little used trail, a black-smoked horseman rode. He was a tested gunman, a proven man whose name was known and feared. He was the man known as the Great Trail. Trouble-shooting for Cleave Tanner now, he was moving into the Potosis to find out what had gone wrong with some of Tanner's choices who were now almost openly punishing horses frequently, riding far into the night.

Loping down the almost invisible trail through the dark, his horse suddenly dropped from under him, head into nothingness. The pony might have stepped into a prairie dog hole—or it could have been the drop of a rope. But as the dazed rider struggled up, his mouth full was just a rifle was prodding his belly, and a voice was saying, "Don't you think you might have took the wrong way?"

West Texas, far up the lonely Pecos—One of Cleave Tanner's outfit bosses was talking to the Ranger stationed at Mustang Point.

"Such a damn' outburst of lawlessness has cut loose here as I never seen before," he said.

The ranger here was Val McDonald. He had gone out nineteen times in battle, sometimes against Mexicans, sometimes against the ranches, and he had hunted wild renegades galore.

"Awfully tough," he said in his own sympathetic way.

Into the foreman of the outfit that was wanted up was fit to be tied. "I tell you, we're being stolen blind," he raved. "Not just a calf here and there, either—they take 'em in bunches and bunches. It's the boldest thing I've ever seen. Even when there's no chance of getting clear away on any cattle, they're game to stampede a cut herd that it's took weeks to round up, and scatter it from hell to—"

"This is one of Ben Thorpe's outfits, is it?"

"Does that mean—"

"Well? How many times has Cleave Tanner had the word 'Ranger' on his back? He's put more destruction in the way of things we was trying to do than any other man. Who was it had the legs—sure cut down our pay until we was practically ride for nothing, and furnish all our own stuff?"

"The question here is whether we're going to have any law, or are we going to have—"

"From what I heard," McDonald said, "Cleave Tanner has left it to me to know that he's the biggest end of the law himself. Go talk to Cleave Tanner if you want law."

"My understanding is," the foreman said, "that the Rangers are supposed to—"

"I'll move out and straighten up your little old range," McDonald said. "I'll be glad to. Just as soon as I get orders from headquarters."

"I'm waiting for their right orders now."

But the weeks rolled by, and headquarters was curiously still.

End of summer, a welcome end—Cleave Tanner himself, the Cleave Tanner who represented Ben Thorpe in the south, master of breeding grounds, the man who controlled the reins of all Ben Thorpe's plains organization, was talking to the United States Marshal at San Antonio.

"There hasn't been such a wave of outlawry since the horse Indians was put down. Damnation, man! It's set us back ten years. . . I know what the law has been. Your idea is to let us fight it out for ourselves, against Mexico, against the Indians, against all hell. But I tell you, this thing comes from inside. It might be something that I couldn't beat without help."

The United States Marshal at San Antonio smiled to himself a little while, and he said, "Seems like this must be a terrible bad thing for you, Cleave."

"I'm telling you—"

"Go ahead and tell me. You're a Ben Thorpe man, ain't you? A right leading Ben Thorpe man. Well—I guess I'll tell you a couple of things, some day. . ."

There was law in Texas, even in those days; but there was no such law as could stand against the combined renegades of the long trail, men behind them a lawyer who could delay forever in the courts; and a reckless expenditure of money, the source of which some suspected, but which was not definitely known.

FARMERS INCOME INCREASED OVER THREE MILLION

Three quarters of a million dollars has been added in less than three months to the income of families on the Farm Security Administration program in Region 7. (Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, Florida) as result of the Department of Agriculture's "Food for Defense" campaign, reports Marvin Durbin FSA supervisor for Chilton County.

This comes from marketing 1,800,000 broilers and fryers that have been raised from the five million baby chicks that were bought by these families in May in response to the national appeal to raise more food for defense.

In Chilton County, 35,000 baby chicks were bought, and of these 15,500 cockers, have been sold or are ready to be sold in culling or the new flocks to save the pullets for egg production.

"But the additional $750,000 income from sources which the small farmer never tapped before is only part of the story," said Supervisor Durbin. "That he has inspired to do the job, that he has been taught that it can be done over and over, and that his outlook and capacity have been doubled—these are the big things."

"Nothing else in the long effort to improve the outlook and productivity of the Southern small farm has ever matched in a similar length of time the record of the last two months and a half in stimulating more food for defense."

Mr. Durbin pointed out that valuable lessons have been learned. For instance, it has been found out that with proper care and feeding, chickens may be raised even when they are hatched in May and June. In this county, 90 per cent of the May chicks are being raised. In the entire region, at least ninety per cent have lived and done well.

The money received from the cockers probably will pay the cost of the entire five million chicks and of the feed used in raising them to this stage. As most of the sales throughout the region have been made through cooperative associations, and as cooperative of bulk buying proved its advantages, a valuable lesson in cooperation has been implanted deeply.

He pulled up his horse a few yards from the kitchen gallery.

December day. The sky was low and heavy, and the bitter north had brought a scud of hard snow a long way to throw it sharply in his face.

He pulled up his horse a few yards from the kitchen gallery, then sat there looking at the house, his sheepskin hunched about his neck. Even now, having come this far, he almost made up his mind to go away.

Then Jody Gordon stepped out on the gallery, a whippy wooten dress and stood estimating the uninvited horseman through the dusk. Something like the strike of a buffalo lance went through Bill Roper; it was so long since he had seen that one slim little figure that could so change everything under the sky, for him.

A split pole fence separated them; and after a moment's pause came across the few yards of space, leaning sideways against the bitter wind, and stood gripping a bar of the fence as she peered up into his face.

"I knew it was you," she said.

"Child," said Bill Roper, "you get back in that house. You'll freeze!"

"Then you put up your horse and come in."

"Is your father here?"

"He's in San Antonio."

"I don't think he'd want me here, Jody."

"Lew Gordon has never turned away any rider without a cup of coffee; not yet."

He gave in, then, and stepped down. He tied his horse to the fence, and followed her into the house.

There fire in the big wood range made the room a dazing contrast to the cold sweep of the prairie; he threw his coat open, but did not take it off.

"Of course," Jody said, "we keep hearing about you."

"That's too bad. I expect you wouldn't be hearing anything good."

"No."

Silence again. He didn't know why he had come; there wasn't anything he could say. He stood by the stove, his eyes brooding on the iron. Deep in the pockets of his coat there was a trembling in his slack fingers, not caused by cold. It was a strange and uncomfortable thing to be so near this girl again, and yet to be so far away.

"Still," Jody said, "you seem to be doing down what you set out to do."

Thorpe's Texas holdings, seemed likely to stop him. Gunmen seized control of isolated ranches and cattle were driven off by the thousands as entire herds are isolated across the Rio Grande into Mexico.

"Sometimes it looks like I'm not even doing that."

"If you haven't accomplished anything else, you've astonished my father. He's said himself, over and over, he wouldn't have supposed it that you'd be done. No question but what Cleave Tanner is shaken; he's shaken clear down to his roots. No body knows what's what any more, or what will happen. People who thought a year ago that Cleave Tanner was invincible—they're saying now that he's coming to the end of his string; that if this thing goes on, Tanner will be through."

"What else do they say?"

"They're saying that the worst renegades of the trail are working together, for the first time—the killers, the men who don't care if they live or die. They say they have money back of them now, and that even Cleave Tanner, with all his string of outfits, can't stand up against the everlasting raiding, and stampeding, and mysterious loss of cattle. They say he's lost too many outfits, just because he couldn't spare the gunmen to hold the range."

"Eleven outfits," Roper said.

"Then it was really you?"

"Those eleven outfits they speak of—those were outfits roughed away from little lonely men, on pretenses that hadn't any justice or any true basis. Those outfits are back with their owners now."

"But—you admit your wild bunch is behind all this?"

"Call it that if you want to. I guess there isn't anybody knows as well as you do what I'm trying to do."

She said in a dead voice, "I never believed it; I couldn't believe it—until now."

"Did I tell you about it? I told you about it before I began. I set out to break Cleave Tanner; and by God, he'll be broken—if I live."

"You know Cleave Tanner has put up five thousand dollars for your arrest?"

Bill Roper chuckled crazily. "All right. I'll put up ten thousand for his arrest. There isn't going to be any arrest, and he knows that, too."

"I can't believe it," she kept saying over and over. "I can't believe it even yet."

"You can't believe what?"

"That you're an outlaw—a wild bunch, boss, thrown in with the ugliest killers this range has ever seen, or any range."

He said ironically, "Don't hardly see how I could use second rate men."

"Reports have come in," Jody said wonderingly, "from over eight hundred miles of country; they're beginning to call it a rustlers' war. I can't believe it. The whole wild bunch and lawful men. And you—"

"What about me?"

"Oh, Billy, it's unbearable! That you—you've turned yourself into the festering point of all that struggle, and hate, and lawless gunning—"

He had to grin at that, unhappy as he was. "Didn't realize I was festering," he said.

"You had everything," she said, "and you threw it away."

He had only heard her say that once before; but, in memory, he had heard it so often since that her words had the ring of a familiar song.

"I'm sorry that we can't ever see things the same," Bill said. "I started out to get Cleave Tanner, and after a while, after Tanner, Walk Lasham, and after Walk Lasham, Ben Thorpe. But when it comes to saying I had everything before I started in, I guess maybe that isn't so."

Jody said hotly, "There wasn't one thing in all the world you didn't have—or couldn't have had—before you chose this crazy way!"

"I didn't have you," he told her.

"If I had had you, I guess I would have you yet. Things don't shift and change so easy that—not in the part of the world I know."

He was pulling on his gloves now. In buttoning his sheepskin coat. In what was left of the light, the shadows lay heavy upon his face. As he stood there, he could have been Dusty King himself—the man who had broken a hundred long and weary trails; except that Dusty King had perhaps never looked so old.

Her voice came to him as if from a distance. "And when you're through," she said—"what are you going to have left?"

"Far as I know," Bill Roper said, "I'm not going to have anything left. God knows I've got very little left now." He was glad he didn't know how his resources had dwindled, how close to the end he really stood.

Her voice rose sharply. "Can't you see there's no hope in this ghastly thing? Thorpe's grip is unbreakable." She came close to him, and her words came through her teeth. "It's your very life you're throwing away!"

Perhaps he misunderstood her then; for he grinned. "Maybe," he said, "that would be the least I could lose; the very least of all."

Need Treatment For Small grain Needed

Here is how to treat oats, wheat, and barley against smut:

1. Oats are best treated with 37 to 40 percent formaldehyde mixed with equal parts of water. Shower oats from one pile to another, giving one good pump (a one-quart atomizer type sprayer is suggested) of the solution to each shovelful. Leave oats covered for five hours or over-night with bag which has been sprayed with solution.

2. New improved cereal is recommended for barley, wheat, and rye. Place bushel of seed and one-half ounce of dust in an oil drum or similar container, close tightly and roll for several minutes. The cereal is poison to man and beast so special precautions must be taken when using this material.

One More Weed Cutting In Pasture Now Needed

Weeds in the permanent pastures should be cut once more this year.

If weeds are cut now most of the plants will be destroyed before seed mature. If present weeds are destroyed-extension agronomist, advises cutting weeds with a hand blade or hoe. If only a few weeds are present hand pulling may be done. The main point to remember is that this job should not be postponed until weeds have time to mature.

Farmers Interested In Good Pastures
Many farmers in Chilton County are interested in building a good pasture. Those who have started have found that the seed is expensive. White Dutch Clover is one of these expensive seeds that can be successfully grown and saved in Chilton County.
White Dutch clover is a perennial legume that grows during mild winters and early spring. It has a white, crescent shape near the center of the leaf. It has a white bloom that grows above the rest of the plant and produces an abundance of seed. Under favorable conditions it will bloom and produce seed the entire year.
It is now time to begin preparations for planting a seed patch of White Dutch clover. Select a good piece of land preferably in a bottom. Plow this as soon as possible. Fertilize with at least 300 pounds of 15 per cent superphosphate and 500 pounds of lime or 500 pounds of basic slag per acre. If possible harrow this fertilizer into the soil. Allow the area to settle well. This will make a firm mellow seed bed. Keep weeds off the area. Plant the seed not later than October 15th at the rate of 5 pounds per acre. The seed must be inoculated. It is better to plant the seed during a "Drizzle" of rain. Cover seed lightly.
Seed planted according to the above should produce an abundant crop of clover and enough seed to plant several acres of pasture. In addition there is a soil building payment of $1.50 per acre for the seeding and a payment for using the fertilizer. In addition to this, the above will qualify for 8 credits per acre under the 1941 Conservation Program.
For further information on the above refer to pages 57 and 58 of Handbook of Alabama Agriculture, 3rd Edition, or to your County Agents.

Health Department Report Eight Cases of Polio in County

Parents Urged To Keep Children At Home Until Polio Outbreak Ends

There have been eight cases of pol...iomyelitis reported up to date in Chil-
...ton County. One of these occurred in ...July. All the others have been re...ported within the past ten days. Two ...of these cases have shown no real
...paralysis.

The Health Officer wishes to urge ...all parents in the county to keep their ...children at home until there is some ...indication that the present outbreak
...is over. The fewer contacts a child
...has with persons outside his own fam...ily, the better are the chances to es...cape exposure to the disease. We ...realize that this will cause some in...convenience to parents, but for the ...protection of their own children and
...of the community we must urge that ...this be done.

Early diagnosis and prompt pro...tection of paralyzed muscles will do a ...great deal to avoid serious crippling.
...If even the disease does develop. If ...your child is ill, put him to bed, away
...from other children, call his family
...physician and follow his advice.

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—Keep chil...dren at home until the present polio...myelitis outbreak comes to an end.
...That was the urgent advice given
...today by Dr. J. N. Baker, State Health
...Officer, to Alabama parents.

"There is no occasion for hysteria,
...but it is essential, in the interest of ...the public health and for the protection
...of their own children, that par...ents be willing to sacrifice their own ...convenience and even give up plans
...for long-looked forward to vacations
...until there is some indication that the ...present polio-myelitis outbreak is de...finitely a thing of the past," he said.
..."We hope that time will come soon,
...but we cannot tell. Whether it comes ...sooner or much later may well depend ...upon the willingness of parents to co...operate with the health authorities by ...doing everything possible to limit the ...number of new cases."

Picking And Ginning Affect Cotton Price

Care in picking and ginning may ...raise the grade and price the farmer
...will receive for his cotton.

The condition in which the cotton ...is brought to the gin is one of the ...factors governing the grade, reports
...J. C. Lowery, extension agronomist,
...who lists several things farmers can do
...to improve the quality of cotton.

1. Pick when free from dew and rain
2. If the cotton is wet at picking, spread ...on a tarpaulin or in a cotton house or
...on a platform to dry.
3. Be sure that cotton does not con...tain trashy material when it is picked.
4. Cooperation between farmers and ...ginners will result in a better grade
...and price of cotton.

OLD MARK HAS ARRIVED

At long last, after more than a half century of effort—and some work—"Old Mark" has become famous as an author and writer. An author is famous when he begins to get "fan mail," and a writer is famous when he begins to get material results: "Old Mark" is getting both. SPECIAL NOTICE

TO LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE USERS

Never before in history have our long distance switchboards been so busy. Long distance calls this year have already far exceeded 1940's record-breaking average, and the volume grows greater every day.

Industries with vital defense orders and booming Army and Navy posts are relying heavily on long distance service. In addition, calls from the general public have increased by leaps and bounds.

Despite our "all-out" effort to meet these rapidly expanding demands, our facilities are at times operated at near capacity. Occasional delays may be expected on some long distance calls. "Hold-the-line, please" service is not always possible.

To relieve the situation we are engaged in an expansion program costing millions of dollars. Many thousands of miles of new long distance circuits have been placed in operation this year, and more are on the way. Additions to many switchboards have been installed. Others are being set up as fast as they can be secured and our men can place them in operation.

But manufacture and installation of telephone equipment takes time, and defense priorities are making it increasingly difficult to secure essential materials.

Long distance telephone users can do their part in this present emergency by avoiding as much as possible placing calls during the peak long distance hours of 9 to 11 a.m. and 7 to 8:30 p.m.

The understanding and cooperation of those we serve will be most helpful and will be genuinely appreciated.

Rapidly Sinking Graves Opposition Grabs At Straws

The floundering and rapidly sinking Graves opposition for another term as Governor of Alabama, was clearly evidenced by a lengthy editorial in Monday's Birmingham Post, wherein the Post undertakes to lay the blame for the inefficiency of the present administration to properly handle a surplus it finds in the State Treasury, because the Act which made the surplus possible was passed by the Legislature during the last Graves administration.

It is very plain that the Post was grabbing at whatever political floatism it happened to find floating on Alabama's political sea at the moment, in the hope that a stray piece of political debris might be found to keep the floundering, floundering opposing political craft afloat a while longer.

Granting that the Act was passed during Graves' last administration; it served the purpose for which it was passed, and served it well—going directly back to the people where it would do the most good at the time. Every dollar was accounted for properly, and the effort to blame Bibb leaves for the inability of the present administration to handle a surplus created by a previous administration is weak, childish, and its only purpose and intention evidently was to mislead the unthinking into believing that a former governor was to blame for the present governor's refusal to obey a law, the language of which is plain enough for anyone to understand.

London Is Disappointed

Believe it or not; the London Bankers, the British Tories and England's moth-eaten aristocracy are not very happy over the outcome of the Roosevelt-Churchill sea conference. Their future aims, and what they had hoped for, was an outright pledge that Uncle Sam would go all out to help the English preserve the status quo of 1940, which doesn't fit in very well with America's present New Deal aims and aspirations.

President Roosevelt has made it very clear that these United States are going to do everything they can to make the peace that will come after this war a lasting peace—in which all peoples can participate and enjoy. The London Government status quo of 1940 would certainly not insure any such peace; it would only be the beginning of preparations for another world conflict.

Poll Tax And Reapportionment

Says The Cullman Banner: Whenever politics in Alabama simmer down to becoming monotonous even to the state's newspaper editors, those ranting gentlemen of the Fourth Estate usually fall back to the old faithful topics of contention... poll tax reform and reapportionment in the Alabama Legislature.

Right now is no exception, and consequently newspapers from Mobile to Athens have been indulging in a series of name-calling editorials declaring that the time has come "for something to be done."

Supporters of the reapportionment drive, point out the fact that the Constitution was amended in 1901, incorporating into its sacred statutes a piece providing for the reapportionment of the legislature every 10 years according to the Federal census. But since that time, there have been four U. S. censuses taken, but positively not one reapportionment.

Quite naturally, principal support for reapportionment always comes from those counties which would gain representation should reapportionment be enacted, and vice versa. This means that the counties in North Alabama, which have gained population a great deal faster than those of South Alabama are the hearty supporters of the shuffling of representation.

But legislators in the Black Belt, which has shown little increase in population in 40 years, have a mortal fear... a fear that has assumed proportions very similar to those of the boogey man... that is, they fear that when the reapportionment comes about, North Alabama legislators would ruin their careers by repealing the poll tax laws. They would do this awful thing because the North Alabama counties have very few Negroes in comparison to the near-majority black population of the Black Belt counties.

But the Tuscaloosa News came forth last week with a most happy solution to the problem... a compromise in which the Black Belters would give in to reapportionment provided the North Alabama counties would give up the idea of poll tax reform.

Certainly, if North Alabama counties would not agree to that plan, they would not agree to any plan, for after reapportionment was passed, there would be no reason why the future legislators should not forget all about the contracts made by their predecessors. Likewise another group of legislators made a contract in 1901 concerning reapportionment, but apparently everyone of their predecessors have forgotten all about those commitments.

Alabama is one of the seven states in the union which retains the poll tax, and everyone of these states are in the South. The old timers know definitely why they are so rapidly against poll tax reform. They declare that the tax is the mighty fortress against any onslaught upon their way of life, their government since the Civil War. Where the black populations are as large or larger than the white, the whites feel that the poll tax keeps the government white.

But does it? One columnist points out that if that were true, then, why is it that the exservicemen, who are excused from paying the tax, do not cast their ballots in Alabama. The answer is poll tax or no poll tax, Negroes are not going to vote anymore than they are under the present conditions.

Why cannot our law-makers look at the problem squarely, without recalling the bewhiskered promises of long ago. Reapportionment is democracy, pure and simple. Without reapportionment we have some citizens who are governed without having proper representation. So any argument against reapportionment in Alabama must be founded in individual greed and petty politics.

On the other hand, poll taxes in Alabama have given rise to nothing on earth except corruption in politics. Poll tax has never had much to do with who shall vote and who shall not vote. But, in order that everyone may be satisfied and a happy solution to the situation be reached let us be certain that registrations are strict and are carried out. Certainly illiterates and those not qualified in other ways to vote, should be stricken from our poll lists.

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

I had the services of a very congenial porter at the depot in Houston Texas. I felt free to talk with him about his place among the public and without reservation he informed me that he had no salary. His only pay came in tips from the public. He rendered good service and he said that he was taking in a good living from tips alone. Too many people are trying to support their church as they do the porter—with tips, but that is not God's method of support. To be sure the church is giving acceptable service, but she is in need of more than tips on Sunday morning. If you have been putting a tip into the collection plate, turn over a new leaf and do something real handsome for your church.

There is a discerning picture that shows the distinction between a professor of religion and a genuine Christian. This was drawn by elder Knapp in a sermon that he preached. He said, "if you turn a professor of religion out of the church he will act like a hog and turn around and do his best to root down the pen, but if you turn a true Christian out of the church he acts like an innocent lamb, he looks within again." When an individual is back toward the fold and longs to be sufficiently urged to withdraw from the church and does so, and then goes into a flame of hatred for the church, it is rather clear that he has had a just deal.

Some years ago a group of uneducated tourists from the west visited a famous Art gallery in one of our Universities. They walked about the building, looking at the priceless masterpieces by the curator to speak in rapacious on the wall. One of them was ther a contemptuous manner to another. "I do not think much of these pictures." Then the curator felt called upon to make reply and in a mild manner he said, "Excuse me sir, it is not the pictures here that are unusual. It is the visitors." Has it ever occurred to you that it is not Christianity that is upon trial. Like a masterpiece of Art, its merits have been established, and if you do not like Christianity, there is something wrong with your ideals.

I never hear preachers talking about the wonders of deathbed repentance and salvation that I do not think of the old story. It is said that one day an angel came before old Saint Peter at the golden gate and threw down an armful of empty sacks before him. The old Gate Keeper examined them and finding nothing in them asked of the angel, "What are these and from whence did they come?" The angel replied, "Why sir these are a few dying confessions that I gathered up from over the earth." The old Gate Keeper then looked through them again and shook his head. After so long a time he pulled them just inside the gate saying, "The Lord only knows what use he has for these empty sacks." I am not saying that a man can not be saved on his death bed, but I am like Peter, I do not know what God can do with empty sacks.

A country lad was the owner of a very fine dog. He had orders to get rid of his dog as the farm was overstocked with his like. The boy decided to take his hound to town and sell him. He walked up and down the street all day with his dog but no one would buy him. Late in the afternoon a man came to him wanting the dog, but having no money as purchase price. He finally told the boy that he was an honest man, a deacon in the Baptist church and that if he would let him have the dog that he would surely pay for him in a few days. The boy trusted him and the deacon carried the dog home with him. That night at the supper table the boy's daddy asked of his boy if he had sold his dog. "Yes daddy, but tell me what kind of a man is a deacon?" The father, being a Methodist replied, "Why son, a deacon is about the same thing in the Baptist church that a steward is in the Methodist church." "Then the boy burst into tears saying, "I have lost my dog." How necessary it is that officials in the churches should be men and women of untarnished characters.

Smith Station, Lee County, has just held a "better babies" clinic.

Says the Montgomery Advertiser: The government cotton crop forecast shows Alabama to be in better shape than some of our sister states. While the predicted yield for the nation as a whole is off a million and three-quarter bales from last year, the Alabama crop is forecast at 19,000 bales above 1940. With boosted cotton price, this will mean more money for Alabama farmers, who will fare better than those of several other states, notably those to the east of us. Thus the Georgia yield is forecast at only a little over half of last year, and the South Carolina output at less than half of the 1940 crop. Of course, Alabama cotton raisers had their share of ill-fortune last year.

HE DEMANDED COTTON

Says The Decatur Daily: The scene was in a Decatur grocery. A customer, who happened to be one of this section's best known planters, walked in and asked about a large sack of sugar, but the customer wanted it in a bag made of cotton. The merchant explained he had the sugar, but that it was in a paper bag. "But I want cotton," the planter insisted, "you see I grow cotton and I sell cotton."

The Daily wonders what effect it would have on the market if every grower of cotton demanded that cotton be used in making the coverings for all article, the grower purchased. There probably would not be nearly so much surplus cotton in the government warehouses as there is.

ALTOGETHER NOW

Says The Prattville Progress: Prattville is inherently a beautiful little city. All that we need to do to make this natural beauty stand out in all its attractiveness is to keep our buildings, painted, our yards clean, plants and flowers growing, streets in order, with all gutters clean of weeds and trash, and keep the weeds cleared from the vacant lots. This beautiful work is easy to do if all will work together. The owners of the property have their very definite work to do, and they ought, in sheer self-interest, to be ever on the job. As we stated last week on this page, the condition of the premises proclaim to all observers the characters of the owners. The City officials have their work to do too. They would never think of trying to shirk their duties. They have chosen representatives of all citizens, charged with the solemn responsibility of keeping things in order. All the City's weeds, and grass, trash and litter should be kept off the streets of the streets for which the local government is responsible. It is the responsibility of the officials to see that lazy owners of vacant lots keep them clean. We feel that a group of officers of the type of ours will need no prodding to get them to keep things clean in such order as to tell the passing public that Prattville is a City Council composed of men of high ideals and forthright progressive men. Altogether, Mr. Mayor, the Citizens, Altogether, Mr. Mayor, Members of the City Council and Fellow Citizens. Let us keep our city streets and vacant lots clean and beautiful.

WHY?

BECAUSE these are violations of the Alabama ABC Law and if permitted would cause me to lose my beer license. My beer license is my job - my bread and butter and I'm sure you can see my side of the question.

BECAUSE the beer industry gives jobs to 7,000 people in Alabama and pays them annual wages exceeding $5,382,000 and pays $1,000,000 annually in direct taxes to the State of Alabama. Its counties and cities.

These are material benefits to Alabama that can be preserved if beer is sold only under clean, wholesome conditions. I'll appreciate your cooperation.

THE MANAGEMENT

THROUGHOUT Alabama today you'll see this placard in retail beer outlets—the sign of the dealer who believes in law and order, and asks your cooperation in helping him maintain a clean and orderly establishment, as wholesome as a glass of beer itself.

A Message to Employees of Alabama Power Company

(As it appeared in the Company's Employees' Magazine)

ALL of us will remember the President's address to the Nation on the night of May 27, 1941, in which he redefined the national policy and goal, and in terms upon which all can unite in loyal support and with undivided energy.

It is now the duty of every citizen, whether employed as a public official or in the ranks of business, to cooperate to the end of obtaining increased production and greater efficiency in all national defense effort.

We will, I am confident, do everything possible to attain unity and coordination with all other forces in America so essential to give renewed speed to the national defense program.

May I ask you, therefore, to join in that famous toast of Stephen Decatur to his country:

"Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our Country, right or wrong!"

Cotton Loan Program For 1941 Announced

A loan program has been approved by the Department of Agriculture to assist 1941 cotton growers.

Cotton producers cooperating with the AAA program will be eligible for loans on their entire 1941 cotton production at a rate based on 85 per cent parity price as of August 1, the beginning of the marketing year.

The department announced the penalty rate on cotton marketed in excess of the farm marketing quota will be 7 cents a pound, compared with three cents last year. The penalty rate is fixed at 50 per cent of the basic loan.

Discussing the cotton loan program, Mr. Jones said the average loan rate on 7-8 inch middling cotton gross weight will be 14.02 cents a pound, based on parity price of 16.49 cents for August 1. The average loan rate gross weight was 8-90 cents a pound, last year on 7-8 inch middling cotton. J. B. Hutson, president of the CCC, has announced differentials for grade, staple and location in the new program will be calculated in relation to the loan rate on 15-16 inch middling cotton, which is the basic description for all future and spot contracts. The rate for middling 15-16 inch cotton will be 20 points (.2 a pound) above the basic rate for 7-8 inch middling. As in 1940, the loan rate will also be based on the net weight of the cotton. The net weight loan rate will be 60 points above that for gross weight to compensate for the lesser number of pounds on which the loan is extended. The average loan rate for 15-16 inch middling cotton, net weight, will be 14.82 cents a pound.

Important To Solve Farm Price Problem

"Our conclusion is that reasonable settlement of the price problem is now the most pressing need of farmers," says P. O. Davis, director, Alabama Extension Service.

"When a farmer plants in the spring he ought to know approximately what his produce will be worth at the market next fall. Successful manufacturers have this information; so likewise, farmers are entitled to it. It must be satisfactory price, one that enables farmers to receive and pay decent wages for labor; and also to earn adequate net dividends upon money invested in land, livestock, and equipment.

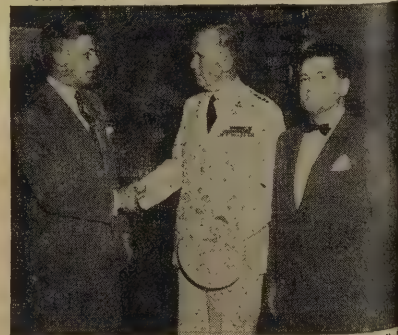

"Records are clear and convincing that drastic fluctuations of prices have been disastrous to farmers. We must stabilize price on a decent level. When this is done we shall see steady improvements in the operations of farmers, increased confidence, and much higher standard of living on farms."

Zoysia Grass Offered

Homer Fisher has arranged with Auburn nurseryman, T. C. King, to send a square foot of zoysia sod, each county agent for establishing demonstration plot on public grounds near his office. If space is not available near the office, ground around another public building may be used. Already 27 county agents have ordered this sod shipped and others are doing so. These little demonstration plots should be helpful in teaching lawns grasses. Zoysia is excellent for lawns.

"CLEAN" SOLDIERS BEST ...SO U. S. ARMY BUILDS CHAPELS

"We are determined to have a 'clean' army, morally and physically," General George C. Marshall, U. S. Army Chief of Staff, said Sunday, July 27, at the dedication of the first of 555 identical chapels the War Department is building at army camps throughout the country.

Shown welcoming James J. Norris, administrative assistant for the National Catholic Community Service, and Daniel O'Leary, national program director for the N. C. S. to the colorful ceremonies held at Arlington cantonment near Washington, D. C., General Marshall and the two and others who braved a blazing July sun for the simple but impressive dedicatory ceremony "these chapels will make a major contribution to that end." White frame, and with movable altar within the chapels will be used by Catholics, Protestants and Jews alike. The National Catholic Community Service is a member agency of the United Service Organizations.

After the first year of the defense program the Senate committee investigating the defense program issued a report stating that costs of the Army's $1,600,000,000 camp construction program were "unduly and unnecessarily high" because of lack of planning. War Under Secretary Patterson replied that despite cold weather, labor and material shortages and other "almost insurmountable difficulties" the camps were ready before the time set for troop arrival and the American Army is now the best housed Army in the world.

ECONOMIC DEFENSE

The Economic Defense Board, composed of Vice-President Wallace and ranking Cabinet officers, met for the first time and outlined two undisclosed projects to coordinate and strengthen the nation's economic defense. The National Resources Planning Board issued a booklet, "After Defense—What?" calling upon public and private agencies to start immediate planning to prevent chaos after the emergency. The Board stated that if adequate post-defense employment plans were not ready and another depression allowed to set in, the nation could lose everything it is now striving to defend.

LABOR

A WPA survey showed unemployment declined 300,000 in July to 5,600,000—nearly 4,000,000 less than last July. The Bureau of Employment Security reported job placements of persons under 21 years increased 78 per cent in the past year. The Bureau also reported placements of Negroes are 47 per cent higher than six months ago. The Committee on Fair Employment Practice announced Army, Navy and Maritime Commission contracts now contain clauses prohibiting hiring discrimination because of race, creed, color or national origin.

The War Department announced defense strikes increased from 24 involving 14,000 workers last week, to 28 strikes involving 21,700 men as of August 15. The U. S. Conciliation Service settled 26 disputes. Acting Navy Secretary Bard said the strike at the Federal Shipbuilding Company, Kearny, N. J., causes a daily loss of more than 200,000 man-hours of work on vitally needed combat ships.

The President suspended the eight-hour day for mechanics and laborers of the War Department working on airfields, troop housing and similar projects in order to rush completion.

PRICES AND PRIORITIES

The OPACS set ceiling prices three and one-half cents a pound on raw sugar, duty paid at New York, three-tenths of a cent under August 11 prices, and advised consumers not to pay more than present retail prices under any circumstances. Ceiling prices on rayon will be set shortly, the agency said.

OPM placed steel under full priority control, asked all pig-iron producers to set aside two per cent of September output, and prohibited further manufacture of white wall auto tires to conserve rubber and zinc.

INFLATION CONTROL

The President gave the Governors of the Federal Reserve System control over installment buying to prevent a volume of easy credit to consumers so large it would cause inflation by increasing the demand for goods at a time the supply is growing less. The Governors announced regulations regarding down-payments, length of loans and types of credit would restrict installment buying of autos, refrigerators, washing machines, vacuum cleaners and other durable goods but would not affect charge accounts at grocery and department stores.

OIL

Defense Petroleum Coordinator Ickes said the first full week of the 7 to 7 "curfew" for 100,000 East coast gas stations showed virtually 100 per cent cooperation with little employment loss but sales in the Eastern States were 13 per cent higher than this time last year. He said "rigid steps" will have to be taken to restrict gasoline sales.

LICENSE PLATE METAL

The OPACS requested State motor vehicle stickers to convert motorists to hand on their 1941 license plates when they get 1942 tags. The OPACS arranged for metal for the new tags because time was too short to make substitutes but stated no sheet metal will be available for 1943 tags.

Cut Hay At Right Time To Get Better Quality

Hay crops cut at the right stage are more nutritious and higher in protein content than if cut later.

The common fault in saving hay is delaying the cutting too long, reports J. C. Frink, assistant agronomist, Auburn, who suggests: That annua lespedeza be cut when in full bloom stage and sericea when 12 to 15 inches in height.

That soybeans be cut when the pods are one-third to one-half filled and before leaves begin to shed.

That alfalfa be cut when new buds are well started on the crown.

Cotton Penalty Rate Is 7 Cents Per Pound

The penalty rate for cotton marketed in excess of the 1941 farm marketing quota will be seven cents a pound, according to A. W. Jones, State AAA administrator.

Under an amendment to the AAA act the penalty rate this year was set at 50 per cent of the basic loan rate. The basic loan rate, set by the same legislation, was to be 85 per cent of the cotton parity price at the start of the marketing year on August 1 and was announced at 14.02 cents a pound for 7-8 inch middling cotton. Parity price for cotton on August 1st was 16.49 cents a pound.

The new loan rate, Mr. Jones said, is more than five cents a pound higher than it was in 1940 and the penalty rate is four cents a pound higher than it was last year.

Farmers Urged To Earn All Conservation Money

Farmers are urged by A. W. Jones, State AAA administrator, to carefully review now their 1941 plans made last Fall to determine how much they must do to comply with the first year's requirement of the five-year plan and earn all Agricultural Conservation Program payments.

Although many farmers may be behind in their requirements, proper planning of the work to be carried out this Fall can be done with the aid of the county agent and planners and every farmer should be able to complete the necessary practices to earn all payments. With the recent revision providing that poor stands of annual lespedeza and kudzu would, under certain conditions, draw payments and the outlook for greatly increased planting of small grain and winter legumes as well as increased terracing, Jones said he hoped for a high percentage of Alabama ACP payments to be earned.

Assistant Economist Named

Effective August 11 Anne Thacker was appointed assistant economist of the Alabama Extension Service. Her appointment will enable John Liles, Jr., to spend more time in the field; and also permit expansion of the work in economics and marketing for which there is an ever-growing demand. She has had much experience in this work.

Dress Revue Stated

The State cotton dress revue, heretofore held during Farm and Home Week at Auburn, will be staged this year in connection with the annual convention of the Alabama Farm Bureau in Montgomery later in October. Catherine Haynes, Auburn, reports that 9,945 girls entered the clothing revue for 1941—this being a substantial increase over previous years.

FUNDAMENTAL FACTS AND FANCIES

MAN AND HIS WORK

We are constrained to believe that man is the highest attainment of the work of the Creator. To analyze him and his attributes, speculate on his origin, define his work and determine his destiny is a task that calls for a lot of exercise for the brain.

A Composite Being

1—Physical

The physical nature of man is easily discovered and its value estimated by visual effort.

2—Mental

The mental nature of man is discovered by verbal intercourse and his attainments surmised thereby.

3—Moral

The mortal nature of man is exhibited in his dealings with and treatment of other men, and its development speculated on.

4—Spiritual

The spiritual nature of man is hidden from the view of others and its true worth known only to him and his God, the Great Spirit.

Origin

1—Early Ideas

Man, in his early stage of development, seemed to be a little hazy in his ideas of his origin, though it would appear that he thought himself as having been created by some Great Spirit, perhaps fully developed, in the beginning.

2—Religious Teachings

The teachings of religious authorities attribute man's origin to the power of their Gods who created him in completion and fully developed, in the beginning.

3—Darwin and Other Scientists Darwin and other scientists teach the theory of man's evolution from the lower animals, from a common origin.

4—Probable

It is probable that man, as he is today, has evolved from a lower order and is still in process of development, reaching up to higher attainments.

Work

1—Propagation of the Species

The Bible command, "Be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth," would seem to be one assignment of man's work here.

2—Improvement of Conditions

That he should endeavor to improve the material conditions of the earth, is one thing that should be given his attention; with an honest, persistent effort to make the world better for his having passed through.

3—Elevation of the Race

The race of mankind on the earth should show constant improvement in each succeeding generation, in the effort to elevate it and bring it up nearer to a standard of perfection.

4—Development of Self

Each individual should strive to improve and develop himself for personal pleasure, profit and satisfaction.

5—Recognition and Rewards

That he might receive recognition of his efforts and be rewarded for his achievements, should urge each individual to constantly strive to do his best under all circumstances.

Destiny

Man's destiny is in his own hands. Is it either the Heaven of rest and contentment or the Hell of discontent and remorse, in the Spirit Realm.

"It matters not how strait the gate, How charged with punishment the scroll;

I am the Master of my Fate, I am the Captain of my Soul."

THE SMOKY YEARS

By ALAN LE MAY

W.N.U. Release

INSTALLMENT 7 THE STORY SO FAR:

Dusty King and Lew Gordon had built up a string of ranches which stretched from Texas to Montana. King was killed by his powerful and unscrupulous competitor, Ben Thorpe. Bill Roper, King's adopted son, undertook to break Thorpe's power. His CHAPTER X

The winter dragged out slowly. Roper's plans, bold as they were, had been well laid. He had perceived from the first that success or failure depended upon whether or not he could maintain his war with Thorpe self sustaining. To draw away at the Tanner herds was one thing; to turn their captures into cash was altogether another.

Roper had hoped that he could initiate his own drives to the north, but he had found this out of the question. On the other hand, the trail drivers had found themselves so vulnerable that none of them wanted to buy cattle of questionable ownership.

The Thorpe-Tanner organization did not have this problem; they took what they wanted and drove what they wanted, by means of their own outfit. But Roper could not dispose of cattle for the trail ranchers known to be scrupulous and established men.

This was the strategic purpose behind Roper's rehabilitation of the seven outfits which Tanner had originally seized, and which Roper had now put back into the hands of their proper owners. These re-established herds had not only the sympathy and respect of everyone who knew anything about Texas cattle, through these men Roper now had a safe and sure outlet for the cattle he wanted to sell. Only the Mexican border gunfighters under such men as Nate Liggett, Tex Daniels, and Hat Crick Tommy supplied a much needed protection until they got on to their feet.

But this method, promising as it was, was slow. Of necessity the men whom Roper backed were cowboys without assets other than their acquired claim to their gang. Sometimes by mortgage loans, but principally by silent partnerships, Roper had now obtained interests in nearly a dozen outfits. They had been thriving outfits.

At Roper found his money draining away with unforeseen swiftness, without hope of any financial return until the trail should open in the fall. Only the Mexican border operations, which depended upon Lee Harnish, continued to show a trickle of income through the latter months. As spring approached, Roper found himself near the end of his string.

Early in February, Shoshone came south seeking Bill Roper, and found him at the Pot Hook Ranch. "Find out anything?" Roper asked.

Shoshone Wilce rubbed his badly ached chin with horny fingers. "I ain't know as you're going to like us so good, Bill."

"Let's have the bad news first—I'll take it up."

"God knows there's enough of it; we ain't any other kind to be had. What do you want to know about?"

"How's Thorpe making out up there?"

"I saw him in Dodge City; he was throwing money around with a bowl in each hand. You know what I think? I think he can go away and forget Tanner, and write everything he has in Texas right in the books, and never know the difference!"

Roper locked his hands behind his back and stared at the ceiling. Sometimes it seemed to him that trying to break Tanner was like trying to empty the Rio Grande with a hand dipper. The apparently unlimited resources of Thorpe in the middle country and in the north of reach of the south Texas war, made up a vast reservoir which never could draw on without limit.

"How is Tanner himself making out?"

"Bill, I've been all up and down north and east part of Texas; I can't see where we've accomplished a damned thing. You don't know what you're talking about!"

"You know what I think?" Wilce insisted. "I think there's more cat in this country than the world has any use for. I don't think you can bother any man any more, just fooling with his cattle."

"Not much farther, I guess."

"You going to have to quit?"

Roper shook his head. "I'll never quit now, Shoshone; I can't quit. While I've got one rider left with me, or no riders, I'll still be working on Cleve Tanner. But I think we're going to beat him, Wilce. After all, the border gangs—we can count on them."

Roper continued to count on his border gangs for two weeks more. Then, in the middle of February, he learned that Lee Harnish was through.

The first word of difficulty came when Dave Shannon pushed a little bunch of seven hundred head through the river at Mudcut, and found no vaqueros waiting on the other side. Shannon waited three days before he was forced to turn the cattle free and ride.

The complete news of what had happened never really came. What Roper learned came in bit by bit, by way of random riders who had talked with a vaquero here, another there.

Lee Harnish had been pressing south with a herd of twelve hundred head. He was two days into Mexico, and supposed that he was clear; he had never had much trouble, once he was well below the line.

Harnish took to the brush and the hills.

But now, one moonless night, a band reported as of at least sixty men struck from no place, scattering the herd, and blazing down on Harnish's riders almost before they could take to the saddle. There had been a sharp running fight as Harnish and his half-dozen boys took to the brush and the hills. Unsatisfied with seizure of the herd, the unknown band had spent three days trying to hunt down Harnish's riders.

Lee Harnish himself, wounded in the first skirmish, had had a hard time getting clear; it was not known whether or not all of his riders were elsewhere accounted for.

After an elapse of several weeks, an Indian-faced vaquero came hunting Bill Roper; he carried a written message from Lee Harnish:

"This thing is finished up. Don't let anybody tell you it was Cleve Tanner's men busted into us. What he's done, this Tanner has put some bunches of Mex renegades up to landing on us, they work with the Yaks, and his Indian scouts have spotted where we make our crossings. Seems like there's anyway a dozen bands of them haven't got anything else to do but lay watching those crossings, and wait us out."

"About half of them is carrying new American guns and plenty ammunition. They got our hide nailed to the fence all right and we are through."

It was a long time before Roper saw Lee Harnish again. He did not accept Harnish's statements off-hand, but he had been canny with Dave Shannon, and others of the border men in whom he believed, he was forced to accede that the border-running phase of the attack on Tanner would end.

As February drew to a close, the big herds were once more being thrown together for the trail. From the eleven rehabilitated outfits in which Roper was now silent part-upon Thorpe's herds, Cleave Tanner, manager of Thorpe's Texas holdings, seemed helpless to stop him. In spite of his daring plans, Roper's resources had dwindled almost to the point of time winter came. And Thorpe seemed not to feel the least, a little trickle of trail cattle began to move toward the gathering grounds on the Red. The income from these sales helped a little; but the proceeds were principally absorbed by debts incurred in behalf of the individual ranches. The improvement in his situation which Roper had hoped for did not come.

It was deep into March when Tex Long quit.

"Look," Tex Long said, "look." He did not talk easily; whatever he said was matter-of-fact, even now. "I got to pull out of this game."

Bill Roper looked at him, without expression. "All right. How much you figure I owe you?"

Tex smiled. "Nothing."

A very rare flush of anger came into Bill Roper's face. "Tex, what's the matter with you?"

Long made a quick, futile gesture with his hand. "We used to be able to jump down on them. We can't do that now. The Bert Johnson place is studded with ridin' men—any man can take a step. Every place you'll find out it's the same. There isn't going to be anything more we can do. We went good for a while. But they got organized, now. We're through."

Tex Long was only one of Bill Roper's picked gunfighters, but he was one of the best. As March drew on, Roper lost four more.

Into the Big Bend, into the valley of the Nueces, Cleave Tanner had flooded a power of gunfighters as Bill Roper would not have believed. He had supposed that he could outpace and outsmart Tanner's warrior outfits. But now his raiding forces met everywhere a stubborn resistance.

Roper had discounted the quit of Tex Long; but now other news was coming in. The Graham outfit—the first of all those that the Roper men had taken—was again in the hands of Cleave Tanner; and Nate Liggett, assigned to protect Graham, had headed for the tall without even a report. Hat Crick Tommy was three weeks missing. The Davis outfit, left under his protection, had gone the way of all loose outfits, and Tanner's cowboys rode the range.

Dry Camp Pierce was almost the last to come in—of those who came in at all.

Pierce rode into the Pot Hook Camp early in April. He was the same, small wiry man he always had been—his eyes watery, his jaws poorly shaven.

"Bill, I can't carry these camps no more. God knows we strung with you while we could. We've et beef, beef, beef without salt or flour, we've et bobcat meat. But Bill, there's no lead in our guns, and there's no patches in our hands, and it's time I got to let the boys go, to make out any way they can."

Bill Roper looked older than Dusty King had ever looked; his face was like granite, with hard lines cut into it by the weather.

"Okay," he said. "I understand how you feel, Dry Camp."

Dry Camp's anger was gone as quickly as it had come. "Bill," he said pleadingly, "it's only—it's only—"

"It's only that you've had a lot of men out working for us," Bill Roper said more reasonably.

"Near fifty men," Dry Camp said. "How many you got working now?"

Dry Camp hesitated. "Get a damned man," Bill Roper said bitterly. "And now you quit Dusty King."

"Look you here," Dry Camp said. "I've strung with you when I wouldn't have strung with any other man, let alone an upstart kid. I'll say this for you—you've made a game fight. But kid, take my word for it—they're too big, and they're too strong."

"You think so?" Bill Roper said. "I know so. I don't know what you had, man like Lee Shannon and Dave Shannon and Nate Liggett throw in with you, but they did—the damndest wild bunch Texas ever seen. Half the renegades of the Long Trail, and your part of King-Gordon, has gone into beating Cleave Tanner. And where are we now?"

"Well?"

"We aren't any place! Kid, I tell you we're beat, and we're long beat!"

April melted into May, and Roper had nothing to fight with any more. Those units of his wild bunch that had not quit had not been heard from at all; he knew already that the ones who had completely failed, Cleave Tanner prospered, seemingly; and all was well with Ben Thorpe.

Bill Roper waited at the Pot Hook now, trying to think of some way he had missed. King-Gordon denied him, and Lew Gordon expressly would advance nothing more against Dusty King's share of the partnership which had been broken by death.

MT. CARMEL

Bro. Atchison preached here last Sunday night and will preach again the first Sunday. A short conference was held Sunday morning for the purpose of accepting the resignation of our former pastor and a committee appointed to invite visiting preachers, during the time, until the church shall call a pastor for another year. Every member is urged to be present the Fifth Sunday in this month to decide who will be the nominee or nominees for the following Sunday. We hope everyone will be much in prayer about this as this is a very important step in any church.

Our B. Y. P. U. lesson promises to be of no little interest next Sunday night. The subject being, "Christ's Cure for Crime." And at once we think of war, the greatest of all crimes that is threatening our own homeland today. We invite you to study this lesson with us and we hope to have some good speakers present Sunday night.

Mrs. Mary Davenport is spending this week in Birmingham. Mr. Silas Oden spent Saturday night with his father near Maplesville.

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

When the dove flew to Mt. Ararat and returned to the Ark with an Olive branch he didn't have a thing on us. We drove out to Besse Hayes Monday afternoon and returned with an Olive branch and three ripe olives. . . . You didn't know that there was anything like that in Clanton, did you? . . . friend of Besse's gave it to her some ago and she planted and nursed it like a tall tree. . . . not too tall but enough to use a step ladder to pick the olives. . . . She hasn't signed any contracts yet or placed them on the market because she doesn't want to run Olive prices down but by gosh, she can now say Chilton County also grows olives.

As a rule, we imagine that life in hospital is pretty dull, one must see only trouble and misery. . . . still there's a humorous side to life even there. . . . ambulance pulled up to the side entrance at Central Alabama Hospital the other day, got a patient and drove away. Shortly after an ambulance came back picked up another patient and drove away. This was perhaps more than a colored patient who had been injured in an automobile accident a few days before could stand. . . . she rang and loud for the nurse. . . . when the nurse arrived she asked if the white lady had died too. She was informed that no one had died and everything was all right. . . . she remarked, "Lard, I thought what happened to the white lady was going to happen three times."

The worst thing about war, it seems, is those loud, striped silk shirts that are coming back. . . . we vaguely remember the last war and when a young fellow draped himself in one of those dollar silk shirts it was "too wet to pick up," he was on his way.

Give those boys who come home a drink and a break and stop asking them how they like the army and what they think about the added time that Uncle Sam has pinned on them. . . . I was talking to one of the boys Saturday and we didn't ask him before he told us how tired he was answering it. It was going to be our next question.

Old man and his wife were arguing down on the street the other afternoon. . . . it seems that the lady wanted to go to the driving and the gentleman was trying to explain that she should not drive because she made no drivers license. . . . finally the lady said, "I don't get you?"

The old thermometer is still hovering around the 100 mark during the daylight hours and dropping only a little during the night. . . . one of the hottest Augusts we've seen in a long time. . . . and hurting too. . . .

Guess you had noticed the long line of cars and business men around the streets of Clanton for the past few days. . . . it's because Wednesday was the last day on which the streets will close for their half holidays, except the Banks of course, they close every Wednesday afternoon anyway so they can stay open on Saturday afternoon when they are needed. . . . anyway, don't fail to come on back to town on Wednesday's eve, everything else will be open and doing business.

Was in town Tuesday and stopped by Radio Electric Company to see Lawrence Duffey. . . . Duffey wasn't in but Bill Hester and Dolphin Poppe were, and a fierce argument about business ethics was going on. . . . after about fifteen minutes of listening and about the same time of trying to get my two cents worth in we left it up and left. . . . you won't believe it but the next day we saw Bill and Dolphin down in front of the Dixie and do you know what they were arguing about? . . . well, we'll bet a last year's automobile tag it was something about business ethics.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY DINNER

As the years go by it gives the friends of a dear old lady, great pleasure to read of another birthday she has enjoyed.

Coming as a surprise to Clanton's own "Aunt" Laura White, planned and made possible by Mrs. Hugh Jones, was the dinner served at the home of Aunt Laura to she and a few of her closest friends, on last Thursday honoring her 87th birthday. Bearing gifts of love for "Aunt" Laura, these friends came to her home at 11:30, after giving her a great surprise.

After an afternoon spent in conversation and remembrances of days gone by, wishing her many more just such happy birthdays, they left for their homes.

Polio Epidemic Makes Postponement of Opening Necessary In County

Chilton County Schools will open their doors on September 8th it was ruled by the County Board at a meeting Tuesday. The Board has had a problem on its hands because of the polio outbreak this year and much thought was given to the date of opening before a decision was reached.

Although Chilton County has comparatively few cases of the dread Polio epidemic, the total number of cases over the State has gone well beyond the four hundred mark and surpassed the total number of cases reported during the epidemic of 1936. Latest reports, however, indicate that the spread of the disease has been checked.

Following is a list of the County Schools and the teachers assigned to each:

WILL PREACH AT SUNSHINE

Rev. S. B. Norton, well known evangelist from Rocky Mt. N. C., will begin a two-weeks revival at this place next Friday night, Aug. 29. The public is cordially invited. Services each night at 7:30 p. m.

This Week In National Defense

In a radio address to the Army on the reasons for extension of selective service, War Secretary Stimson said the Government realized the personal sacrifice of additional service but was also conscious of the danger to the U. S. He said "some of the most significant symptoms. . . which invariably forecast the coming of a new Axis attack. . . are occurring in South America. . . the most dangerous avenue of attack against us."

The War Department announced that unless the international situation becomes more serious it intends to release by December 10 approximately 150,000 National Guardsmen inducted last fall, 20,000 selectees inducted last November and December, and 10,000 Reserve officers. The releases will be made upon application in accordance with the following priorities: dependency and hardship, age of more than 28 on July 1, 1941, and marriage for those who have served 12 months. Men completing enlistments will also be released on request.

mer campaign; (2) materials which will be available for the spring campaign next year. Russia will not get lend-lease aid, the President said, because the Soviets have the necessary cash for materials. The Public Health Service announced a 16-member U. S. medical commission will go to China to direct health measures for 250,000 Chinese building the 1,700 mile railroad along the Burma road.

PRODUCTION

President Roosevelt told his press conference that on the average defense production is up to estimates and in some cases actually exceeds estimates. He said, however, he still is not satisfied with armament production. He said several hundred tanks manufactured this year have gone to the British; the quota at 61 anti-aircraft guns monthly is being more than met; 100 37-mm. anti-tank guns will be delivered in August, 200 in September and 320 in October; 340 81-mm mortars will be made in August.

OPM Director Knudsen told a press conference the rate of defense progress is sufficient to provide adequate equipment for the Army within six or seven months. He predicted again the U. S. can out-produce any other nation but said that the nation is still not showing the correct spirit. Production rather than shipping, he said, is the greatest bottleneck in U. S. aid to Britain.

During 1941 Chilton County Should Double Its Production of Beef and Dairy Cattle, Hogs, Poultry, Mules, Sheep and Goats. Strawberry, Peach and Potato Production Should Be Increased One-third. At Least A Dozen Small Industries Should Be Located In Chilton County. It Can and Should Be Done.

Mark Reaches 70
(Atticus Mullin in Montgomery Adv)
Our good friend Mark Tucker, the big wig of The Chilton County News and veteran editor and former State official, seems all puffed up because he has reached the age of 70 years. And editors over the State have been congratulating Mark upon reaching such a ripe age.

Now we know Mark Tucker might well and have known him for 'nigh onto 40 years and he may be fibbing to get a little praise. Mark don't look like he is more than 55 to 60 and hardly that. Mark, maybe, senses that these old age pensions are on the way and he wants to get on the bandwagon. Some may have to prove they are 65 to get it but a man who claims to be 70 or over would not have to produce proof. He wouldn't be questioned.

But if Mark is 70, and he says he is, we wish for him another 70 years of just as good service to his own and to his State. Alabama is better for Mark Tucker living and working in it. Long may he do both.

Money In Circulation
Money in circulation in the U. S. during May averaged $70.50 per capita, a gain of $2.11 over April, and an increase of $12.11 over May a year ago.—Birmingham News

I got to feel the 4-bits once or twice during the month, but never did find out who was carrying around my seventy dollars.

"V" MEMORIES
"V" also stands for the price of a single copy of The Chilton County News. Don't forget that the next time you want one," says Mark Tucker, showing his seventy years. The fine old gentleman remembers when a nickel had a V on it.—Greenville Advocate

Editors Oppose War
Two-thirds of the editors of daily newspapers in this country oppose immediate active military and naval participation in the war, according to a recent poll. Our guess is that the proportion would be greater among editors of country weeklies. The majority of the people oppose war; so also with the papers. The country simply isn't spoiling to get into the fight.—DeKalb Times

"Old Miss" For Him
A "Bibb Graves for Governor" tag was prominently displayed on the front of an automobile parked on Commerce street the other day. On the back end of the same car was a Mississippi license plate. We had an idea he was running in Alabama.—Greenville Advocate

They are not citizens but subjects who say, "We must not criticize what our leader does, for he knows what is best."—Robert Quillen

By that standard, we've a lot of subjects in this so-called democracy.—The DeKalb Times

They Will
We haven't noticed where any clubs have endorsed Graves the past few days. Oh, well, we suppose that most of them already have, anyway. If they haven't will they, so that is not news anymore, that is a reality now. Graves is our Next Governor—to be sure.—Sumter County Journal

Or To Anybody Else, Without Getting Pay For It?
Is there any reason why the Alabama weeklies should all mail copies of "Rural Alabama" to each other?—Alexander City Outlook

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

Gold was discovered in the hills, by an old bachelor out west and after he had gathered it up in large quantities, he had it exchanged for gold coins. He then rented him a box at one of the banks and piled his wealth into that box. Every day the old man would go down to the bank, secure his key and go back to his box. He would then take his box of gold to a private room, empty it on a table and sit there and count it. For an hour he would sit there and handle his gold and console himself over his wealth. Then he would place it fondly back into the box and lock it securely. The next day he would do the same thing. That man worshipped his gold. To him it was all in all. In the east and everywhere, there are men and women who are worshipping other things, rather than God as that man worshipped his gold.

When the Israelites were safe on the eastern shore of the Red Sea there was a shout in the camp. They had something to shout about. They were delivered from Pharaoh and his host. Dr. Morrison says that, "Every man has a shout in him and if you will just touch the right button, he will go off with a whoop." Some are geared up to shout at a ball game, some shout at a horse race, some in battle and some on the water front. Just touch that shouting button and off he goes. There was a shout on the Camp ground and people almost made a stampede to see what was in the air. If a man can shout when he sees a ball going over the fence, or when he sees a filly in the lead, certainly it is permissible to shout when a soul has been saved.

Simon Peter, preacher, a unique old Methodist richardson, was holding a meeting and a certain man got very happy. He shouted so loud and long that the meeting was being disturbed. The old preacher pointed his finger at the shouter and said, "Say there, Hush a minute. I want to know if you have paid your church dues this year?" The man acknowledged that he had not, and then Simon Peter said, "Then sit down my brother, you have nothing to shout about." It matters not who may be shouting, I am always concerned about the background of the shout. When a good life backs up a shout it has the ring of heaven in it. But, when there are unpaid debts, when there are shady deals, when there are unkind words and other unchristian conduct the shout is sounding brass and tinkling cymbals.

The other day I met a friend of mine of former years and my heart bled as I listened to his story. When I knew him he was prosperous and happy. With his years came adversity and this man was forced into bankruptcy. I was told by this man that he had lost his business, that his home had been sold, his musical instruments were all taken and even the cradle in which his babe was sleeping sold under the hammer. He had been stripped of everything that he had and that sounded heart-rending. That was bad, but it was nothing when compared with what a man loses when he goes bankrupt within. All courage gone; all hope gone; all faith gone; No sweetness, no love; no trust; despondency within. Of all the bankruptcies in the world that of a man's soul is the most pitiful. Beware of going bankrupt in your inner life.

Much interest gathered about an announced Chess game that was going to be played on Saturday afternoon at a country store. One man had wagered his reputation on a game with a certain champion player. This man had a friends who was an expert at the game and by permission from his opponent this man was allowed to stand behind him and direct him in the game. The champion was not afraid of any dozen men. He said that he could beat them all. The game was on and behind one man stood his friend. Many a time he would stop the move and point out another. The champion was beaten in every game. The friend with his keen eye and skill helped in every testing play. We are playing the game of life with forces of this world. The devil claims that he can beat any man and win at all times, and believe me, he can do it, unless we secure the Christ to stand behind us and tell us how and when to play. Any man who will let Christ direct all of his moves can win over the world, the flesh and the devil.

will not have to resort to broomsticks instead of weapons for training because "America is at last pushing toward peak production... oiling up will soon be over. Guns, tanks and planes are coming in daily increasing numbers." He cited production increases in the past six months; tanks 800 per cent; other vehicles, 600 per cent; machine guns, 225 per cent; anti-aircraft guns, 400 per cent; smokeless powder, 400 per cent.

CIVILIAN SUPPLY
OPM and the Office of Price Administration ordered auto production for the 1942 model year cut to 817,000 cars during the four months beginning August 1, compared with 1,500,000 during the four months ended July 31. General Motors, Chrysler and Ford were asked to make a 27.6 per cent cut from last year's levels; Studebaker, Hudson, Nash, Packard, Willys and Crosley 20.2.

OPM Associate Director Hillman said unemployment in the industry would be headed off by transfer of workers to defense plants and other defense industries and the conversion of auto production machinery to defense work along the same lines as similar moves in the silk industry.

DEFENSE CONTRACTING
The OPM announced changes in Army and Navy purchasing policies to combat unemployment in plants and communities threatened with shortages of materials because of priority action and to utilize more of the nation's productive capacities through subcontracting. The Government can negotiate contracts at prices up to 15 per cent current quotations, deal with joint groups of small contractors, eliminate bids and performance hands when necessary, facilitate products at the plant to facilitate prompt payment and call for bids to be broken down into optional units to permit smaller firms to bid.

AGRICULTURE
Price Administrator Henderson set ceiling prices of burlap, used in the packaging of feed fertilizer and agricultural products at approximately 20 percent below recent New York quotations.

OPM announced 35 to 40 new egg-drying plants will be built by private interests at a cost of from 50,000 to $100,000 each in Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Kansas, Minnesota, New York, Tennessee, Wisconsin, and Ohio, increasing capacity from 12,000,000 more than 100,000,000 pounds annually to provide dried eggs to Great Britain. Similar projects are under consideration to expand milk drying, cheese and other concentrated food production for American and British requirements.

CIVILIAN DEFENSE
Civilian Defense Director LaGuardia arranged for the first Statewide "blackout" to be held the night of September 12 in New Mexico. Twelve towns will be "bombed," fires will be started in vacant lots and other emergencies will be rehearsed.

Mr. LaGuardia also announced a training program for 100,000 volunteer nurses' aides with the collaboration of the Red Cross and local hospitals. The Public Health Service called for 50,000 young women to begin professional nursing training this fall to meet a shortage. At present, the Service said, there are 10,000 vacant positions for registered nurses in the nation's hospitals.

CREDIT CONTROL
The Federal Reserve Board issued tentative regulations which it said will probably be placed in effect in September to increase the required size of down payments on installment buying (they will be from 15 to 33 percent) and to shorten to 18 months the time for payments on autos, airplanes, power boats, motorcycles, refrigerators, washing machines, stove, air-conditioners, radio sets and similar household appliances.

OIL
Deputy Petroleum Coordinator Davies reported only a 10-day supply of gasoline reserves on the Atlantic seaboard and Price Administrator Henderson ordered a 10 per cent cut in deliveries to filling stations in the coast States. Filling station operators were told to reduce gas sales to the customers "equitably" but to allow necessary fuel to commercial, public and health vehicles.

SHIPS
Maritime Commission Chairman Land, speaking in California, said the immediate goal in ship production is more than 1200 merchant ships by the end of 1943 and the U. S. would be producing an average of two ships a day until then.

The Navy launched the sixth submarine since January 1 and announced that during the first half of August two minesweepers, two torpedo boats and two district craft were launched and 18 keels laid.

Are YOU One of Those Happy Young Women Who Is to Be A BRIDE?

If you are, congratulations! But don't forget that you're marrying a man. All men are cranky about some things. Most men are extra cranky about their food. Now perhaps you didn't feed the gentleman to find your way into his heart, but feeding him—and feeding him well—will be a good way to stay there! So maybe you're going to want to cook the way that's easiest on YOU (so you'll have time to keep yourself neat and trim and attractive to him) and the way that makes brides' cooking failures less likely. That way is the ELECTRIC WAY!

You Don't Have To Be A "Master-Mind" To Cook Electrically

In fact, it's much simpler than many other ways of cooking. There's no guess-work. All you need do is follow the recipes and turn a switch, and there you are... meals that'll win his praises (even on a limited budget!).

"The first gift of my husband was an Electric Range (and I might say 'life saver'). For a girl who had cooked very little, it all seemed very simple to get out my cook book, furnished with the stove, and cook things I had never tried before. I consider my range my best friend in the way of household conveniences."
—Mrs. R. M. H., Geneva, Ala.

Ladies Hose

Milady of America is far more interested in the "run" in her hose than she is in Hitler's, run for Moscow.—Chilton County News

Without being impertinent might we ask what you know about ladies hose?—Collinsville News

Lady—what we know about ladies' hose would fill a book; we have been washing the ups and down of hose since somewhere near enough to hold a thread; thread, while mother would fit into a ball—later to be used in knitting stockings (now called hose). For Summer wear the thread was of fine spun cotton; for Winter wear, wool was used, frequently more than one color was used—occasionally several colors in one pair of hose.

Lady—that was a long time ago, and lots of water has passed over the dam, and many hose have been pulled on and off—but the women of America possess the same metal now that they possessed then, and if the necessity arises they can be depended upon to go back to knitting their own stockings and doing many of the other things that was daily routine for their grandmothers and great-grand mothers. When that spirit within our women is aroused, we should worry about the invasion of this country by a passel of foreign "tripe."

I have one wife, five daughters and nine grand daughters, and that ought to qualify me as an expert, or something, on the subject of hose.

How many editors do you know who ever "reel" a "hank" of thread, or knew when there was enough in the "hank" to stop the reel and take it off?

Public Urged Use More Cotton Goods

Auburn, Ala.—Appealing to consumers to help increase the consumption of 100 per cent American cotton products, L. J. Cappelman, regional director of the Surplus Marketing Administration, U. S. Department of Agriculture, urges all Americans to purchase more cotton products for home and personal use.

A cooperative educational campaign is now under way sponsored by the National Cotton Council, and Local Cotton Industry Committees in cooperation with the Surplus Marketing Administration and the State Extension Service designed to promote a greater home market for 100 per cent American cotton products, he said.

BLACK-DRAUGHT

PATES CHAPEL

Health in our community is just at present with everybody busy at work.

But it is a fact that the last two weeks have tried to be a little contagious for car wrecks. Rev. Nix' car was hit by a car on the brick yard hill. No one was hurt but the front fender was knocked off.

Mr. Frank Price was driving Mr. J. D. Price's truck and he had a wreck near Mrs. Margaret Watleys. It seemed that he was driving pretty fast and could not make the curve and hit an oak stump which caused the truck to turn up-side down and nearly demolished it, but it did not hurt him.

We are sorry to hear of the wreck of Mr. Caton's daughter and son-in-law, in which she got her arm broken twice and other minor cuts but is doing nicely. Her husband is not doing so well at last report.

The week lock fell again in our community last Saturday in which Mr. Orner Porter and Miss Lois Robinson were married. We hope for them a long and happy life together.

Misses Leona and Leatrice Clecker have returned home after a weeks visit and reported a fine time.

Mrs. Adelia Franklin is spending a week in Birmingham with relatives and friends.

Miss Merle Gibson spent the week end in Thorby with Mrs. Lillie Maddox.

Everybody come to Sunday School next Sunday morning at 10:30 and B. Y. P. U. Sunday night at 6:30.

Alabama Asks North-west Rush Legumes

Auburn, Ala.—Alabama's USDA Defense Board would not be encouraged to plant winter legumes seed unless plans were worked out for the seed to reach north Alabama by September 10 and south Alabama by September 25.

At the same time the board endorsed an all-out seed production program launched three years ago by the Alabama Extension Service so that Alabama farmers would not have to depend entirely on planting seed from Oregon and Washington during future years. Under leadership of county agents Alabama farmers planted over 22,000,000 pounds of winter legume seed last year.

At the conclusion of the board meeting, here this week, A. W. Jones, chairman, wired officials of the United States Department of Agriculture as follows:

"At meeting today called by Secretary Wickard Alabama USDA Defense Board requested that Western winter legumes seed growers be advised that winter legumes seed to be shipped into this state must arrive in North Alabama counties not later than September 25 so as to enable effective planting. Many years of official experiments and experience of farmers emphasizes early planting dependent on deliveries by above dates if success is to be achieved. In the event of failure to deliver vetch and peas as indicated above, Board recommends that soil building practice credit be given for seeding oats and application of phosphate to oat seedlings for grazing, grain, and erosion control. Fall seeded grains with application of phosphate will produce feed supply in lieu of shorter corn crop due to lack of legumes and nitrate shortage."

Mobile is to have the World's largest municipal airport—800 acres. It will cost $950,000. It will have 4,000 feet runways. It is to be completed by the end of 1941.

CORRECT LABELLING ON SYRUP NECESSARY

Auburn, Ala.—Now is the time for farmers to be planning for correct labels to be placed on cans of syrup offered for sale this fall. All scrogum and sugar cane syrups must be labelled, says M. D. Harman, assistant extension agricultural engineer, to protect producers as well as consumers. A proper label for syrup shows the kind of syrup (sugar cane or scrogum), net volume expressed in terms of the largest unit, and the name and address of the manufacturer.

Statements, designs, and devices which tend to deceive or mislead are condemned by the state Pure Food laws. Simple, correctly-stated labels are advised by Harman. The cost of these are negligible and special paste which insures keeping the label in place on the can is suggested.

EXTENSION WORKERS HELP WITH RURAL HOUSING WORK

Employees of the Alabama Extension Service are advised by P. O. Davis, director, to cooperate with probate judges and other local county officials in setting up machinery for building houses in rural areas under the U. S. Housing Authority Act.

"The initial step is for a minimum of 25 citizens of a county to sign a petition asking for a hearing to determine whether or not a county housing authority should be created and operated in a county," says Director Davis in a letter to all extension workers.

"Since this act affects rural people, our advice is that extension workers cooperate, where requested, in getting a petition signed. All signers need not be farmers. Any citizen is eligible. "In cooperating please make it clear that you are not sponsoring the act but merely cooperating for a hearing at which those present will make a decision for themselves."

FUNDAMENTAL FACTS AND FANCIES

Compiled and Arranged by JOHN W. MAHAN

SCIENCE AND THE TORCH BEARER

Without the facts that men of science have learned by observation, comparison and study, and the truths they have discovered and proven, mankind would still be wandering around in the darkness of superstition and ignorance. The torch they hold aloft, lighted by their discoveries down through the ages, sheds its light on the pathway of marching man as he gradually climbs up the mountain-side of progress.

Facts Overthrow Ignorance

Ignorance and fear have held mankind in subjection throughout the ages, and it is only when the real facts are known that he becomes free and able to assert himself, and at the same time overthrow the ones that have held him bound in these chains. This applies to both material and spiritual conditions, and the results of cooperation of free and enlightened men are shown in the real progress made in any undertaking.

Truth Banishes Superstition.

The Boogie Man, with his Tabus, rides atop the burden of superstition on the shoulders of mankind and weights him down. The white light of truth loosens the bonds that holds the burden and it rolls off, greatly to the relief and satisfaction of those who have been carrying them. Superstition slinks away, snarling and cursing, into the darkness of oblivion, while man lifts his head and steps up into the bright light of day. Going guided and guarded by Truth, founded on Facts that have come to him through information, study and reason.

Discoveries 1st fields of Electricity and Radio

Electricity is perhaps man's greatest servant, and Thomas Alva Edison his greatest benefactor. Electricity stands ready to respond instantly, to his beck and call, while Edison, by his perfection of the electric light, has banished darkness and made the day twenty-four hours long. Other workers in the field of electricity have added to the discoveries and ideas of Edison and we are gradually being freed from the burdens that have held us down.

The Radio and its perfectors, have opened up the wonders and resources of the electrical belt that surrounds the earth, where, we are constrained to believe, lies the Spirit Realm, to which our spirits go, when we have finished our labors in the flesh and we take off for the "Heavenly Home."

MY BELIEFS

1. I believe there is a Creative Spirit, whom we call God, who created the Universe, in which the earth, on which we live, is included. The earth is man's home and sphere of action.

2. I believe there is a Spirit Realm, surrounding the earth, which is the abiding place of the spirit of man, after death.

3. I believe there is a spiritual essence in man, that survives the body and lives on, in the Spirit Realm, eternally.

4. I believe we have a Protective Spirit to guide and protect us here, if we will attune ourselves to it, and follow its suggestions.

5. I believe the spirits of our departed ancestors abide near us in the Spirit Realm, and that we shall join them there, with full recognition, after death.

6. I believe there is a place of rest and contentment, in the Spirit Realm, for those who have been faithful and considerate of others here, and one of unrest and retribution for those who have been unfaithful, selfish, unthoughtful and inconsiderate of others here.

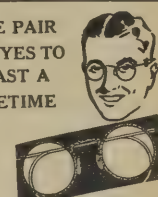

7. I believe in the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth and consider them the most reasonable, comprehensive and logical of all man's teachings. The most practical of his teachings is known as the Golden Rule.

8. I believe in the Fatherhood of God and the Universal Brotherhood of Man, based on the idea of the Golden Rule, which is—"As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them."

9. I believe the Kingdom of God, as taught by Jesus, is within the hearts of men, here on this earth.

10. I believe the whole work of man is accomplished here, in this life, and his spirit immediately enters the Spirit Realm, at death. To my mind, there is no intermediate state, nor is there any resurrection of the physical body.

Attend District P-T. A. Meeting

Thursday of last week Miss Elsie Schurter, Mrs. T. Erskine Campbell and Miss Lillian McKee attended the district Parent Teachers Association in Montgomery. It was reported that Chilton County had last school year 371 members of the State and National Congress of Parents and Teachers. They were as follows: Chilton county high school 44, Isabella 30, Jemison 29, Maplesville 59, Verbena 45, Collins Chapel 19, Enterprise 14, Stanton 10, and Clanton Elementary 121. The following counties were represented: Montgomery, Chilton, Coosa, Autauga, Clay Elmore, Butler, and Lowndes. The association voted to send a telegram to the governor asking him to release for education the 1-1-2 million dollars surplus in the Educational Trust Fund. It seems that in 1927 this fund was established to protect the tax monies which were earmarked for schools. Later a bill was passed by the Legislature providing that if there should ever be a surplus in the Trust fund that it should be turned over to the Governor to be used to lower ad valorem property taxes. For the first time since the Trust fund was established a surplus exists. So far the governor has devised no machinery by which this money may be returned to the people.

The money was collected for schools from sales tax, tobacco tax, and other taxes from the common people. It would not be returned to these people because their property is already exempt $2,000 by the Homestead Exemption Law. It seems a wise move to ask the governor to devise some way of making this sum of money available for use for the schools this year.

CROP REPORT

This was another week of near normal temperature, with no excessively hot weather in any part of Alabama. Sunshine was abundant and less rain fell than during any week since early in June. Some stations in the southern division had more than an inch of rain, Eufaula reporting the greatest amount, 1.90 inches. Elsewhere precipitation was scattered and light, nearly half the stations receiving none and none of the others as much as a half inch.

In southern and central areas cotton picking has become general and ginning is underway. Continued boll weevil damage in these areas has taken further toll of young bolls and practically no new fruit was made during the past two weeks or can be expected later. In northern sections there is less uniformity. Progress was good in some communities and in others boll weevil damage has been severe especially in late-planted fields.

Haying is taking place over all parts of the state and conditions have been satisfactory for saving hays. In many communities some delay had been experienced with such early hays as Johnson grass. In many instances the July and early August rains had made it impossible to get into the fields, and though yields may not have been much lowered, the quality will be inferior due to the heavy coarse grass stalks. Cowpea and soybean hays are not yet ready for harvest generally, though a few fields have been cut. Pastures continue to afford excellent grazing. Cattle are making good gains and milk production is satisfactory. Ample feeds from last crop are available and prospective feed supplies from the growing crops appear adequate.

Dixon Asks Return To Standard Time If It Is Feasible

MONTGOMERY. — Gov. Dixon wants Alabama returned to standard time in October if the move can be made without harming national defense.

He declared Tuesday he hoped return would be recommended about Oct. 1 by federal authorities, emphasized he would issue no legislation for the change until the national government decides it will endanger the country's defense.

Miss Mary Lane Cobb, who been taking a post graduate course in Birmingham, has not finished the course and will begin next semester. She will be glad for her friends to call to see her.

CLANTON PILOT CLUB ACTIVE

At a recent business meeting of the Clanton Pilot Club a letter from Mrs. Etha G. Hall, president of Pilot International was read, requesting all local clubs the importance and necessity of each one's part in the defense program.

Following is an article released from International headquarters.

In addition to the aid already being given by individual clubs to National Defense, a very definite contribution which each of us can make is to "Buy a Share in America," said Mrs. Hall. "Every dollar invested in United States Defense Savings Bonds adds to the safety and security of America. It is unnecessary, I take it, to attempt to explain to business and professional women the value of sound investment. In this connection, I merely point out that the full faith and credit of the United States Government is pledged for payment of both principal and interest on these Savings Bonds, and I urge each Pilot to invest a portion of her personal funds to help preserve our American Way of Life."

Club Enjoys Picnic
Wednesday, beginning at 5:30 the Pilot Club members enjoyed a picnic supper on the lawn of Mrs. Mary Will

Best Fertilizers For Use Under Fall Crops

Auburn, Ala.—Experiments by the Alabama Experiment Station show that it is profitable for farmers to properly fertilize their small grains and winter legumes.

Records reveal that when oats are grown after cotton or some other crop well fertilized with phosphate and potash it does not pay to apply either of these materials for the oats. If oats do not follow such a crop they should be fertilized with 300 to 400 pounds of superphosphate and 50 pounds of muriate of potash per acre at planting time and top dressed in the spring with 200 to 300 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre.

It is recommended that barley be fertilized with 200 to 400 pounds of superphosphate or 300 to 400 pounds of basic slag and 50 pounds of muriate of potash at planting and top dressed March 1 with nitrogen.

Although no experiments have been conducted at the Experiment Station to study the fertilizer needs of wheat and rye, they are closely related to oats and, therefore, would probably give about the same response to the same types of fertilizers.

In planting winter legumes apply 300 to 400 pounds of superphosphate or 400 to 600 pounds of basic slag per acre. If the soil shows signs of being sour, lime should be applied at the rate of 400 pounds per acre as winter legumes respond well to lime.

THE STORY SO FAR:
His first step was to start a cattle war in Texas. He made this decision against the opposition of Lew Gordon and the fearful pleading of his sweetheart, Jody Gordon. The raids upon Roper's herds were successful at first, but resistance was soon put you'll get him, all right," he added hastily.

Half a block ahead another man stepped into the street, and walked toward Bill. Before his face could be seen in the black shadow under his hat, Bill Roper knew by the set of the broad shoulders, by the rolling swing of his stride, that it was Cleve.

The moments during which the two men walked toward each other drew out interminably. Their eyes were upon each other's faces now; Bill could see that Cleve Tanner looked happy, almost gay, as if this was the first good thing that had happened to him for a long time.

At twelve paces Cleve Tanner drew; to observe the men seemed so close together that it was impossible that either of them should live. Tanner's gun spoke five times, fast, faster than most men could slip the hammer. Nobody knew where the first four shots went, but the fifth shot was easy to place, for up which caused Roper's men to leave him, one by one. Cleve Tanner, manager of Thorpe's Texas holdings, appeared not to feel the losses inflicted upon him. Roper's resources were dwindling low, and he seemed doomed to failure.

He was surprised to hear her say that. He had no way of knowing how much she had heard, or what she had heard, about his shoot-out with Cleve Tanner.

"A notch? I hadn't thought anything about it."

All her bitter contempt of the lone-riding men of violence came into her voice. "Isn't that what the gunmen and the cow thieves always do?"

He was motionless a long time. Then he drew the skinning knife that always swung at the back of his belt in a worn sheath. Its blade was lean and hollowed, worn almost out of existence by a thousand skinnings. He stood looking at the knife, he tossed it in the air, and caught it by the handle again.

"I wouldn't go cutting marks on the handle of a gun," he said at last. His voice was thick. "Nobody can tell anybody does to the handle of a gun."

Roper stepped forward, and with the keen blade cut a notch clean and deep in the left arm of Dusty's corral.

When he looked at Jody she was staring at him strangely, almost as if she were afraid:

All through the afternoon Jody Gordon had ridden the barren trails above Ogallala, on a pony that for ever tried to turn home. Thaw was on the prairie again, and the South Platte was brimming with melted snow in the air was something of the damp, clean smell which had marked another spring, in this same place. But it was now more than six months since Jody had seen Bill Roper, and she found it no help that she was forever hearing his name.

It was with reluctance that she at last rode up the rise upon which it stood, unlighted, in the dusk. She disassembled her own pony, bootied it into the muddy corral, and threw the forty pound kak onto the saddle-pole with the easy, one-handed swing of the western rider. As she turned toward the house she was trying not to cry.

Then, as she walked through the stable, a figure rose up from the shadows behind the door and barred her way.

Jody Gordon's breath caught in her throat. She said, evenly, "Looking for someone, Bud?"

The spare-framed visitor took off his hat and held it uneasily in his two hands. "Well, I tell you, Miss Gordon—could I speak to you for just a minute? I'll tell you the fact of the matter. I'm a Bill Roper man."

Jody Gordon's heart jumped like a struck pony "Billy sent you to me?"

"I haven't seen Bill Roper. But I've seen Ben Thorpe. Miss Gordon, tell me one thing: Is your father backing Bill Roper? I mean, is he backing this plowing into Ben Thorpe?"

"My father," Jody Gordon said, "has quit Bill Roper in every way he possibly could."

"What's what I thought," Shoshone Wilce said. "Only trouble is, people that don't know the difference, they don't none of them believe that any more."

Jody Gordon interrupted him shortly. "What's happened?"

"Miss Gordon, your father is in a terrible bad fix. I'm afraid—I'm afraid he's going to die before this thing is through."

"What do you mean?"

"Most people think Lew Gordon is backing Bill Roper—maybe you know that? Well, now there's a feller rode to Ben Thorpe from Miles City—a feller that was a foreman with Thorpe's Montana outfits under Walk Lasham. Maybe this feller had some kind of fight with Lasham—I don't know nothing about that. But this feller swears to Thorpe that Lasham is letting the Montana herds drain away to the Indians, and to the construction camps, and Ben Thorpe never seeing a penny of the money from beef or hide."

"Is Bill Roper gutting the Thorpe outfits in Montana?"

"Don't know, myself. They say he's swarming all over Montana, with a bunch of kid renegades behind him, riding like crazy men, and raiding night after night. Some say nobody knows how hard Lasham is hurt, Lasham least of any; and some say Lasham has sold out to Bill Roper, or your father—or both."

"What does Thorpe himself think?"

"Thorpe thinks your father has bought Walk Lasham. Just the same as he thought your father bought Cleve Tanner in Texas, until Bill Roper gunned Cleve down. And Thorpe is fit to be tied. A man like him—he's terrible dangerous always, Miss Gordon; but now he's ten times more dangerous than he ever was in his life."

"You mean you think Ben Thorpe will—will—"

"Miss Gordon, I know. Ben Thorpe is going to kill Lew Gordon, just as sure as—" it blew a hole in the street as Tanner's gun stubbed into the dust.

Bill Roper holstered his own smoking forty-four.

Bill Roper holstered his own smoking forty-four. He had fired twice.

Dry Camp Pierce was at his elbow again. "Here's the horses. It's time to ride. By God, I knew you could take him, kid."

Roper was feeling deathly sick.

CHAPTER XII

It was well into the summer as Bill Roper once more rode south out of Ogallala toward the pile of stones that marked the grave of Dusty King. Jody Gordon rode with him.

In the few days he had stopped over in Ogallala he had hardly seen her at all. At first she had refused to ride with him today; but at the last moment, as if on an impulse, she had changed her mind.

Roper, studying her sidelong, thought that Jody seemed to have aged several years in one. Impossible to find any trace of the repressible, up-welling laughter that had been so characteristic of her a year before. Her eyes were unlighted, and a little tired-looking; her mouth was expressionless except for a faint droop at the corners, which suggested—perhaps resignation, perhaps a hidden bitterness.

She didn't have much to say; but finally she asked him, "What did my father decide?"

"He says now that I'll never have another penny out of Dusty King's share until—until he's able to dictate to me what I'm going to do with it; or, that's what it amounts to."

"Did you quarrel with my father?"

"No. He said some kind of bitter things, but I didn't say anything. I asked for certain things—five camps in Montana, mainly. Of course, that was a waste of breath."

"But you'll go on, and throw yourself against Walk Lasham in Montana?"

"Yes; I have to go on."

They were silent after that; and presently they sat, almost stirrup to stirrup, but somehow infinitely far apart, looking down at the stacked boulders from which rose the wooden cross upon which Bill Roper had made, nearly a year and a half ago.

For a little while he stood looking at the cross which he had made of railroad ties. He said, half aloud—"One down, Dusty."

"I suppose," Jody said, "you'll be cutting a notch on the handle of your gun, now."

He gave the butt of his gun a hitch to make sure it was loose in the leather; then he spun the whiskey away from him untasted, and walked out.

Dry Camp Pierce looked at the ball glass, and exchanged a worried glance with the bartender. Then he followed Bill.

Dry Camp kept blinking his eyes in the bright light, as if they were dry; and there were white patches at the corners of his mouth.

"Don't give him too much of a steak, kid. He's awful bad. But

FOLKS 'N THINGS

ABOUT TOWN

By Ben

and 'round as anything;
gigging, a smile that clicks, looking good in the grocery line you haven't guessed the name? It's "Chick".

We haven't a thing to tell you about this week... no scandal or nothing...
M Chambers did buy the first Drive-in license of the new series... and there us... if you ain't you better half the town journeyed to the hill to watch the "wild waves", or to see the wild waves could look at them... don't know which. Earl Parson and Otto Jones started a new business and are going under the name of Parrish and Jones Wood Co...
W. H. Klinkner have moved back over city and of course all are glad they are living in the Claude Reynolds home... The Mayor had a meeting of boys out Tuesday cutting grass and cleaning up the streets and they... sure did need it and makes things look a lot better and cleaner.

We told you last week or some week about this Willie Mims going to the Gulf and putting on a show for the folks at Panama City... well let tell you about Willie bringing home that jar of salt sea water... that when he left the coast... but upon driving home it turned out that a small animal begun forming in the jar and has grown into a large sea serpent... that is if you look at it through magnifying glass or take a large dish of that Gulf Water before you look... Willie says it has horns and long bill for a nose and we just took the word for it as we didn't want to believe him and get him started... but healing, he has got something, we don't know what it is but he's got something.

Well folks we just have to tell you a little story about an incident out on the Maplesville highway Tuesday morning... it started at about nine o'clock and the last we heard of it was when VanDerVeer called us up at 1:30 p.m. and gave us the good news that the thing was over and we were glad we knew that poor old Jimmie Bell and Bill Hester and scores and scores of others could go home and go to bed... and that always makes us glad... It all started when a negro driving East ran into the back of some white boys driving East... sounds like it doesn't it... nevertheless, it happened and the boys told the negro to stay around until the law could get out there... that scared the negro who soon after started shooting... ever who said Wilbur Prince was too fat to run didn't know what they were talking about... Jimmie went East, John went north, Bill went south and about twenty more went in every direction known to man but up... that tension was so full of men that the boll weevils started moving out... thought they had been blitzkrieged... the negro got into the car with the boys who owned it and put his gun on him and told him to start driving... the boy did, but the negro got out just before he got to where Victor Heard lives and ran into the cotton... that is where the blood-hounds from Montgomery found him about 1:00 o'clock this morning... along about midnight some of the fellows waiting on the hounds saw a man walking up the road toward them and one of them bellowed "here he comes again"... the panic was on again... the boll weevils moved out again... Bill Hester was looking under the hood of the wrecked car and he claims he didn't hear the warning... we thing he fainted... anyway when he did look up and found no one there but himself, just to show how fast he left there, he passed the lead man before they reached the pecan grove. All in all it was a wonderful night... the law got their man and the citizens got their excitement.

11,000 Alabama Miners On Strike In B'ham Area

Lag In Negotiations For New Contract Blamed For Work Stoppage

One third of the soft coal mines in the Birmingham district were closed Wednesday as approximately 11,000 miners quit work in an "unauthorized" strike said to have been caused by delayed negotiations for a permanent new contract.

"This is not an authorized strike," said William Mitch, district president of the United Mine Workers of America (CIO). "The delay in making the contract has caused this whole thing. The operators have not indicated their willingness to cooperate in giving a contract and the men themselves have shown they do not like this dilly-dallying."

Mitch and David Roberts, chairman of the negotiating committee for the soft coal operators, were to meet during the day to discuss the situation.

Mines reported on strike, their ownership and the number of miners affected are: Edgewater, Hamilton and Wylam mines of the Tennessee Coal Iron & Railroad Company, 4,500; Lewisburg, Flat Top mines, Sloss-Sheffield, 1,400 miners Sayreton mine, Republic Steel Corporation, 1,000, and Prago and Samoset, Alabama By-Products Corporation, 1,100. Several small mines at Blossburg and some wagon mines also were on strike.

First mine to go on strike were Edgewater, Hamilton, Sayreton and Flat Top, which stopped work Tuesday, but the strike quickly spread to other areas, with several joining the ranks of the discontented Wednesday morning.

Miners stopped work when their old contract were held in abeyance until 31, but resumed work in May under a temporary contract at the request of President Roosevelt. The temporary contract under which they have operated, provides a base pay of $5.50 a day.

Alabama negotiations for a new contract were held in abeyance until a new contract was signed in the Appalachian area. According to the Appalachian agreement, miners in the Northern and Southern Appalachian areas are receiving a base pay of $7 per day. Alabama miners, are not included in the Appalachian area, but they are demanding that the differential not be widened. They would like a base pay of $5.90 a day.—Birmingham News.

(EDITORIAL)

Several times this week solicitors for program advertising and also solicitors for FREE ADVERTISING SPACE have come to the office of the News. We want all of our friends to understand that we are in full sympathy with anything that the Schools, Churches, Clubs, Societies, etc, do or want to do, and we will give of money and FREE ADVERTISING SPACE so long as the money realized stays at home and goes for the benefit of these public institutions... but, when the larger part of the money goes to a company or concern that exploits these public institutions, then we cannot and will not give our advertising space that these companies or concerns might make a bigger profit when it is taken out of Chilton County.

R. G. LeTourneau To Speak at Clanton Methodist Church on Tuesday Night

America's No. 1 Christian Layman, Mr. Robert G. LeTourneau, will speak at the Clanton Methodist Church on next Tuesday night at 8:00 o'clock. Mr. LeTourneau whose fame is world-wide, has spent many years telling others of what Jesus has done for him and his work, and has traveled thousands of miles by airplane and train to take the message of the Bible to others.

A Word About Mr. LeTourneau
Mr. LeTourneau, who is known to his friends as Bob, is one of the most remarkable men in America today. At the age of fourteen he quit school and went to work in a Portland, Oregon factory.

After four years in factories from Portland to San Francisco he earned his card as master moulder.

In quick succession the years found him moving from the foundry to the garage business. Then to welding. This is where he acquired the belief that led him to fortune.

In his garage days he used an oxy-acetylene torch for repairing broken frames and other parts of autos and trucks. Often he found occasion to build shop fixtures and tools by welding pieces of steel together. He discovered that by this method of construction that he could make designs and simplify work and cut cost. After the war he started in business for himself. Today that business has grown to a $18,000,000 corporation,

Mr. Robert G. LeTourneau of Toccoa, Ga., will speak in the Methodist church at Clanton, Ala. Tuesday, September 9, 1941 at 8 p. m. Daylight Saving Time. Everybody invited to hear this distinguished layman.

Grand Jury Report 1941-42 Program At Isabella Completed

STATE OF ALABAMA, CHILTON COUNTY.

Circuit Court of said County and State.

To the Hon. Arthur Glover, as Judge of said Court:

We, the Grand Jury, empaneled for the July Term, have completed our investigation of all matters that we felt needed our immediate attention and herewith submit the following report:

During our investigation, we have considered 39 cases and have examined 77 witnesses and are returning herewith 30 true bills against 32 defendants.

We have examined the fee book of the Probate Judge and find it neatly kept and correct in so far as we were able to ascertain. We have examined the bonds of the various county officials and find that they are ample for the protection of the public and in our examination of the Sheriff's account with the State for feeding prisoners, we find that it is being kept in accordance with the law. On our examination of the County Superintendent of Education, we find that his books, records, and papers are neatly kept and in so far as we ascertained, were being kept fully in accordance with the law.

The house owned by the County that is now occupied by the Jail is very dilapidated and badly in need of repairs. The meals for the prisoners in the jail are prepared in this building. The Attorney General of the State has ruled in answer to an inquiry from the Chairman of the Court of County Commissioners of Chilton County that the building could not be repaired with County funds for the Jail to live in, although meals for the prisoners in the Jail were prepared in said building. In view of this ruling of the Attorney General and

Churches Change To Standard Time

Beginning next Sunday morning September 7th, the Clanton Methodist and the Clanton Baptist churches will start Sunday School and Church on Standard time instead of daylight saving time as they have for the past several weeks.

It seems that the majority of Church members would rather use Standard time and start Sunday School at 9:45 and Church at 11:00 o'clock. Time for night services will be announced later.

The regular monthly singing at Enterprise schoolhouse will be held next Sunday afternoon. All singers are invited to come and bring your new song books.—Philip Headley, Chrm.

Officers Capture Negro Escapee Tuesday Night

Convict Wrecks Stolen Car; Fires on Bystanders; Dogs Run Fugitive Down

An escaped negro convict, heavily armed, was captured last Tuesday night in the west end of Clanton after he had wrecked two automobiles, fired upon Ralph Porch of Anniston, Jimmie Bell of Clanton, and several bystanders and had forced Porch at the point of a gun to drive him several hundred yards down the road from whence he fled on foot through a cotton field.

The negro driving a 1936 V-8 Ford which he had stolen in Prattville crashed into the rear of the car driven by Porch who was accompanied by Miss Myrtle Pitts of Clanton. The accident occurred about 10:00 at the intersection of the Selma Highway and Second Avenue. The negro when he learned that the law had been summoned drew a gun and fired upon Porch and Bell, who lives nearby and who had been attracted to the scene. Miss Pitts had gone to call help at the time the shot was fired. After firing at the crowd the negro ran from the road into the field of cotton which lies just north of the highway.

City Officer Willis answered the call and upon ascertaining that the negro had escaped into the cotton field, came back to town to see if blood-hounds could not be secured to track the negro.

The negro who had evidently been watching from his place of concealment came out as soon as the crowd dispersed and got in the car with Porch, forcing him at guns point to drive down second avenue for several hundred yards. The presence of a second car which followed closely caused the negro to jump from the car and again run into the cotton patch this time on the south side of the road.

The sheriff's force was immediately notified and an intensive search of the bottom was made by the officers. At midnight the dogs from Spigeborn (Continued to Page 8)

John Williams Hurt In Car Accident

John Williams was seriously injured in an automobile accident that occurred on the Montgomery Highway Sunday night. Mr. Williams who is in Central Alabama Hospital had to have his left arm amputated, so badly was it mashed against the other machine. Last reports were that he was getting along as good as could be expected. Patrolmen Probst and Glass investigated.

from his post as OPM Priorities Director to that of Lend-Lease Administrator and appointed Mr. Nelson as Priorities Director.

AID TO BRITAIN, CHINA, RUSSIA

The President announced a military mission will go to China to study the need of China for equipment and materials and expedite lend-lease aid. State Secretary Hull stated the U. S. will maintain the policy of freedom of the seas in shipping supplies to Russia via the Pacific. The President told his press conference an organized campaign of rumors, distortions, half-truths and falsehood regarding misuses of lend-lease funds had been launched to sabotage the program of aid to opponents of the Axis.

AGRICULTURE

OPM gave priority to deliveries of materials necessary for the production of parts for the repair and maintenance of existing farm equipment and manufacture of new farm equipment. The President vetoed a bill to withhold (Continued on Page 2)

"Buffalo Dust"

Renzo Guy, Lowndes County's perpetual legislator, and statewide popular politician now running for State Commissioner of Agriculture, says a rumor that he contemplates 'getting out of the commissioner race in order to again represent Lowndes in the Legislature is all "Buffalo Dust". Renzo says he is going to be Alabama's next Commissioner of Agriculture.

Contemplating

Melvin Hutson solicitor and insurance man of Morgan County, is, according to newspaper reports, still contemplating getting into the Race for Lieutenant Governor. Handy Ellis, of Shelby and Clarence Izard of Etowah have been running for some time. Handy was recently endorsed for Lieutenant Governor by the Alabama Association of Justices of the Peace.

Gaston Gets A Situation

Galloping Gaston Scott, geologist, political pinsetter extraordinary, and as three-fourths of all Alabamians will attest, all round good fellow, has accepted a position (not a job) with the Federal Government, and will henceforth eat out of Uncle Sam's trough. He has been appointed by the National Planning Commission as director of post-war planning in Alabama. A better selection could not have been made.

Sheriffs Endorse Graves For Governor

When Bibb Graves was endorsed last week by the Alabama Sheriff's Association for another term as Governor, it was made unanimous insofar as the organized political units of the State are concerned.

Already the mayors, councilmen and commissioners—the Alabama League of Municipalities, had endorsed him for another term at their annual meeting; also the Probate Judges and County Commissioners; the Tax Collectors; the Tax Assessors; the Justices of the Peace; the Young Democrats; the Retail Merchants Association; the School Teachers and the Labor Union.

Whoever goes up against the Little Colonel, backed by a political army like that won't know whether he has been caught in a political earthquake or hit by a blitzkrieg.

Atticus Takes Mark For Another Ride

My young, but senile friend, Atticus Mullin, who keeps the "Passing Throng" herded up for "Old Grandpa", is determined that I shall not benefit by the Old Age Pension Fund. The sand Mountain boys say they are going to have set aside for the sixty-five olders and over. Listen to him say because of his inability to enjoy "senile" liveliness and charm as other "senile" boys pitiful it is when one reaches the stage that looking at "senile" means nothing more than a "Ment Star".

MARK NOT SO OLD

Old times do have away. Leave 'em to the past, inside. The boys tell me we have heard about "senile" that "aged" in their youth. So they tell me carefully to some tale of accomplishments in this modern age and then to say "well when I was a boy things were done better than that." Young men talk about current things and sometimes about ladies' stockings, etc.

The other day Mark Tucker, publisher of The Chilton County News was bragging about being 70 years of age. We said then he could not be over 65 and now we know he is not over 60. He has begun to comment upon the kind of stockings women wear and The Collinsville New Era calls him down by asking how he would know anything about leg coverings the ladies favor.

"What we know about ladies' hose would fill a book," answers Mark. "We have been watching the UPS and downs of hose since etc."

Now Mark. If you are 70, aren't you ashamed of yourself talking about the UPS of women's hose? We are a young man, in fact we have just been named an Eagle Scout, and we don't go about talking anent the UPS of ladies' hose. We are glad our Collinsville friend brought you out from under your disguise. You're not seventy.

Editors Talk About Old Age Pensions

OLD PEOPLE'S VOTE

It appears to us that the Old-Age-Eligible-Pensioners are going to have a say so in the next Governors election. There are several thousand of these old people who are eligible for the pension in Alabama and from what we can learn they are mobilizing. In this county, they are holding meetings and will no doubt, have it explained to them that the Federal Government is willing to help if the State will match what they put up. Since this plan was adopted by the Federal Government, Governors and Legislators in Alabama have not seen it advisable or something or another to match so as to pay our old Alabamians the pension. If the Federal Government is willing to help the old, then why can't the State of Alabama do her part. The two candidates for Governor in 1942, namely, Ex-Governor Graves and one time candidate Chauncey Sparks will likely have this old age pension in their platforms. Who makes it the strongest and is sincere will get the old people's vote. —Luvorne Journal.

What is Non-Essential? asks an exchange editorial headline. Well, for one thing the wide spacing between lines in editorial columns, it doesn't mean a thing.

If Sparks' Labor Day speech at Ensley Park was the "opening gun" for the gubernatorial campaign, we wonder what the "final gun" will sound like.

Only eight months until the Democratic Primary—and it won't be long now before the political actors will go on the stage and begin saying their pieces.

Chilton County News believes every person, deep down in their heart, is honest. So if you want to keep up with what is going on about you, just drop us a line telling us to start the paper—You will find the next issue in the mail box.

Farmers Advised Save Edible Soybean Seed

Farmers with edible soybeans on their farms, are being advised to gather enough beans to supply seed for next year's crop as well as to have dry beans to eat throughout the winter months. It has been found that dried soybeans offer definite possibilities for improving diets without increasing the cost.

Analysis show that dried soybeans are higher in proteins, fats, minerals and vitamins than other beans and peas, reports W. C. Sherman, associate nutritionist, Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

Three Essentials For Growing Legumes

Three important essentials for success in winter legumes are early planting, inoculation and phosphate fertilizer.

In order to be ready when planting time comes, J. C. Lowery, agronomist of the Alabama Extension Service, suggests to farmers that they arrange for their seed, inoculation and phosphate fertilizer as soon as possible so the winter legume crop can be planted and at the right time.

"The seed may be secured through the AAA or through arrangements by them with local seedsmen as a soil conservation material or direct from seedsmen or cooperatives operating in the territory," Lowery said. "The phosphate or basic slag may be secured through the AAA as a soil conservation material or direct from dealers. He inoculation may be secured from seedsmen or by other arrangements in the counties."

To Plan Food Program

Alabama will be represented at a Southwide meeting in Memphis, Tenn., September 29 and 30, called for the purpose of making plans to assure the production of sufficient food in 1942 both for the United States and for countries resisting aggression. Representatives of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the Extension Service Planning Committee, the State USDA Defense Board, representatives of farm organizations, and others will participate in the conferences.

Suggestions Given For Destroying Ants

For Alabama home-makers whose homes have been invaded by ants, V. A. Ruffin, extension entomologist, suggests these control measures:

Dispose of all food scraps that might attract ants and keep sugar and other foods of which the pests are fond in ant-proof containers.

Sprinkle the trail of ants with derris or pyrethrum powder, borax or sodium fluoride, or spraying the ants with a good household spray may drive them off if they have been in the house only a short time. If sodium fluoride is used, it should be placed where children and pets cannot get it, because it is very poisonous.

Poisonous arsenate and thallium sulphate baits, in sweetened liquid or jelly, are very effective in controlling the small red ants, but they should be placed carefully and safely. Another type of poisonous bait that has proved effective remains in a container with an opening only large enough for the ant.

To kill ants in their nests, use a pointed stick to punch one or more eight-inch hole down into the nest, and pour a tablespoonful of carbon bisulphide or calcium cyanide into each hole and plug the hole with moist dirt. Carbon bisulphide is highly inflammable, odorless, and poisonous, while calcium cyanide is very poisonous, so both should be used with care because it will burn the skin and its fumes should not be inhaled.

DEFENSE

from the normal channels of trade Government-owned cotton and wheat, because "in times such as these no one can foresee how soon these stocks may be needed."

ARMY

The War Department announced creation of a third parachute battalion and a fifth armored division. The Army also amended its regulations to permit discharge of enlisted men to accept Navy commissions when the Navy so desires.

AIR

Artemus L. Gates of New York, World War flier, was appointed Assistant Secretary of Navy for Aeronautics. Twenty-eight new Army Corps units were formed, including 26 school squadrons of 200 men each. The Army Air Forces began tests of the P-40F, latest of a series "giving excellent performance abroad," and sent Maj. Gen. Brett, Chief of Air, to Africa and the Mediterranean area with a mission to study planes in action and needs of the British.

CIVILIAN DEFENSE

The Army announced it will test the air defense and air warning system of the northeastern U. S. in maneuvers October 9 to 16. Approximately 43,000 volunteer civilians in the system will participate. A preliminary report of the mission sent to England by the Office of Civilian Defense recommended fingerprinting of every citizen for identification of casualties and that necessary civilian defense personnel, including police and firemen, be exempt from military service. OGD Director LaGuardia reported incomplete return on the aluminum collection campaign showed 14,000,000 pounds of scrap, yielding 10,500,000 pounds of aluminum or enough for 2,800 fighting planes, had been collected.

PRICES

Associate Price Administrator Elliott suggested women can help check price rises by writing the Price Administration's consumer division in Washington of unreasonable advances in costs of living; by consulting city and county officials to see whether increases are justified; by buying this winter's coal now; reporting rapid rises in rents to state and local housing agencies; buying defense bonds instead of new cars, refrigerators, washing machines or other household appliances. The Office of Price Administration set ceiling prices on animal hair used in mattresses, rayon grey goods, dummies, voile and combined broadcloth—thus covering almost all textiles required for women's dresses, men's shirts, underwear, coat and suit linings, handkerchiefs, sheeting and other items of cotton and rayon.

CONSERVATION OF MATERIALS

OPM requested bicycle and furniture manufacturers to conserve materials by simplifying models and designs, eliminating brass, chrome, nickel, and copper and metallic finishes, white side-wall tires, and using reclaimed instead of raw rubber. The Division of Consumer Supply asked consumers to take special care of their cars, cut down on consumption of tires, gas and oil and offered a check-list to aid in conservation. WPA inaugurated a program to salvage steel from abandoned publicly-owned street cars. The War Department reported it had found reclaimed and retreaded auto tires gave 80 per cent of the service of new tires and cost 60 per cent less.

DOCTORS, DENTISTS, NURSES

Federal Security Administrator McNutt announced an agency will be set up to mobilize physicians and dentists to meet special demands for medical care arising from the defense program. Plants will take into account distribution of doctors and dentists in relation to population, training and experience and their availability for service. Red Cross Headquarters and the OGD announced plans to train 100,000 volunteers as nurses' aid with the help of local hospitals. Volunteers must be between 18 and 50, graduates of high school, physically able; they will be selected by local public health and nursing groups and serve as assistants to graduate nurses in hospitals without pay after 80 hours of intensive training over a seven-week period.

SELECTIVE SERVICE

Headquarters directed local draft boards to speed arrangements for aiding in the reemployment of soldiers the Army is planning to release beginning September 1 by getting in touch with former employers or finding other jobs for the soldiers. In the first case of its kind, a discharged selectee from New York was returned to his former job after the local U. S. attorney requested his firm to take him back for at least one year, although the firm said his job had been abolished while he was gone.

OIL, GASOLINE

President Roosevelt told his press conference the launching of many oil tankers already on the ways and the operation of two pipelines from the Southwest to the Eastern seaboard will materially relieve the gasoline shortage in the East by next spring. Price Administrator Henderson issued a table of fair maximum retail prices for "regular" gasoline in 40 major cities, and the Senate began an investigation of the shortage. Acting OGD Coordinator Davies said "sabotage and planned" sabotage may lie behind the "multiplicity of misinformation" that there is really no shortage.

NEW PLANTS AND FACILITIES

The Government contracted for the following new plants: pig iron, Cleveland, Youngstown, Warren, Ohio, and Birmingham Ala., $38,312,000; ordnance facilities, Chattanooga, Tenn., and St. Louis, Mo., $35,965,999; airplane and spare parts Buffalo, N. Y., $75,218,384.

UNEMPLOYMENT FROM SHORTAGES

OPM Labor Division began surveys of 20 communities in 10 States in which consumer-goods plants are threatened with curtailment of supplies because of defense needs. Defense contracts will be awarded where necessary to alleviate labor dislocations. The first such contract was awarded to a Manitowoc Wis. company, with 4,000 employees facing shutdown because of aluminum priorities.

WAYS TO KILL WEEVILS IN BEANS, PEAS, FRUITS
Weevils and worms destroying dried beans, peas, and fruits can be controlled by a correct application of heat or carbon disulphate (high life) with no injury to the products.
Place dried fruit or vegetables in a shallow pan and put them in the oven at a temperature of 120 to 140 degrees F. If no oven is available the same results can be obtained by spreading fruit thinly on a metal roofing and placing it in the hot sun for two to four hours.
Beans and peas should be treated for weevils as soon as shelled, says W. A. Rutlin, extension gardener, Auburn. Place seed or any other dried vegetables and fruits in a tight container such as a jar or a five-gallon barrel can, using only one teaspoonful of carbon disulphide per one-gallon of beans. Pour carbon disulphide directly on hard seed, but where fruits and other vegetables are being treated put chemical in shallow pan and place it, along with fruits or vegetables in airtight container for two days. Take vegetables and fruits out of the containers and allow them to air well; then place in tight bags and store in a dry place.

DO NOT CUT SERICEA TOO LATE IN SEASON
Two cuttings for hay a year is usually all that sericea can safely stand, says Mr. James H. Wood, Soil Conservationist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in the North Central Soil Conservation District with headquarters here.
And, Mr. Wood adds, the second cutting should be made sufficiently early in the season to allow the sericea a period of growth in which to store up reserve plant food on which to grow the following spring.
If this food reserve is depleted by mowing late in the season, the stand will often die during the winter or be so weak in the spring it will be crowded out by grass and weeds.
On many farms in Chilton County, small acreages of sericea are being made to supply the hay requirements of the farm by frequent mowings. Thinning stands and slower recovery after mowing are in most cases already evident.
To determine the acreage of sericea needed on a farm, estimate the hay requirements of the farm, and then plant enough to supply this amount in two cuttings a year. If seed are needed an additional area can be planted for this purpose.

Letters To The Editor

Maplesville, Ala.

Dear Mr. Tucker:

My subject is: "Help The Boys." When we see any of the Army boys or the CCC boys or Navy boys by the roadside let's pick them up and take them on their journey home as far as we go. Some of them are several thousand miles from home and are anxious to get home to see their loved ones for a few days. While they are away from home in training to fight for us and try to save our country. We are all back home having a good time, as they were before they were called to protect their country. I have often seen some of the soldier boys by the roadside trying to get a ride after they had spent all of their money and very often I have seen the driver of a car turn his head to keep from seeing their signal for a ride. I do not approve of letting a professional hitch-hiker ride but I do believe that if the drivers of cars would think of the sacrifice these boys are making for our protection seriously they would be glad to stop and let them ride.

Now if anyone out of Chilton County happens to read this request and approves of it then please see the editor of your county paper and get him to print it, until it has gone all over the State of Alabama. By so doing it will be a great help to the boys who are in training to save our country. Now friends just think of it like this: some of the boys are so far from home it would take more than one hundred dollars to pay their way home and back to camp and would only get to stay just a few days with their loved ones and their money all gone. Don't you know that those boys would go back to camp broken hearted to think they had to spend all their money just to go a few days with home-folks, and possibly hundreds of cars had passed them, who by taking thought could have made them happy and comfortable because it would in a way prove to them that we appreciate what they are doing for our country.

MAIN POINTS IN WORK OF DEPT. OF AGRICULTURE

Three main points will be made in the work of the Department of Agriculture to increase the standard of living for the low-income farm family in Chilton County, said Martha Griffin, Home Management Supervisor of the Farm Service Administration.

One is to increase the amount of farm products and the facilities for marketing them. Another is to stress living at home; and the third which is of increasing importance at this time while the Cotton Stamp plan begins operation, is to help farm families make the best selection of goods which they may obtain with their stamps.

BOY SCOUTS OF CHILTON COUNTY

Scouting is the process of making real men out of real boys by a real program that works. It has been said that if you expect to do very much with the average man you must start with him while he is a boy. In scouting, the boy gets a high moral code, the Scout oath and law, and in his life as a scout and his daily Scout activities, he gets a chance to put these ideals into practice.

In Scouting, he has as leaders of men of high character giving these boys guidance in a time when this is so essential. With this leadership the Scout has a chance to be a participating citizen without waiting until he is twenty-one years of age. Scouts take part in many worthwhile community activities as a part of their "Do a Good Turn Daily" slogan. Recently the Boy Scouts of Chilton County participated in two national civic activities with all Scouts of the United States. These were the collection of aluminum and the distribution of the Defense Bond Posters.

In his recent anniversary message to the Boy Scouts of America, President Roosevelt said: "You who are members of the Boy Scouts have a great opportunity in your organization to do your part in this great task. In your Scout Troops you have the opportunity to develop the type of leadership and group cooperation which is so greatly needed in a democracy such as ours. You have opportunities in your Scout Program to develop those physical and mental qualities upon which the survival of a self-governing community depends."

The leaders of the Boy Scouts of Chilton realize their great responsibility and are doing their part in the character development and citizenship training of these boys in their charge. Chilton County has two Troops of Boy Scouts. Troop No. 57 Clanton, Fred Bucklewe, Scoutmaster; Troop No. 60 Thorby, C. B. Bleckensderfer, Scoutmaster. Another Troop will be

MORAL ECHOES

REV. D. D. HASKEW, D. D.

We are told that at one time the devil called his workers together that he might get a report of the work that was done. One emissary said that he saw a group of Christians, crossing a desert and that he seized a wind out of the sky and turned it upon them and that their bones were bleaching in the desert sand. Another one reported that he found a ship load of missionaries out upon the ocean and that he sent a storm upon them and they were drowned. Over these reports the devil did not show signs of animation. His conclusion was that all of them were served. Finally one old demon reported that he had found a diligent old Christian and for years he had worked to destroy his real and that he had just succeeded in putting him to sleep religiously. "That is fine work!" shouted the devil and while the bells of hell were being rung all the imps shouted for joy. The devil wants no better work than to soothe the souls of men to sleep.

In Amsterdam Holland there is a place that is famous for the polishing of diamonds. Rough stones are brought into the place and the workmen get busy on the polishing machines. Day after day the diamond is held by means of a piece of metal, close to a revolving wheel of marble. Fine diamond dust is kept upon the wheel and this dust polishes the diamond. It takes several years to properly polish some diamonds. The finer the stone the longer it takes to polish it. Jesus calls His people, "His jewels." To fit them for a place in His crown, we must be polished like the diamond. Jesus makes use of the troubles of this world to polish us, and to be sure there is a vast deal of grinding before we are polished.

After the funeral of the father the family gathered into the living room to hear the will read. As we sat down every child in the family, were sober and attentive. The oldest brother was not a very good reader, but it was his duty to read to all the family the will of the father. He stumbled over many a word and sentence, but no one criticised. There was close attention for each one wanted to know what there was in the will for him. Do you want to know how you should listen to a sermon? Just like that family listened to the reading of the will that day. The preacher may not be well educated, but he is reading God's will to you and you should be above criticism and listen to see what God has for you in His message. When we top so much criticism and listen to the sermon to see what there is in it for us we will come away from the church much benefited.

While in Florence a traveler purchased a lovely treasure box that had in it a small artificial bird. When this traveler would touch a spring the lid would fly open and the tiny bird, hardly an inch high, would spring up and pour forth a flute-like song that could be heard all over a spacious auditorium. When the song was over the little bird would drop back into its place and the lid would hide it from view. In a religious way there are many people who are like that little bird, they are ready to stand up when there are gazing eyes and sing a song through for show. Sunday their religion comes out on parade, but on Monday the lid drops and their religion is gone until next Sunday. Like the tiny bird, they only have a song when there is an applauding crowd.

The father of Dr. R. R. Moton, who for years was president of the Tuskegee Institute, was the son of an African king. Moton's father was brought to the United States and sold as a slave. One day a visitor was looking at a group of slaves as they shuffled off to work and he saw in the lead a handsome fellow, who held back his shoulders and walked with pride. "Who is that fine looking fellow in the lead?" inquired the visitor.

"Oh, that fellow, why sir he is a son of an African king" replied the man. "And he never forgets that." When a soul is added into the family of God, he becomes a son of the heavenly king. So many of us are down here among the drudgeries of life until we forget that we are the child of a king, and that we are being trained for a throne in the sky. To be sure we must do a lot of drudgery down here, but that should not destroy our spiritual pride for we are the child of a King.

Roosevelt Pledges Ultimate Defeat of Nazism

Labor Day Message Emphasizes Gigantic Task Which Faces Peoples of The Americas

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's Labor Day address:

On this day—this American holiday—the rights of free laboring men and women.

The preservation of these rights is now vitally important not only to us who enjoy them—to the whole future of Christian civilization.

American labor now bears a tremendous responsibility in the winning of this most brutal, most terrible of all wars.

In our factories and shops and arsenals we are building weapons on a scale great in its magnitude. To all the battle fronts of the world these weapons are being dispatched by day and by night, over the seas and through the air. And this nation is now devising and developing new weapons of unprecedented power toward the maintenance of democracy.

Why are we doing this? Why are we determined to devote our entire industrial effort to the prosecution of a war which has not yet actually touched our own shores?

We are not a warlike people. We have never sought glory as a nation of warriors. We are not interested in aggression. We are not interested—as dictators are—in looting. We do not covet one square inch of the territory of any other nation.

Our vast effort, and the unity of purpose which inspires that effort, are due solely to our recognition of the fact that our fundamental rights—including the rights of labor—are threatened by Hitler's violent attempt to rule the world.

These rights were established by our forefathers on the field of battle. They have been defended—at great cost but with great success—on the field of battle, here on our own soil, and in foreign lands, and on all the seas all over the world.

There has never been a moment in our history when Americans were not ready to stand up as free men and fight for their rights.

In times of national emergency, one fact is brought home to us clearly and decisively—the fact that all of our rights are interdependent.

The right of freedom of worship would mean nothing without freedom of speech. And the rights of free labor as we know them today could not survive without the rights of free enterprise.

That is the indestructible bond that is between us—all of us Americans: Interdependence of interests, privileges, opportunities—interdependence of rights.

That is what unites us—men and women of all sections, of all races, of all faiths, of all occupations, of all political beliefs. That is why we have been able to defy and frustrate the enemies who believed they could divide us and conquer us from within.

These enemies all know that we possess a strong navy—gaining in strength. They know that that navy—as long as the navies of the British Empire and the Netherlands and Norway and Russia exist—can together guarantee the freedom of the seas. These enemies know that if those other navies are destroyed, the American navy can not now, or in the future, maintain the freedom of the seas against all the rest of the world.

These enemies know that our army is increasing daily in its all-round strength.

These enemies know that today the chief American fighters in the battles now raging are those engaged in American industry, employers and employees alike.

These enemies know that the course of American production in the past year has shown enormous gains and that the product of these industries is moving to the battle fronts against Hitlerism in increasing volume each day.

But these enemies also know that our American effort is not yet enough—and that unless we step up the total of our production and more greatly safeguard it on its journeys to the battlefields, these enemies will take heart in pushing their attack in old fields and new.

I give solemn warning to those who think that Hitler has been blocked and halted, that they are making a very dangerous assumption. When in any war your enemy seems to be making slower progress, than he did the year before, that is the very moment to strike with redoubled force—to throw more energy into the job of defeating him—to end for all time the menace of world conquest and thereby end all talk or thought of any peace founded on a compromise with evil itself.

And we know that a free labor system is the very foundation of a functioning democracy. We know that one of the first acts of the Axis dictators has been to wipe out all the principles and standards which labor has been able to establish for its own preservation and advancement.

Trade unionism is a forbidden philosophy under these rule or ruin dictatorships. For trade unionism demands full freedom of expression and peaceful assembly. Trade unionism has helped to give every one who toils the position of dignity which is his due.

The present position of labor in the United States as an interdependent unit in the life of the nation has not come about by chance. It has been an evolutionary process of a healthy democracy at work.

Hitler has not worked that way. He will not—he cannot work that way. Just as he denies all rights to individuals, he must deny all rights to groups—of labor, of business, of learning, of the church. He has abolished trade unions as ruthlessly as he has persecuted religion.

No group of American has realized more clearly what Nazi domination of the world means than has organized labor—what it means to their standards, of living, their freedom their lives. No group has a greater stake in the defeat of Nazism, in the preservation of the fundamental freedoms, in the continuance of democracy throughout the world. We have already achieved much; it is imperative that we achieve infinitely more.

The singleness and sacrifice with which we jointly dedicate ourselves to the production of the weapons of freedom will determine in no small part the length of the ordeal through which humanity must pass.

We cannot hesitate, we cannot equivocate in the great task before us. The defense of America's freedom must take precedence over every private aim and over every private interest. We are engaged on a grim and perilous task. Forces of insane violence have been let loose by Hitler upon this earth. We must do our full part in conquering them. For these forces may be unleashed on this nation as we go about our business of protecting the proper interests of our country.

The task of defeating Hitler may be long and arduous. There are a few appeasers and Nazi sympathizers who say it cannot be done. They even ask me to negotiate with Hitler—to pay for crumbs from his victorious table. They do, in fact, ask me to become the modern Benedict Arnold and betray all I hold dear—my devotion to our freedom—to our churches—to our country. This course I have rejected—I reject it again.

Instead, I know that I speak the conscience and determination of the American people when I say that we shall do everything in our power to crush Hitler and his Nazi forces.

American workers and American farmers, American business men and American churchmen—all of us together—have the great responsibility and the great privilege of laboring to build a democratic world on enduring foundations.

May it be said on some future Labor Day by some future president of the United States that we did our work faithfully and well.

PATES CHAPEL

Let us not forget to attend Sunday School each Sunday morning at 10:15 and B. Y. P. U. each Sunday night at 7:00 o'clock. If we love Christian work we will attend Sunday School and its training units.

Of course there may be people who we disagree with, but God did not mean for every one of us to be alike, but we should not disagree enough to keep us from our churches. I am not saying that this is in our community because I do not believe it is.

Our last Sunday lesson causes me to remember an illustration which represented the devil and ways of tripping from Christian work. Under this picture were written The Devil's Fish Pond. In the center of this picture was a large pond and around this pond was many fish hooks baited with different things, of the worldly things. Some of these were dice, cards, quart bottles with liquor printed on it, bad company, picture shows, bad literature and numerous other things and he was sitting comfortably by and laughing with great joy.

That is the way of him today he is sitting comfortably by with hooks baited with many more things today, trying to get some one to bite. You know Jesus said we had to prove our faith. And John said we had to prove our love. And God did not only say that he loved, He proved it. He gave his only son to die on the cruel cross for our sins, so why shouldn't we prove our love for Him enough to go to Sunday School Sunday and B. Y. P. U. If we love our church we will go and help carry on the work. So let's everybody go and go to work.

W. M. U. will be at the church next Saturday evening at 7:00. Everybody come.
